SENATE HEARS TRIBUNE QUOTED ON TARIFF BILL

Senator McCormick Makes Disclaimer.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S editorial criticisms of the pending tariff bill were discussed in the senate today by Senator Walsh [Mont.], Democrat, in a colloquy with Senator Medill McCormick [Ill.], who took occasion to inform the senate that he had no interest in THE TRIBUNE, exercised no influence upon its policy, and had not for more than a decade.

Senator Walsh was criticizing Republicans of the senate for attempts to hasten passage of the McCumber bill when he referred to the fact that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE had been mentioned earlier in the day during a senate debate.

"Because reference has been made," said Senator Walsh, "to that middle west newspaper so highly commended by the senator from Illinois (Mr. McCormick), I desire to call attention to an editorial which appeared in its issue of May 23, 1922, touching the bill now under consideration.

The Payne-Aldrich Law.

"The revolt against the Payne-Aldrich law had its chief center in that most productive region of our country of which the city of Chicago is the center. The people of that locality—and I speak now of the Mississippi valley generally and the region known as the middle west—are generally Republican. They are generally attached to the principle of a protective tariff, but they revolted in that measure, the Payne-Aldrich law, so much that was indefensible from the standpoint of any principle of protection that there was a general revolt against it.

"That revolt was expressed in the senate by the two distinguished senators from the state of Iowa, Dolliver and Cummins, and by the then senator from Kansas, Bristow; by the then senator from Indiana, Beveridge, and others. Although no strong voice from that section has been heard in opposition to the pending bill, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, which reflects the sentiment of the people of that great, productive region, has found much to criticize in it."

Reads Tribune Editorial.

The Montana senator then read the TRIBUNE editorial, "When Tariff Does Not Protect," which especially criticized the rate in the tariff bill on aluminum in favor of the Aluminum Company of America, which controls the industry. Senator Walsh wished to call Senator McCormick's attention particularly to these paragraphs of the TRIBUNE editorial:

"Yet a tariff which the independents consider prohibitive, and which, they say, would allow the monopoly to close their plants and put their workers out of a job, is now on the schedule. And that protection is asked by and for a monopoly which earned more than $10,000,000 net in 1920 on a capitalization of less than $10,000,000.

"If such a tariff arrangement could be made in the aluminum business there is little doubt that similar arrangement exist among others of the thousands of items on the bill. Such a duty does not protect. It exploits. It demands careful investigation of the entire bill."

"But the senator from Illinois," Senator Walsh resumed, "would like to have us hurry this thing through without making any examination whatever of the specific items in the bill. However, the leading paper of his home city seems to commend the efforts of democratic senators upon this side of the chamber in endeavoring to give to the country the facts in reference to those specific items."

"Not My Policy," McCormick Says.

That very newspaper," said Senator McCormick, "urged the ratification of the treaty of Versailles with the league of nations. It is in error at times. The senator will not charge me with having urged the ratification of that treaty with or without reservations."

"There is a sort of common view in this region that the senator directs the policy of that paper," said Senator Walsh.

"If the senator from Montana will take the trouble to inform himself he will learn that the senator from Illinois has no interest in the paper, that he exercises no influence upon its policy, and has not for over a decade," Senator McCormick replied.

"It is a matter of no consequence to the senator from Montana either one way or the other," said Senator Walsh. "It does profess to be the greatest newspaper in the world. It

Oregon, South Dakota, Illinois, Indiana, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, and Iowa. One hundred and seven candidates for congress have been nominated by each of the major parties, and United States senators in Florida, Iowa, Pennsylvania, and Indiana.

Hard Fight in Illinois.

"There is only one instance in all of these districts where a dry congressman or senator has been defeated by a wet candidate, and that is in the Peoria district in Illinois.

"There will be a hard fight made in that district by the dry to defeat the wet Republican candidate and elect the Democratic candidate on a platform of loyalty to the constitution.

"In at least four congressional districts wet congressmen have been replaced by dry candidates in the primaries of the dominant party. In Florida and North Carolina every congressman who has supported national prohibition was renominated.

"The worst body blow the wine and beer champions received was in Pennsylvania. There was a genuine test fight in the Thirty-third congressional district because, under the new redistricting plan, it is now the largest industrial and labor congressional district in the United States.

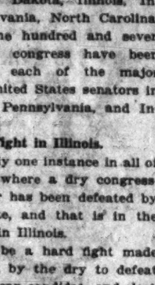
Dry Mr. Kelly Wins.

"The congressman from that district, Mr. Kelly, is a strong prohibition advocate. His chief opponent ran on a beer and wine platform. Two other dry candidates were encouraged by the wets to enter the campaign to divide the dry vote.

"Mr. Kelly was renominated on the Republican ticket by a majority of 11,900, by a vote of three to one on the Democratic ticket, and unanimously on the prohibition party ticket."

DEATH OF TEN YEAR OLD GIRL STILL MYSTERY

Investigation of the circumstances attending an accident in which Mary Andante, 10, 635 South Racine street, was seriously injured Friday night, has so far failed to solve the mystery.



MARY ANDANTE.

Pedestrians found her lying in the street at Vernon Park place and Racine. An automobile and street car had just passed. No one witnessed the accident.

In Columbus General hospital where the little girl was taken, it was said her injuries would probably prove fatal.

STALLED LAUNCH, WOMEN ABOARD, TOWED TO SAFETY

Three men, two women, and three children aboard the forty foot gasoline launch Elsie B. were saved from a possible smash against the breakwater east of the pier yesterday evening by a coastguard crew commanded by Capt. John Anderson.

The motor stalled a half mile beyond the breakwater and left the launch helpless. On board were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burns, owners of the craft; three children, and two men, and a woman whose names were not learned. The launch was towed to the Lincoln park harbor.

A smaller launch manned by John Seabright, assistant keeper of the Carter H. Harrison crib, also "went dead" and was towed to safety. Moorings of half a dozen sail and motor boats at the foot of Randolph and South Water streets were broken by the wind and they had to be towed back to anchorage.

The case of Charles Ivy, 5237 South Ada street, guard at the County jail, charged by Warden Wesley Westbrook with selling liquor to a prisoner, was continued until June 14, yesterday in the Chicago avenue court before Judge William L. Morgan. George Bowlen, former jail prisoner now in Pontiac reformatory, told Warden Westbrook he had bought liquor from Ivy while in the County jail.

HOPE OF LOAN BLASTED; FEAR GERMAN CRISIS

Berlin Sad as Morgan Drops Finance Plan.

BERLIN, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—News from Paris that the bankers' conference had adjourned indefinitely without arriving at concrete conclusions reached Berlin official quarters at time when President Ebert is rusticating in the Black Forest and Chancellor Wirth and Foreign Minister Rathenau are paying a social visit to the government at Stuttgart.

When these social functions are disposed of early next week the cabinet will discuss the situation growing out of the failure of the Paris deliberations to product tangible results in the shape of a foreign loan or credit to Germany.

With government and parliamentary leaders away, a survey of the situation is dependent wholly upon the editorial views which appear to concur in the prediction that the government is about to face a critical period in consequence of the failure of the bankers to unite upon an immediate definite loan policy, upon which Germany based her note of acceptance on May 29.

Sees Further Depreciation of Mark.

The Vossische Zeitung says: "The immediate effects of this postponement on Germany will be to oblige her to continue her monthly installments of 50,000,000 gold on the reparations account, which inevitably will result in passivity so far as the balance sheet is concerned. It will also accomplish further disastrous depreciation of the mark, fresh inflation and disruption of the budgetary equilibrium.

"Germany's acceptance of the reparations commission's demand was made contingent expressly upon foreign credit relief, and it is plain she is in a position only on this basis to keep her pledges."

The Tageblatt announces its belief that the whole scheme for international relief action "foundered on the obstructionist tactics of the French government."

Herr Stinnes' organ, the Allgemeine Zeitung, declares that failure to negotiate an international loan automatically vitiates Germany's acceptance conditions.

MORGAN GOES HOME

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, June 10.—The Morgan committee of bankers adjourned today for an indefinite period, and the hope of putting the German reparations upon a basis which could be considered settled for all time, and then converting the revised reparations into immediate loans has definitely failed for the present. Mr. Morgan left for London this afternoon en route to America.

A long report to the reparations commission by the bankers explains why a great international loan for Germany is impossible now. The salient points follow:

"If France does not deside any inquiry into the more general conditions necessary for the reëstablishment of Germany's external credit, the committee does not feel justified in undertaking such an inquiry."

"The committee considers that a favorable atmosphere is essential to a successful flotation of the loan. It is known that the differences in view among the members of the commission as to the limits of the committee's mandate have for the time being created an atmosphere unfavorable to such an issue."

U. S. Banker's Explanation.

In a personal statement Mr. Morgan said he considered the two essentials to the loan were that the loan should be at the request and for the benefit of the allied nations and that through the technical security to be given by Germany and the rehabilitation of its internal financial situation Germany should show clearly its desire to meet its obligations in the hope that by the fulfillment of these obligations it could reestablish its credits as one of the commercial nations of the world.

Mr. Morgan said the two fundamental conditions for American participation were unanimity among the allies and establishment of the borrower's credit. He then states he was forced to the reluctant conclusion that neither condition could be compiled with and that no loan to Germany of a character necessary in the present situation could be offered to the American investor.

Must Settle Reparations Question.

"I believe that, in so far as such problems depend for their solution upon an international loan to Germany in which the American investor would take no part, a solution is not possible without a general settlement of the reparations question," concluded Mr. Morgan, "and only as a part of such settlement. Undoubtedly settlement of this question involves consideration and arrangement of many other questions which must be settled among the governments in order to arrive at the unanimity required for the first condition of the loan."

Mr. Morgan concurred with the committee in that "they desire to be no less emphatic in stating their conviction that provided the necessary conditions for the revival of Germany's credit can be realized a substantial loan could be successfully floated on all the main markets of the world."

The entire committee expressed its complete willingness to take up the question again at the desire of the reparations commission, but privately they say they will not take the initiative. M. Sergent, the French banker, dissented from a great part of the statement.

Blame Allied Governments.

In a prelude the bankers say.

"Certain members were of the opinion that if the reparations commission or the governments made a more definite statement than at present exists regarding the annual payments which they intend to exact from Germany a loan could be favorably considered. Had they received a unanimous invitation to state what the limitations of these payments were in their opinion, a necessary condition for external credit, these members would have been glad to do so.

"Any figures mentioned would have necessarily represented an opinion, not as to the probable maximum capacity of Germany, but as to sums which the lending public of the world, forming its judgment amid all the perplexities of the present situation, would confidently believe to be well within Germany's capacity."

SLAYS SISTER'S HUSBAND

Philip J. Doyle, who yesterday shot to death John J. Krouch, his brother-in-law, to "protect his sister," he asserts. On Doyle's left is Mrs. Krouch, and on his right Helen Doyle, another sister.

JOHN J. KROUCH.

LOSES LEGS IN ACCIDENT; DIES.

With both legs severed, Martin Gleason, address unknown, was found in the Chicago and Northwestern yards at 40th street and Kedzie avenue yesterday morning. He died shortly after.

TRAGEDY OF STILL

Attracted by a woman's screams, Patrolman William Specht forced a door at 1414 Montrose avenue, and found Philip J. Doyle, a sign painter, with a .45 caliber army automatic pistol in his hand. Mrs. John J. Krouch, his sister, was clinging to his arm, sobbing hysterically. Krouch was lying on the floor with seven bullets in his stomach.

The wounded man, a barber employed at 1437 Montrose avenue, was taken to Montrose hospital, where he died shortly after. On the way he muttered indistinctly about "jealousy."

Doyle offered no resistance to arrest, and was taken with his sister to Town Hall station. There he made a statement, confessing the shooting, and declaring that it was done for the protection of Mrs. Krouch, against whom the barber had made threats to kill.

"He's been drinking heavily for the last few years," Mrs. Krouch said. "He abused me, and I finally got Philip to live with us to protect me."

Police found a small still in the house by means of which Krouch had "made his own." In another part of the dwelling a small keg, believed to contain moonshine, was discovered.

"I never wanted to live there," Doyle asserted. "I only went there after she told me of her life with her husband."

Following testimony by Doyle before a coroner's jury yesterday afternoon that he had slain to protect his sister, a verdict was rendered which recommended that he be held to the grand jury on a charge of murder. Doyle stated that when he heard Krouch threaten to kill his sister he warned him he would shoot unless he ceased molesting her.

INSISTS LENIN RETAINS JOB AS RUSSIA LEADER

Red Envoy at Riga Denies Premier Had Stroke.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., June 10.—(United Press.)—A report current in diplomatic circles here today that word had been received of the death of Premier Lenin of Russia lacked confirmation at the state department. Likewise calls at the embassies here failed to disclose the source of the report.

RIGA, June 10.—Despite his illness Premier Nicolai Lenin still maintains the leadership of the soviet, according to M. Yurener, the Russian representative at Latvia. He states he has received dispatches from Moscow denying reports that M. Lenin is suffering from an apoplectic stroke.

M. Yurener does not know when M. Lenin will be back at his desk in the Kremlin. He said he presumes the premier's health will be in good shape again in a few weeks.

"At present the premier's health is good," he said, "but in considering his general state of health the world must remember that his illness followed two operations.

Weakened by Prison and Exile.

"It is possible that the cruel treatment given him by Cossacks and police, his terms in prison and the years spent in exile under trying conditions all have affected his health, similarly to that of all the old revolutionaries. Topping this, his five years' work as the responsible head of the soviet republic, being constantly threatened by white plots and fears of war, could not help but affect M. Lenin's health.

"He is still full of energy and is not suffering from any illness which might cause a fear of his early death. At present he is over exhausted, his nerves are shattered and he must have absolute rest for some time. However he remains as absolute leader."

Plans to Go Hunting.

At present M. Lenin is living at a sanitarium on the outskirts of Moscow with his family, according to an old friend now in Riga. The friend believes the premier will take a hunting trip shortly.

Chicago A. F. of L. Meeting on Building Trade Disorders

BY THOMAS WREN.

Cincinnati, O., June 10.—[Special.]—The general presidents of the various unions in the American Federation of Labor today decided to meet in Chicago July 20 to begin their effort to settle the building trades situation in that city. This decision was reached at a conference of the executives following the afternoon session of the convention of the building trades department of the federation.

Michael J. Boyle, head of the Chicago Electrical Workers' union No. 134, today served notice upon the floor of the convention to the general presidents of the various unions that when they came into Chicago to attempt to settle the building trades situation they would have full coöperation of the unions now working under the Landis award providing they were not asked to repudiate their agreements.

In other words, Boyle meant that the only way the Chicago labor troubles could be settled was by the general presidents using their power to force the unions now standing out against the Landis award to accept the same.

Realize Effect on Labor.

Edward Ryan of the Architectural Iron Workers' backed up Boyle's stand and insisted that it is imperative that the general presidents get into Chicago at an early date as possible if the situation is to be cleared up.

The discussion of the Chicago situation was brought about by the recommendation of the executive committee that the general presidents of the various building trades unions go to Chicago and make a survey of the situation. Delegates from several cities declared that the eyes of the entire nation were upon Chicago's labor difficulties.

After several hours' debate, the proposal for the readmittance of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America to the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor was voted down unanimously this afternoon by the convention. Action followed the speech of Samuel Gompers in which he urged that the carpenters, ousted at the Denver convention last June for failure to abide by decisions of the national board of jurisdictional awards, be permitted to reaffiliate with the building trades department.

This was the second setback Mr. Gompers received from the Denver convention. Earlier in the day he urged that the building trades department sever their connections with the national board of jurisdictional awards if reports proved true that the American Institute of Architects in convention in Chicago had declared for the open shop, since representatives of this body are members of the jurisdictional board. The convention refused to abide by Mr. Gompers' suggestion and unanimously indorsed the work of the board.

The opposition to the carpenters' readmittance was led by John Hynes, international president of the Sheet Metal Workers' union and also a member of the board of jurisdictional awards. The trouble that led to the carpenters' suspension started about jurisdictional matters between the carpenters and sheet metal workers.

Dishonor Rather Than Disunion.

President Gompers in an address to the Chicago situation, declared that he would rather see the unions now following the Landis award repudiate their agreement than that the division which is now splitting the building trades workers continue.

"I believe in labor keeping its word," said Mr. Gompers, "but rather than see the antagonism and disunity conditions that now prevails in Chicago I would prefer that the unions repudiate their agreements. I will stand from by trips made to Chicago at which I gave the union men my advice, that there are union men who do not speak to each other; that they are not attending meetings or conferring. They must get together; they must unite. There should be no split in their ranks. They should get together and meet daily and advise until this situation is cleared."

CITY'S LEADERS LAUD TRIBUNE BUILDING PLAN

Predict Prize Offer Will Spur Best Talent.

Architects, artists, park commissioners, members of the Chicago plan commission, bankers—men from all walks of life, who are interested in seeing Chicago made a more beautiful place in which to live—united yesterday in commending the projected "most beautiful building in the world," to be erected in front of the present Tribune plant at Austin and Michigan avenues, to house the newspaper for the future.

Public minded citizens especially approved the international range of the contest among architects. The $100,000 to be awarded in prizes for the most satisfactory plans, they believed, will draw forth not only the best ideas in Chicago and in America, but in Europe as well.

How Prizes Will Be Awarded.

Prizes will be awarded to the designer who produces plans combining lasting beauty and business practicality in one. Architects are not required to present drawings specific and meticulous in detail, but only those showing the south and west elevations and a perspective from the southwest.

The competition, which is to be held under the rules of the American Institute of Architects, will open on August, 1, 1922, and close three months later—on Nov. 1. The design accepted will be executed regardless of cost, and competitors themselves may decide in what materials their plans shall be executed.

Views of Chicagoans.

Following are some of the commendatory expressions of leading Chicagoans:

Ex-Gov. Edward F. Dunne, member of the Chicago plan commission—I believe the offer of such a handsome reward will tempt not only the best architects in America, but many of Europe to submit plans and designs. The result will be that THE TRIBUNE will have a building of which it and the whole city may be proud. I am heartily in favor of the plan, as it offers encouragement to young architects.

Charles L. Hutchinson, former South Park commissioner—I wish to commend THE TRIBUNE for both its recent competitions: there is nothing finer than such competitions to bring out the best there is in art—to stimulate effort and ambition. When your newspaper recently made its offer in connection with the murals for the walls in the editorial rooms, every one interested in art was delighted. Now comes this new competition, which is finer still. You are doing a great public service; something which will be a source of lasting pride to the city.

Glenn C. Sheffer, president of the Palette and Chisel club—Following as it does, the recent awarding of plans for mural decorations, I think that THE TRIBUNE should be congratulated for the public spirit it shows in this latest announcement. THE TRIBUNE is leading the way toward the achievement of the city beautiful idea. Such a contest as this is the best plan known for stimulation of ideas, and if more prizes were offered it would have a wholesome effect on art the country over.

Ralph Clarkson, president of the Cliff Dwellers—It is tremendous to me. I only hope that it will result in the selection of something original and entirely American in design. THE TRIBUNE has taken a long step in the right direction, and I sincerely hope that it will succeed in locating "the most beautiful building in the world" in Michigan avenue.

David R. Forgan, president of the National City bank—I think it will be a wonderful contribution to the boulevard link bridge, and will have an inestimable effect on the whole city as well. Candidly, I fear that in attempting "the most beautiful building in the whole world," THE TRIBUNE is setting a high mark, considering examples of architecture in Europe. But the opportunity to erect a wonderful building on the proposal site, where it can be seen for miles, makes the mark set worth striving for.

Edward J. Brundage, attorney general of Illinois—THE TRIBUNE'S diamond jubilee announcement will give great impetus to the development of upper Michigan avenue and spur to greater effort local artists and architects who are striving to make Chicago the art center of the world. THE TRIBUNE should be commended for its ideals, and congratulated for its contribution to the city beautiful. Often younger architects are not able to compete with the older, because of the high cost of drawing up plans. I understand, however, that in this competition exterior sketches are all that are required. This should give the young man a fair chance.

Andrew Rebori, architect—I deem the offer one of the greatest architectural opportunities ever presented. The fact that it is international in its scope will work to good advantage. We need foreign ideas to prevent us from getting in a rut. American architects have opportunities to exercise their art that those across the sea haven't had of late years.

Albert Mohr, a member of the South park board of commissioners—I heartily favor anything that will enhance the beauty of Chicago as will the proposed TRIBUNE building. The prizes offered will, of course, prove an impetus to architects throughout the nation. Great things should result from it.

George E. Brennan, Democratic leader—I think THE TRIBUNE'S idea of offering a handsome prize for designs for their new building is a wonderful one. The trouble with most persons planning the construction of a building is that they think first of their pocketbook and last of beauty. THE TRIBUNE'S offer of $100,000 in prizes shows that its publishers intend to have a beautiful structure, regardless of cost.

A prize of $50,000 will be awarded for the design selected by the jury of award; $20,000 will be awarded for the second, and $10,000 for the third selections. Ten prizes of $2,000 each will be awarded to ten architects especially invited to enter the project.

Awning Blaze High in Air Attracts Crowds in Loop

Flames and smoke from a burning awning outside a window of the Nucoa Butter company offices on the eighth floor of the American Bond and Mortgage building, 127 North Dearborn street, attracted a crowd of loop pedestrians yesterday afternoon. Firemen extinguished the blaze with chemicals. An audience in the Cort theater, across the street, was unaware of the fire, although an alarm was turned in from the signal box in front of the theater. The fire was started, presumably, from a cigaret stub thrown out of one of the windows.

Bringing a four days' celebration to a close, several thousand alumni of the University of Chicago yesterday held their annual parade and banquet. The celebration marked the thirty-first anniversary of the institution and the fifteenth anniversary of Harry Pratt Judson's presidency. The pictures show scenes which attended yesterday's jollification. Twenty classes were represented in the procession. Following the parade and pageant the alumni saw a baseball game. Band concerts, reunions, and an open-air dance completed the festivities last night.

BUENOS AIRES, June 10.—Unconfirmed reports from Asuncion, Paraguay, indicate a complete victory for the government troops in attacks by the revolutionary forces which began operations against the government last week.

MIDWEST LASHED BY STORMS; TWO ARE BADLY HURT

Wind, rain and hail storms lashing the middle west yesterday caused serious injuries to two persons and thousands of dollars' worth of damage to crops, trees and telephone wires. The storms worked the greatest havoc in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Nebraska.

Gustave Sturm of Vandyne, Wis., and his wife were badly hurt and their three children cut and scratched when a tornado rolled their cottage over four times and left it standing upright rods away from the foundations. Fond du Lac, in the path of the wind and rain, had 500 telephones out of commission. Homes were unroofed.

Hundreds of windows in Eau Claire were broqen by hail. The roof was blown from the grand stand at the state fair grounds in Chippewa Falls. Two inches of hail covered the ground at Cumberland. Crop losses were reported from Oshkosh and Berlin.

Hail and high winds ripped through Ainsworth, O'Neill and Creighton, Neb., killing cattle, destroying crops, and wrecking buildings. Central Minnesota was struck by a terrific storm.

INVASION ENDED, LLOYD GEORGE TELLS IRELAND

British Will Not Attack if Raiders Desist.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

(Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, June 10.—Prime Minister Lloyd George assured Arthur Griffith today that there would be no further military operations along the Ulster border unless the Republican invaders reattacked or attempted to reinvade Ulster territory.

Having driven the outlaw bands beyond the frontier, the British regulars will reinforce the loyalist forces holding the line until the opposing forces there are withdrawn or break up, he explained. A warning was given that raids across the border may be necessary if the guerrilla warfare continues and the British forces in Ulster are sniped, harassed or molested.

The British, however, have no intentions now of aggressively carrying on military operations beyond the frontier.

Still Haggle on Constitution.

Further haggling about the revised Free State constitution continued this afternoon, when Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Griffith discussed further amendments to the instrument to make it comply with the British government's ideas, and to make it conform with the principles of the Irish treaty.

Further points are being taken up with Michael Collins in Dublin in preparation for a meeting to be attended by Mr. Griffith and Winston Churchill, the British colonial minister, on Monday.

Mr. Lloyd George hopes to agree with the Free Staters on a complete new draft of the constitution by Friday, the date of the Irish elections. Then, if Mr. Collins holds the situation in hand, an agreement will be reached, which Eamon de Valera will be forced to accept.

"Kill or Capture Enemy."

BELFAST, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—A circular issued to the officers of the Ulster special constabulary today, in dealing with the possibility of open hostilities, says:

"The main duty of the constabulary is to kill or capture the enemy. It is only by finally overcoming or evicting him from the six counties that peace can be restored."

Sinn Feiners early today attacked a house in which a detachment of special constabulary was quartered. A bomb was hurled through a skylight, but injured no one. This was followed by rapid revolver fire. There were several incendiary fires in the city today.

Shoot Up Houses.

DUBLIN, June 10.—The houses at Athenry, County Galway, of disbanded members of the Royal Irish constabulary, who had ignored warnings to leave town, were attacked last night with rifles and machine guns, says a dispatch from a correspondent at Tuam today. The constables took the forceful hint and are leaving, it was added.

UNION LABOR IN MILITIA IS GIVEN O. K. BY GOMPERS

Sees National Guard Instead of Army.

Des Moines, Ia., June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Organized labor stands for the national guard and sees in it, as opposed to the large standing armies of European nations, a symbol of liberty as opposed to tyranny, according to a statement received here by Adj. Gen. Louis G. Lasher from Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Adj. Gen. Lasher says he believes Mr. Gompers' statement will permanently dissolve the misunderstanding which, he says, has existed in the past as to labor unions and the guard.

Tells of Misunderstanding.

On May 11 Adj. Gen. Lasher submitted to the militia bureau of war department a specific instance of this misunderstanding. On the basis of the case submitted from the Iowa guard, the chief of the military bureau required from President Gompers information as to the policy of the American Federation of Labor on the question of enlisted of union men in the guard. President Gompers replied as follows:

"A man who is a wage earner and honorable, working at his trade or calling to support himself and this dependent upon him, has not only the right to become a citizen soldier, but that right must be unquestioned.

Takes Place of Standing Army.

"The militia, i. e., the citizens soldiers of the several states in our country, supplies what otherwise might take its place, a large standing army.

"The difference between the citizen soldier of the United States and the large standing armies of many European countries is the difference between the conception of liberty and tyranny.

"While organized labor stands against the arbitrament of international disputes by force of arms, yet we must realize we have not yet reached the millenium; that in the age in which we live we have not the choice between armed force and disarmament, but the alternative between a large standing army and a small one supplemented by volunteer citizen soldiery—the militia of our several states."

CHICAGO PRIEST, IN IRELAND, SAYS ACCEPT TREATY

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The steamship President Garfield, with an Irish tricolor at its masthead, arrived at Queenstown today on its maiden trip. It brought a party of Chicago Irish-Americans, the organizer of which was Father Michael O'Sullivan, pastor of St. Bridget's church of Chicago.

"All thinking Americans unhesitatingly affirm that the Anglo-Irish treaty should be worked for Ireland's benefit, in the hope that it will prove to be a step to better things," Father O'Sullivan said. "It is the rabble and the irresponsible who suggest otherwise. They are of little or no account just now on this vital matter to Ireland. Such people will get no money in America to propagate their ideas.

"Most of those who have given financial aid in America, myself included, will not give another dollar if the giving of it leads in any way to divergence of opinion."

Masked Robbers Hold Up Furniture Store Patrons

Four masked robbers last night walked into the furniture store of Louis Balch, 4140 West Madison street, took $540 from Balch, a $400 diamond stud from W. B. Morrison, 4144-49 West End avenue, and a $150 diamond ring from Lee Engle, 4120 West Washington boulevard. The thieves escaped.

QUESSE TO FACE CHARGE OF JUROR BRIBING MONDAY

Crowe to Press All Crime Cases on Calendar.

Rejoicing over their victory in the conviction of William Quesse, head of the Flat Janitors' union, and his nine aids, State's Attorney Crowe and his staff prepared for further assaults in the drive against crime, and yesterday announced that Quesse would be brought to trial again tomorrow or Tuesday on charges of bribing Theodore Lodin, juror in Quesse's first trial.

"We shall try every indictment pending on the Criminal court call. Not a man is going to get away," said Mr. Crowe. "As I have said before, I'm going to send them to the penitentiary or the poor house. Mr. Raber and Mr. Stewart, who prosecuted the Quesse case, are to be congratulated on their victory, yet the verdict of the jury was just what I expected. No honest jury could have done otherwise than vote for conviction.

"It shall be our business to see that all juries selected in these labor trials are free from men who have been tampered with, as veniremen in other trials have been influenced. If there is any proof of perjury or jury bribing, the guilty party will be indicted and prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Continuances Pleas Denied.

"Attorneys in certain labor cases now pending have come to me asking for continuances. In every case I have refused. To continue one of these labor cases is to defeat the purpose which we have set out to accomplish. All our efforts to clean up the crime situation in Chicago, assignment of extra judges to the Criminal court, acquisition of needed special prosecutors, will have gone in vain if we do not push these trials to completion by every means within our power."

Attorneys for Quesse and his nine aids are making every effort to stave off the penitentiary sentences of from one to five years by which their clients are faced. Immediately after the verdict they filed a motion for a new trial, which will be heard by Judge John R. Swanson, before whom the trial took place, on June 27.

"If our motion for a new trial is overruled," said Attorney Everett Jennings and Joseph Harrington, for the defense, "we shall carry the case to the Supreme court."

"We shall be ready for them," said State's Attorney Crowe, "and will carry the fight to them through every court to which they appeal."

Shea Seeks Release on Bail.

With the trial of "Big Tim" Murphy, Fred Mader, and Cornelius ["Con"] Shea, indicted for the murder of Policeman Terernce Lyons, scheduled to start June 12th before Judge Thomas Taylor Jr., attorneys for Shea and Daniel McCarthy and Mrs. Margaret Miller, also named in the murder charge, yesterday filed a petition before Judge Taylor asking that their clients be released on bail.

A transcript of the evidence presented before Judge Harry B. Miller, at the time Murphy and Mader, were granted bail, was subitted with the petion. Judge Taylor said he would render a decision tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Mader yesterday intimated that he was not yet ready to relinquish the presidency of the Building Trades' council, and said that he had nothing to do with the alleged candidacy of George J. Jones, head of the Roofers' union, to succeed him.

Woman Who Slew to Save Honor Ordered Acquitted

Detroit, Mich., June 10.—Declaring "a woman's honor is more valuable than a man's life," Judge Harry B. Keldan today directed a verdict of acquittal in the case of Mrs. Bessie Gutos, 19, accused of assault with intent to kill. Mrs. Gutos testified she shot and wounded George Vlahos after he made improper advances and threatened to kill her infant son.

KING OF NORWAY WORKS HAND IN HAND WITH REDS

CHRISTIANIA, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The king of Norway as chief executive, the cabinet, and the Radical party of Premier Blehr are today all closely allied politically with and supported by the Communist party, a group generally credited with taking orders from the Third Internationale at Moscow. The Russian organization is pledged to obtaining the dictatorship of the proletariat by revolution against existing forms of government.

It is doubtful if the Communists are spporting the cabinet for nothing. They are believed to have made their terms, and as a result certain elements here expect to see further legislation along communistic lines. Already Norway has adopted a commercial treaty with the Russian bolsheviki and granted them diplomatic rights. The bolsheviki have established headquarters in Christiania and the Red flag flies from the top of their building.

State Entering Industries.

The government today is taking an active part in vorious trades and industries which formely were privately owned. The tendency is to "socialize" everything. The burden of taxation is becoming heavier and heavier, and the end is not yet.

The latest laws, tax incomes, and deposits of foreigners in Norway, and Norwegians living abroad, to the extent of 75 per cent. A foreigner with investment in a Norwegian industry will receive only 25 per cent of profits due him. The government takes the rest. As a result it is expected that foreign capital will withdraw from Norway.

The Communist party—it was until recently known as the socialist party—is said to have accepted bolshevik doctrines, and is believed in certain quarters to be working for the overthrow of the present government of Norway and the establishment of a dictatorship on the Russian model. Its leaders have constant and close relations with Moscow.

Hold Thirty Seats in Parliament.

The Communists last fall secured thirty seats in the Storthing, or national parliament. The Storthing has 150 mmebers, and no party has control. The strongest faction, the conservatives, have sixty-three seats, and the radical party of Premier Blehr fifty-one seats. Next come the Communists.

The recent efforts to secure national prohibition in Norway aroused opposition in Spain and Portugal, producers of wine, who, in retaliation, refused to buy Norwegian fish. This partly ruined one of the principal industries in Norway, and resulted in financial stringency, with consequent unrest. In the political juggling that followed the fight over prohibition Premier Blehr made the present combination with the Communists.

SIX SLAYERS LOSE CASE.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 10.—The Supreme court today refused to grant a writ of mandamus to compel Judge Robert M. Hills of Amite, La., to entertain a motion for a new trial for the six men who were recently convicted on a charge of murder in his court and sentenced to be hanged.

JAPS PARADE TO PROTEST ON KATO AS NEW PREMIER

TOKIO, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Popular feeling is running so high over the recommendation of the Genro that Admiral Baron Kato, regarded by many of the people as a reactionary, be asked to form a cabinet to succeed that of Viscount Takahashi that the admiral's residence is being closely guarded.

Constitutionalists, supported by a majority of the vernacular papers, are carrying on a vigorous campaign against the formation of a bureaucratic or nonparty cabinet such as they declare, Kato's would be. Parades, formed in protest against the Kato for premier movement, visited the residences of the admiral and of the members of the Genro.

In the meantime Kato, who headed Japan's delegation at the Washington conference, is sounding out his friends on the situation and is reported to have made up his mind to refuse the premiership unless he can obtain the strongest possible cabinet.

ROBERTSON WILL BUILD MACHINE, TEACHERS FEAR

Slam Him as Mayor's School Choice.

Mayor Thompson's effort to bring harmony out of the chaos resulting from his attempt to reorganize the board of education faced another obstacle yesterday as the Chicago Teachers' federation and the Woman's City club lined up against Dr. John Dill Robertson, reported the mayor's choice for president of a new board.

This opposition developed on the basis of disclosures indicating Dr. Robertson four months ago sought $30,000 and a fortune in copyrights from the board for editing a set of school books on health and hygiene.

City Club Joins.

That the situation is not clearing was further evidenced by the fact that the trio of board members who refused to yield to Thompson's demand for their resignations was joined by a fourth trustee, Dr. Sadie Bay Adair, who withdrew her resignation Friday.

About the time Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, president of the Woman's City club, was arraigning Dr. Robertson in an interview, the Chicago Teachers' federation, meeting in the Masonic temple, adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, The rumor is current that the name of Dr. John Dill Robertson, president of the Pageant of Progress, has been mentioned for appointment on the board of education, and for president of the board;

"Resolved, That the Chicago Teachers' federation considers the appointment of Dr. Robertson inimical to the best interests of the public schools and the children of Chicago, because we believe that Dr. John Dill Robertson as president of the Pageant of Progress and president of the Chicago board of education would use the schools to build up a political machine which would make any previous political machine look like a children's merry-go-round beside a steam roller."

Dr. Adair, in exercising woman's prerogative, has started a little controversy all by herself. At the city hall it was said she would not be permitted to "change her mind;" that a resignation once in the mayor's hands cannot be withdrawn without his consent.

Three Others Stand Pat.

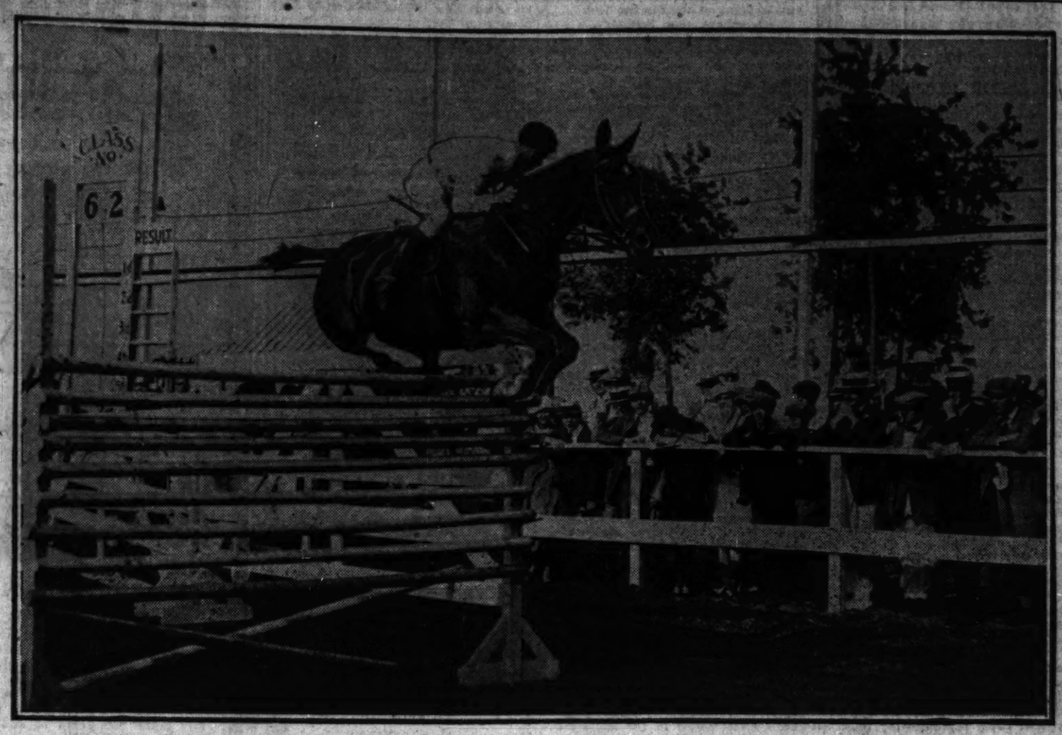
Trustees Hart Hanson, Francis E. Crunkin, and J. Lewis Coath were standing pat yesterday in their refusal to bow to the mayor's will in the matter of resignations.

This leaves but four board members—Edwin S. Davis, president; Albert H. Severinghaus, vice president, Mrs. Paulina Struwing, and Dr. B. Klarkowski—ready to step down. Mrs. Francis E. Thornton handed in her resignation, but her term had expired April 30; so her action was merely a matter of form.

Dr. Robertson last night denied that he had sought $30,000 and copyrights from the board of education. He said he had agreed to serve on a committee and Mortenson was appointing to prepare a book on health and hygiene, but that he had had no thought of charging for this service.

This is in seeming contradiction of Supt. Mortenson, who said that "the amount asked was deemed too great and the negotiations lapsed."

GREAT HEART AND GREAT LEGS



Splendid picture of Great Heart, Frances S. Peabody entry, winning high jump yesterday in the South Shore Country club's horse show. Joe Garragan was up. Great Heart's performance thrilled the big crowd more than any other point in the show. Note the averted face of one society girl at the fence. A minute later her fear was justified, for Great Heart, in a try for the record, tossed his rider into the blue and scattered bars right and left.

CROWD AT HORSE SHOW THRILLED BY HIGH JUMPER

Great Heart Fails in Record Try.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Around the South Shore Country club oval a breathless crowd was packed solid from the top grand stand seat to the show ring rail as Great Heart cleared the bar at 7 feet 6 inches, winning the high jump championship that gave a thrilling climax at the close of the four day horse show yesterday afternoon. Hughie dropped out at 6 feet 6 inches. Both horses are owned by Mayslake Farms.

The greatest thrill of the show came when Great Heart, after defeating his opponent, was given a chance to exceed the world's record, 8 feet and ½ inch. The bar was set at 8 feet 1½ inches. Great Heart's bold attempt resulted in his rider, Joe Garragan, being thrown several feet in the air, throwing rails in every direction.

Lehmann Stable Scores.

Landsdowne of the O. W. Lehmann stable won the championship in the hunter and jumper class, and reserve championship went to Bonton, owned by Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody. The Morris-Dee championship trophy must be won twice by the same owner.

Sinbad, owned by F. W. Mathiessen, Trimpo, Cal., sailed into port with the championship in the five gaited class. Admiral King, owned by W. L. Lewis, Tulsa, Okla., was declared reserve champion.

The three gaited saddle horse championship went to Bohemian Actress, an animal that attracted much interest throughout the show. She is owned by John P. Crozer of Upland, Pa. O. W. Lehmann's Flying Eagle won the reserve championship. The Peabody-Dering challenge trophy goes to the three gaited saddle horse that wins the championship twice.

Field Marshal Wins.

Early predictions of Field Marshal's victories at this year's South Shore Country club show became fact yesterday afternoon when he capped yesterday's climax by winning the single harness championship. He is owned by O. W. Lehmann. Animation, from the Long View Farms, Kansas City, was awarded reserve championship.

L. L. Lewis added another laurel to his list of winnings when he won the single roadster championship with Vernon Holt. St. Mesrob won the reserve championship in this class.

In spite of being thrown from her horse twice, Miss Josephine Hopkins, daughter of James S. Hopkins, won a ribbon in the amateur three gaited saddle horse class. Miss Hopkins was struck in the head by her mount's foot but the injury was not serious.

In the class for the three best three gaited saddle horses, the regular judge, Harry McNair, was assisted by Sir Charles Higham, member of the British parliament from London.

Winners of other afternoon events are: Thoroughbred hunter and jumper—First, Sadducee, O. W. Lehmann, owner; second, Arcady Farms' Burgoright. Roadster run about class with appointments — First, Bogohama, owned by Lehmann; second, Lovely Lady, William E. Dee, owner. Saddle horse three gaited, not over 15.2—First, Sonnya, owned by E. J. Lehmann; second, Spider, owned by L. Monte Stein and ridden by C. Groverman Ellis. Hackney pony—First, Queenie Horace of Cedar Crest Farm; second, Hawthorn Victory, from the same farm. Cedar Crest Farm also won first in the hackney pony class shown as pairs and singles.

In the five gaited saddle horse class ridden by women, Elmay won. Elmay recently sold to Elias Mayer, Chicago, was trained by Miss Marion Jones, Warrensburg. Miss Jones rode her yesterday. Mrs. W. L. Lewis won second in this class with Lady in Gray.

Fairy King, a big winner throughout the show, captured the hackney pony championship. He is owned by F. H. Dent. Cedar Crest Farm won the reserve championship with Queenie Horace.

BRITISH MINERS SEEK TO PROFIT BY U. S. STRIKE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 10.—There is grave unrest throughout the coal fields, causing apprehension that the miners may overthrow the present working agreement in order to take advantage of the strike in the United States.

The profit sharing pact expires in November if notice is given in September and the executive committee of the miners' federation of Great Britain in their meeting in London is now arranging the agenda for the conference in Blackpool in July, when a determined effort will be made by certain factions to disregard the agreement.

The South Wales, Lancashire and Scottish districts informed the national executives that "they can no longer hold out or hope to keep the men in hand and something must be done to ensure mine workers a living wage" or the agreement will be summarily abrogated.

2 CHILDREN AND MAN DEAD FROM AUTO ACCIDENTS

Two children were killed and one man died yesterday as the result of automobile accidents on Chicago streets.

Joseph Mrocek, 3, 5014 South Racine avenue, was struck by an automobile as he was crossing West 50th street and Racine avenue. The driver, Joseph Bianski, 845 North California avenue, was held.

Patrick Ruffalo, 6, 1239 South Wabash avenue, was instantly killed at 1240 South Michigan boulevard when hit by a machine driven by John Haley, 2035 West 20th street. Haley was held.

Antone Subacis, 37 years old, 12015 Union avenue, a motorcyclist, died as the result of injuries sustained when his machine was struck by a car driven by John Brown, 57 West 116th street.

Thomas Mathews, 2046 Warren avenue, a contractor, was fatally injured late yesterday when he was struck by an automobile driven by Willard Wigman, 4751 West Monroe street. The accident happened on Washington boulevard, between Campbell street and Western avenue.

LA FOLLETTE, 67, FIT FOR BATTLE IN WISCONSIN

Forty Years in Ring, He Loves a Fight; Has It.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Madison, Wis., June 10.—[Special.]—At the age of 67, but in restored health and vigor and more militant than ever in championing the political philosophy for which he stands, Senator Robert M. La Follette is entering upon the greatest battle of his career.

He is seeking not only his own renomination for a fourth term in the senate but the renomination of his disciple, Gov. J. J. Blaine, and the nomination of a multitude of candidates for state offices, congress, and the legislature put forward by the La Follette organization.

With Senator Lenroot as the brains of their organization, the anti-La Follette forces are preparing for a desperate conflict with Fighting Bob. While atttacking La Follette on his war record and his radicalism, they have named a bone dry ticket, with the evident intention of appealing strongly to the drys, particularly the women, to turn out and slaughter the senator, who, though he voted to submit the prohibition amendment to the states, is opposed to prohibition in principle and voted against the Volstead act.

Looks for Good, Wholesome Fight.

The senator is thirsting for the battle. It happens that he feels confident of whipping his opposition, but it wouldn't make any difference if he didn't. He loves a fight, has been fighting political battles for forty years or more, and believes fighting keeps the party healthy. If he were to be handed a nomination or election on a platter, he would begin to fear he was losing his mind.

The whole La Follette family is in the scrap this time. The sons of the senator have grown to manhood and begun to manifest the same sort of capacity for leadership their father possesses. Robert Jr. has opened progressive Republican headquarters here and is preparing to manage the senator's campaign. Philip, who hung out his shingle here after coming out of the army, is already on the stump whaling away at the trusts and monopolies in a manner which is said to show signs of an improvement on father.

Wife Battles with Him.

Mrs. La Follette, a gifted, college bred woman who has spent her married life battling at her husband's side for their political ideals, is going to pay particular attention in the written and spoken word to the women in this campaign.

Incidentally this is the way Mrs. La Follette sums up their public career: Twenty-three years of political strife; three terms as governor, now the third term in the United States senate; always battling for certain ideals and convictions, so often standing alone; and the awful world war a part of the long struggle.

The old warrior himself, feeling fit again after a long illness culminating in a serious operation two years ago, is going to take the stump on a tour of sixty or more counties and emulate such past performances as those of 1904 when he spoke eight and one-half hours a day for sixty-five days, and of 1918 when he made five speeches a day for thirty-five days.

Bones He's Picking and Has Picked.

La Follette never was more active in the senate than he has been in the last year or two. At the present time he has two senate investigations in progress—one into the leasing of the navy oil reserves by the Harding administration to influential oil interests, and the other into the rise in price in gasoline.

He led the fight defeating the $300,000,000 proposed exemption of foreign trade corporations in the 1921 tax bill and he halted the move of the Harding administration for legislation to pay $500,000,000 of the government's debt to the railroads before the railroads has paid what they owe the government on account of wartime government operation.

Disloyalty during the war is one of the principal accusations hurled at the senator by the citizens' Republican state conference in the platform it formulated for the anti-La Follette campaign.

His Answer to War Disloyalty.

When you ask him about that charge that iron gray mane begins to bristle, his eyes narrow to slits, he hitches his chair closer, shakes a fore finger under your nose and rips out this:

"Who was disloyal? La Follette? No, my friend. Do you know that La Follette has favored every bill to better the condition of our soldiers and sailors since he has been in the senate? Do you know that La Follette secured an appropriation of $2,000,000 for the benefit of soldiers and their dependents during the Mexican troubles? Do you know that La Follette voted to increase the pay of our soldiers sent abroad in the world war? Do you know that La Follette favored every appropriation bill to maintain and support our army and navy in the world war? Do you know that while he opposed the draft law in principle La Follette immediately upon its passage advocated full obedience to the law? Do you know La Follette fought the hardest fight of his life to make war profits bear a reasonable proportion of war taxes and to relieve the poor from the high cost of living? Do you know it was largely through his efforts that taxes on the poor man's breakfast table—on tea, coffee, cocoa, and sugar—were defeated? Do you know the war profits of the steel corporation, of the leather trust, of the packing combine and the munition manufacturers? No. You tell me who was disloyal."

What He Said in the Senate.

La Follette opposed the declaration of war, the draft act and the espionage law, inveighed against the censorship and arbitrary arrests but held that a law once made must be obeyed until repealed. He said in the senate during the war:

"There is and, of course, can be no real difference of opinion concerning the duty of the citizen to discharge to the last limit whatever obligation the war lays upon him.

"Our young men are being taken by the hundreds of thousands for the purpose of waging war on the continent of Europe, possibly Asia or Africa, or anywhere else they may be ordered. Nothing must be left undone for their protection. They must have the best army, ammunition and equipment that money can buy. They must have the best training and the best officers which this great country can produce. The dependents and relatives they leave at home must be provided for, not meagerly, but generously, so far as money can provide for them."

Soldiers Divided About Him.

La Follette is supporting the bonus bill, but the soldiers appear to be divided on the question of supporting La Follette. The Wisconsin Loyalty league of ex-service men, Martin R. Paulsen, chairman, and E. W. Chapleau, secretary, has issued a pamphlet entitled, "Lest We Forget," as a "Protest Against the Conduct of Senator Robert M. La Follette during the war." Quoting the resolutions of censure by the Wisconsin legislature and other bodies, the booklet says:

"We believe that Senator La Follette's utterances during the war were not only a slander upon every soldier that wore his country's uniform but also upon every citizen of this state who so nobly sacrificed for those soldiers."

"We believe that the publication in Germany of Senator La Follette's war speeches was largely responsible for the impression, which was prevalent in that country, that America was divided against itself and would not be able to place an army in the field."

"We believe that Senator La Follette's war utterances had the effect of encouraging our then enemy and also had the effect of discouraging many of our own people."

"We believe that the attitude of Senator La Follette tended to prolong the war and increase the cost to this country in both men and money."

That St. Paul Speech.

The league rakes La Follette for his St. Paul speech, which caused the Minnesota Council of National Defense to demand his expulsion from the senate. He was quoted in that speech by the Associated Press as stating, "we had no grievance against Germany." La Follette established that the word "no" had been interpolated and the Associated Press issued a retraction. In December, 1918, the senate adopted a resolution that no cause for the expulsion of La Follette had been found and a few months later congress, at the instance of the senate, appropriated $5,000 to reimburse the senator for his expense in defending himself against the attack.

In the La Follette camp one hears it charged that the opposition to the senator and his slate of candidates is being inspired and financed chiefly by corporations and individuals who have been hard hit by Gov. Blaine's campaign against tax dodgers. About $1,000,000 of evaded state income taxes have been collected up to date and under an amendment of the law permitting the investigation to be carried back six years, Gov. Blaine says he will collect $30,000,000 or more of evaded taxes. The audit of the books of the corporations and other big tax payers is now in progress.

As to Publicity of Tax Records.

Gov. Blaine failed to induce the legislature to remove the provision of secrecy of income tax returns. Senator La Follette failed in the same move in the senate. Here is the senator's contention.

"The amount of taxes assessed and paid on farms and homes is a matter of public record. It is open to inspection. The publicity of the record protects against favoritism or fraud and insures equality in taxation as to this class of property."

"Why should there be any concealment as to the amount of the income tax paid by corporations and individuals?"

"Secrecy as to tax returns can serve no honest purpose. It shields the tax evader, the tax crook."

"Secrecy enables hundreds of millions of the righteously taxable incomes of profiteering corporations in every state to escape the payment of their just share of taxes. The burdens which these tax dodging millionaires should bear are wrongfully shifted to the owners of farms and homes."

NO FLIRTING!

LILLIAN BEARDSLEY.

When George W. Sayer, 1353 Greenleaf avenue, said "Hello, dearie," yesterday to Miss Lillian Beardsley, 21 years old, employed at 164 West Adams street, he picked the wrong girl. She had him arrested, though he said he was "only kidding."

EXPERT LYONS SUES NOW FOR ARBITRATION

"Without Reservation" Is Latest Proffer.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Mr. Ernest H. Lyons of Evanston, who obtained $580,826.41 from the public treasury in a little more than one year as a city of Chicago real estate expert, is now willing to arbitrate "without reservations."

The council subcommittee on experts, Ald. Schwartz, Guernsey, and Woodhull, decided yesterday to accommodate Lyons if he will put up $450,000 to be disposed of by the arbitrators selected. He must show his good faith by depositing that sum.

There are probably several reasons for the Lyons offer, "without reservations." THE TRIBUNE filed a suit, as a taxpayer for the benefit of all the taxpayers, to recover all the money paid the real estate experts—$1,738,079.25. This was in the Superior court. Sara McHenley, as another but nonresident taxpayer, filed a like suit in the District federal court.

Similar Issues.

THE TRIBUNE also filed suit to recover $1,065,000 alleged to have been paid Frank H. Mesce and Austin J. Lynch, city building experts. Judge Charles M. Foell of the Circuit court has disposed of the demurrers filed in that case. Howard Ellis and Jay Brough of THE TRIBUNE counsel have said that the Foell decision is sound law and opens wide the door for the recovery of the cash. The issues involved in that case are similar to those in the real estate expert suit. No doubt Mr. Lyons has read the Foell decision. His lawyer watched the proceedings for days as they progressed. Lyons' proposal to arbitrate, "without reservations" was written after Judge Foell gave his decision.

More recently THE TRIBUNE has exposed the payments of $190,254.56—which contained approximately $88,-[illegible].10 in "sugar"—to the Adams-Batty-Francois corporation. While the "A-B-F kids" were employed to appraise the surface lines, Mr. Lyons was one of the real estate experts who valued the real estate of the car companies. Mr. Lyons had facilities for knowing that information was being collected regarding the appraisal company before that information was printed.

More Light, Perhaps?

Also it is claimed that certain information would probably be obtained in the suit which may not be secured in an arbitration.

Chairman Schwartz asserted yesterday that the subcommittee will be certain that the arbitrators can and will enforce their decree. The defendants in THE TRIBUNE suits are Mayor William Hale Thompson, City Controller George F. Harding, President Michael J. Faherty of the board of local improvements, and the experts involved. In this suit it is charged there was a conspiracy to cheat and defraud the city and that the money paid was "to be distributed among persons composing a certain political machine."

THE TRIBUNE lawyers also said: 'Furthermore, if the courts should adopt and find that the charges made by our clients are true, Mr. Lyons would have to reveal the names of the persons with whom he divided his year's earnings. Under the strict conditions laid down by him for the proposed arbitration, this aspect of the case could not be inquired into."

Mr. Lyons' Offer.

Mr. Lyons' offer is dated May 29. After taking a personal fling at Chairman Schwartz, the letter proceeds:

"But, notwithstanding your apparent effort to bring about a contrary result, I am so determined to put it beyond the power of any one to say that I have in any particular or to the slightest degree over reached the city, or taken advantage of what any one might claim to be an improvident contract, that I am going to forego all my legal rights and accept your proposition" (of April 13, 1922).

"If, therefore, the city council is in fact, for any reason whatsoever, dissatisfied with my contract of employment, and desires to arbitrate the question of what is fair and reasonable, I am willing to do so as you suggest, 'without reservations.' I must insist, however, that the personnel of the arbitration board be selected from gentlemen of such high standing and known integrity that their award will be conclusive of its fairness, both to the city and to me, for this is the prime consideration which moves me to accept your proposal."

He wants an ordinance passed "as soon as possible which will make possible and effective an impartial and binding arbitration."

And Schwartz Answers.

Ald. Schwartz after answering the Lyons slap says that the subcommittee "has directed its lawyers, Louis E. Hart and Lawrence A. Cohen, to draw up a contract of arbitration which shall cover the entire controversy and shall bind you and the city of Chicago in the following respects": These provide that the arbitrator shall decide whether the payments made Lyons in 1920 and 1921 were legal, and that "if the arbitrator shall decide that all or a portion of these payments were illegally made to you [Lyons] the amount of such illegal payments shall be determined and forthwith refunded by you to the city of Chicago."

Another "respect" reads: "That in accordance with your agreement before the subcommittee, as mentioned in our letter to you Feb. 4, 1922, you shall deposit with the arbitrator or arbitrators, or with an escrow agent to be agreed upon, the sum of $450,000, to be subject to the disposition of the arbitrator or arbitrators in the fulfillment of their award."

Schwartz asked for either one or three arbitrators and that Lyons name a date when his lawyers will be ready to meet counsel for the subcommittee.

Kills Woman, Defending Mate

Mrs. Ventucci, slayer of woman who got in the way of her bullet fired to aid her husband. The Ventucci woman sits stoically beside Policeman Tom McCaffrey, shown holding the gun she used.

Mrs. Philemena Cianca, 710 Miller street, mother of six children, was shot and probably fatally wounded yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Carmella Ventucci, 711 Miller street.

Mrs. Vantucci's husband, Joseph, had objected when Joseph Steffen, a teamster, had parked his wagon in front of the Vantucci home. Vantucci hit Steffen with a plasterers' trowel. Steffen's employer, James Bartuch, 705 Miller street, joined in the affray.

Mrs. Vantucci ran inside the house, grabbed the gun, ran to the sidewalk, and opened fire. Mrs. Cianca, standing on the front porch of her home two doors away, fell at the first shot. Steffen got a bullet through the right leg.

The Vantuccis were locked up.

FRENCH GATHER 2,400 PLANES ALONG RHINE

Greatest Air Force Ready to Cow Germany.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, June 10.—The air strength of the French Rhine army of 90,000 men has gradually risen to 2,400 planes, which is the most formidable aerial armada ever grouped so compactly.

The entire aerial fleet—chase planes, giant night and day bombers, and observation ships—could mount to the sky at the same instant and hold undisputed supremacy over the heart of the German industrial districts. It is the fastest and most wicked weapon of France on the Rhine.

This force does not include replacement planes or pilots. Nor does it take into account the fact that under the excellent French aerial organization every air regiment always keeps one of its ten or twelve squadrons at a home base to train new pilots and to care for spare equipment. No routine work is thrown on the active part of the regiment.

Plan Air Ministry.

The Rhine air force constitutes at least two-thirds of the aerial strength of the French army, which is soon to be controlled by a new French air ministry which is favored by the cabinet but opposed by the war ministry.

The cabinet has just approved a project to keep the personnel of the aerial force entirely separate from the other arms, and this is the first step toward an air ministry.

Still Building War Planes.

At present the undersecretary of aeronautics buys for both the army and the navy and supervises aeronautical research. The undersecretariat controls Le Bourget, the great air port of Paris, which is unrivaled in the entire world.

The Breget and Bleriot companies are still building airplanes for the government under war contracts. The contracts have been allowed to run as sort of subsidies.

THREE UNION MEN HELD FOR QUIZ ON SLUGGING

Sal Salnipsky, 1024 South California avenue, treasurer of the Benevolent Painters and Paper Hangers' union, 113 South Ashland avenue, together with Irving Rosenstein and Carl Kaufman, members of the organization, are being held for investigation at the Des Plaines street station in connection with the slugging of Raymond Stewart, 5044 South Loomis avenue, Friday night.

Stewart, recently elected business agent of the union, was opposed by Rosenstein and Salnipsky. His reelection to office is believed to be the cause of the slugging, although the three prisoners deny any connection with the affair.

"I was grabbed from behind when I started into the offices Friday night," Stewart told Capt. James McCann. "I was slugged and somebody fired three shots. I recovered consciousness in a doctor's office."

The dismissals became known last night. The order affects Ralph Wheeler, I. C. Wolf, Frank Brun, and William Wilson.

WHEN THE NEW CONSTITUTION IS SUBMITTED.

When the delegates of the constitutional convention reassemble they will be approaching the time of the final definite makeup of the proposed new constitution. That is the beginning of the test of the whole work which represents ten years and more of preparation and struggle. It was not an easy thing to have a convention called into being. Legislatures after legislature resisted it. It is a slow and difficult process.

The last hurdle the proposed constitution must take is that of popular adoption. If the people reject it they may reject much which would be of great benefit to the state and they may do so because of opposition to one or several of the provisions.

Tax reform might be lost because of limitation of Chicago representation or it might be lost because of the lack of it. Chicago might defeat the constitution because the city was limited, the country might defeat it because there was no limitation.

Chicago might lose the right to issue bonds for municipal ownership purposes or to increase its borrowing power for public improvements because of some provision regarding judges or some provision regarding elections.

There probably will be no unanimous support of any provision, or of any which is really important. The important changes will be all subjects of controversy. A combination of all the groups in opposition might easily defeat the constitution if it is submitted as a whole. It has been suggested that such submission would allow the strong, generally accepted provisions to pull along the important provisions which are most in controversy. The opposite is also true. Important provisions which might be accepted by themselves may be defeated by the opposition to other provisions.

When the mere element of time involved in this work is considered it is apparent that the state ought to be put in the way of getting as much benefit from it as possible. All of the work of the convention, when it takes final form may not be good and good or bad it may not all be acceptable to the people of the state.

Whether or not people are consciously conservative about changes in their fundamental law they certainly are controversial about it and in many states constitutions submitted in their entire draft have been defeated. New York rejected such a constitution. Ohio had proposals submitted separately and made selections, accepting and rejecting. That was also the case in Massachusetts.

If Illinois should not take all of a new constitution it ought to have the chance to take part of it. It is highly important that the provision regarding the submission of constitutional amendments be changed. Now amendments to only one article may be submitted by any one legislature. That makes the constitution inflexible and it frequently has happened that proponents of amendments to several articles have so contested in the legislature that no proposal could be submitted. A change to permit the submission of amendments to several articles would make the organic law more flexible to the changing needs of the state.

If that proposal is submitted separately it probably would be adopted. There probably would be no organized opposition to it. We believe it would be wise to have the controversy involve the fate only of the questions at issue and not have the whole work of the convention dependent upon two or three fighting points. If the convention incorporates the election provision as it stands now, providing for one election a year, there is bound to be an attack upon it, particularly in Chicago, where it is not good public policy to make elections any more complicated than they are now. It would be unfortunate if the opposition were forced either to defeat the entire constitution or to accept what it regarded as a bad election law.

It would be unwise to incorporate this provision for elections in the constitution. It is properly an issue for legislative regulation. On general principles the less the constitution legislates the better. We hope to get a state benefit out of the work of the convention and not come merely to a waste of time and money in the writing of a rejected constitution.

CITY INSURANCE.

Charles H. Cheney, city planning director for several Pacific coast cities, tells Chicagoans that continual trouble will be the result if zoning regulations are not established here. That is so evident as to leave hardly an excuse for argument. A walk through any section of the city where new building operations are very active will convince the most skeptical.

Within the radius of a single block in one section of the north side, for instance, three modern residences have been moved away within a month to make room for business and apartment houses, while a fourth is being remodeled for offices. While that does not necessarily mean loss of money for the owners of those homes, as they probably made a profit on the lots, it does mean an economic waste. And if, instead of an apartment house, the building to go up next door were a garage or a machine shop, the loss to adjacent property owners would be severe.

It is to eliminate such dangers that a zoning ordinance is required. Zoning is city insurance. It gives stability to property values. Under such regulation a home owner who buys or builds as an investment, not as a speculation, is insured against depreciation of the value of his property because of the encroachment of undesirable neighbors. A factory owner is insured against the trouble and expense of neighborhood opposition to the putting in of switch tracks, special sewers for trade wastes, etc. An apartment owner is insured against the possibility of a garage becoming a nuisance which will disturb his tenants and lower the value of his property.

Such an ordinance is now being prepared for Chicago. It is likely to meet with opposition, as all constructive legislation is likely to meet with opposition. The Tribune does not know whether its provisions will be adequate and entirely just or not, but we do know that zoning regulations are essential to the economic and efficient construction and maintenance of a modern city, and the public should inform itself on the subject and be prepared to support a measure which will provide such city insurance.

THE UNIONS' FUTURE. UNDER TAFT DECISION.

What effect will the Supreme court decision that labor unions are responsible and suable organizations have upon the trades union movement in this country? Does it mean the beginning of the end of the political and economic power of trades unionism? Does it mean that the unions, driven into closer affiliation and coöperation for self-defense, will attain a new and greater power and influence in the life of the nation?

We can only theorize upon such questions, but they appear to be worth attention. Unquestionably the labor organizations of the country are deeply stirred by the decision. It strikes a staggering blow at one of their most important doctrines—the doctrine that while they can bargain collectively, and act collectively in any matter which they believe to be for their common good, they cannot be held either collectively or severally responsible for unlawful acts. They will not ignore that blow. They will attempt to parry it or to prevent its being followed up by more direct blows through the courts, for which it prepares the way.

Samuel Gompers has already forecast the fight in the statement of his belief that "there is some latent power over and above the Supreme court—the congress and people of the United States"—which would repudiate the court's ruling. That means organized labor will attempt to change the law under which this ruling was made possible.

That is the privilege of a democracy. If organized labor can muster enough votes to change the law through the lawful channels provided, it will be proper to do so. But it will be a long and desperate battle. The history of the trades union movement in England, originating at a much earlier date than the movement in America, may illustrate the length of time to which such a battle may extend.

Trades unions in England at first were generally frowned upon. As early as 1305 a law was passed in England defining certain trades union efforts to raise wages as an illegal conspiracy. In 1549 another law prohibited combinations of craftsmen to keep up wages or reduce hours. In 1818 the courts sentenced certain cotton spinners to prison for conspiracy to raise wages. About the middle of the nineteenth century the unions found themselves so far outside the law that they had no recourse against their officials who might embezzle their funds. They were held to be, if not actually criminal, yet so far in restraint of trade that the organization was an illegal association. This was a heavy blow. It started a fight which consumed several years before, in the '70s, they obtained legislative certification of their legality, complete protection for their funds, and legal safeguards against being sued.

The situation continued more or less unchanged until in 1901, after thirty years of immunity, the courts decided that these provisions had not been properly enacted, and in the famous Taff Vale case, which Chief Justice Taft quotes in his decision, found the railroad union responsible for damages inflicted by its members in the Taff Vale railway strike, and assessed damages against the union.

Unionism was shaken to its roots. Whether or not the decision of the United States Supreme court will have similar results is an interesting question. In England, by making unions responsible for the acts of their members or agents it cut down the number of strikes by 50 per cent. But it did something more than that—something which Mr. Gompers may have had in mind when he forecast a successful battle to change the law in America. It developed the British trades unions into a successful labor party, so determined to adjust the laws to the benefit of members, that when the next general election took place the laborites put fifty independent candidates into the field and returned twenty-nine of them to parliament.

Whether the effect of the United States Supreme court decision will be to reduce strikes by half, and eventually so amalgamate the trades unions that they will put a dominant bloc in congress, is, of course, a question. But it is a question which has been made vital. The importance of the decision cannot be belittled. Its effect, for the moment, can only be surmised.

There is one best way out for all concerned. That is for the unions to meet capitalism upon its own ground, to accept responsibility, to buy an interest in the business or work in which their members are engaged, and so to enter into the direct management of the sources of their income.

SEE AMERICA FIRST.

Balkan brigands are improving on the methods of the innkeepers of Oberammergau, shopkeepers of Berlin and Dresden, and restaurant keepers of Paris in the business of quick and complete annexation of American bankrolls which come within their reach. A cablegram tells of the holdup and robbery of a party of Illinois tourists at a lonely spot in the Balkans.

That is more crude than the ordinary commercial transactions now going on in Europe to separate Americans from their dollars, but perhaps it has some compensation in the romantic old world costumes of the brigands. What Chicagoan would not prefer to be robbed by a red sashed, black mustached, earringed brigand in the Balkans rather than by a ragged thug back of the yards? It would make a much better story to recount to admiring friends when the journey is over. But even so, it is a crude method for people so advanced in the art of extracting money from American tourists as the Europeans, especially in Germany, are proving themselves this season.

And still we flock abroad. The month of May this year has seen all American passport records broken with some 25,000 issued. The total number for the year to date is about 77,000. That means 77,000 persons have started for Europe to spend an average of about $1,000 each. So $77,000,000 of American money is on its way into European pockets already, and more than likely the amount will be doubled in the course of the season.

That is quite all right in so far as the individual travelers are concerned. We may assume that they came by the money honestly. Many of them have worked hard and saved carefully for the tour. They will find in it much of educational and recreational value. They will enjoy themselves and complain bitterly at the profiteering methods of the innkeepers, the shopkeepers, the restaurant keepers, and the others whom they meet.

For such complaints there are several antidotal thoughts. There is no law compelling any American to go abroad to spend his money. He can be exploited with equal comfort if not equal speed at home. If he insists upon spending his money abroad he is contributing so-called invisible exports to the balancing of trade and the reconstruction of Europe. One hundred and fifty million American dollars a year is worth while to Europe. If Americans are "robbed," let them try to believe themselves "robbed" in a good cause and be sports about it. Otherwise, let them see America first.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

The seventeen year cicada is back in the oaks. It is the symbol of a plague which sweeps the grain fields and leaves empty granaries, famine, and a denuded land. It is, in general idea, the devouring locust which the land dreads. It is, in fact, not devastating, does not eat grain, and causes only disfigurement of tree limbs and foliage.

Seventeen years ago the previous breed, having sunned for six weeks and bred, passed away. The female laid her eggs in a tree and died. The eggs hatched and the larvae dropped out, entering the ground. They attached themselves to roots from which sustenance could be obtained.

For seventeen years the grub was inert in the soil, a life which did not live. Now the locust comes out of this dark prison of long years for six weeks in the sun, to breed and die as it assures the continuity of kind. In 1939, when men may have fought other wars and fought over another peace the locusts whose progenitors are now in the sun will come out of the soil for their glimpse of a world in June.

Man may stand on the Appian way with the Italian sun making a reality of all the facts he believes endurable and see the tomb of Pompey, who is incased in stone which was formed when life had not yet flickered in the green scum.

The shad bush blossomed between thunderstorms and its petals were gone almost before they touched the ground. The red poppy unfolds against the dark of the evergreen and its petals fall. The wild rose bud opens and its petals are a moment in the sun. Wild grape blossoms are yellow with pollen and perfume the south wind, the clover bloom is red and white in the fields, nine bark, viburnum and hawthorn are still white in the thickets.

Life has blossomed and is blossoming and is full of song, from the brown thrasher in the wild grape tangle in the morning to the whippoorwill calling from the dark woods at night. Into these fresh beauties, in which experience seems to give reality to illusion, there comes this year the seventeen year cicada for its second in the world of light.

TELEPHONE PRACTICES.

Our telephone rings. We answer it. A sweet voice asks our identity and, having established it, requests that we hold the wire as Mr. Blank wishes to speak to us. We do so, while Mr. Blank finishes whatever is in hand, perhaps gives a word of instruction to his secretary, and finally comes on the wire to find us in no affable mood.

Or again, not having a subordinate handy to do the mechanical work of getting a number, perhaps we call Mr. Blank ourselves. His secretary answers and has us hold the wire. After an interval, Mr. Blank answers. Not having wasted any time he may be in a good humor, and we may not, but the call is our affair, not his, and if we are wise we will make the best of it.

There is a great tangle of wires and voices, of messages, requests, and the transmission of information among Chicago's hundreds of thousands of telephone users in a day. It is worthy the attention of an efficiency expert, if not of an authority on etiquette. Students in secretarial courses in business colleges, we are told, are instructed that they should save their employer's time. If any one is to wait on the telephone let it be the other employer.

That is not sound business instruction. Most persons who put in a telephone call want something. They seldom call to do the other person a favor. They should remember, therefore, that they are more likely to achieve their object if they find the person whom they are calling in good humor. They cannot do so if they keep him idly waiting their pleasure.

Beginning a telephone conversation, particularly on business matters, is as important as beginning any other conversation. A few points are worth remembering. When answering a call one should give his name and business connection, or merely the firm name if not in authority to discuss business matters. When making a call, one should preface his remarks with a statement of his name and business connection, whether he be addressing a subordinate or the person with whom he expects to talk.

But no discussion of the telephone would be complete without reference to the pests. The greatest of these probably is the conversationalist, usually a woman on a party line, who wastes hours for her acquaintances and many minutes for others waiting for a line while she discusses everything from the baby's new tooth to whether she should bob her hair. We fear to suggest a fitting punishment for this pest, but we would pray them to have a heart.

Editorial of the Day

TIME TO END IT.

[Kewanee Daily Star-Courier.]

None of the testimony presented in the Pittsburgh plus hearing has changed the opinion of the public that it is unjust practice that forces the additional charge of freight from Pittsburgh to Chicago on steel which is bought from Chicago mills.

Such a charge appears so unjust that most people are astonished when they learn that for years we in the middle west have been paying this fictitious freight. No reasonable defense for the practice has seemed to appear in any of the discussions of the matter, so it is to be taken for granted that no such reasonable defense exists.

The middle west is concerned over the quick abolition of this charge. It is to be hoped that a decision to annul the practice will be reached at an early date.

ZZZ-EEE! HERE THEY COME!

It is reasonably certain that mosquitoes do not transmit malaria in the malarial sections of the United States until just about this season.

When a man has an attack of chills before June 1 the theory is that he has reached down into his own spleen or bone marrow or some other hidden recess and pulled out enough of last year's malaria to furnish a good old ague jag.

That mosquitoes have been in evidence for a month or for several months is not proof that the theory is wrong. Mosquitoes pestered me around through Canada some weeks ago; one bit me in Toronto on that trip, but I got no chills from that bite, and the natives of that section had no fears of malaria.

Before mosquitoes can infect the stage must be set. In the first place, they must be infected. The malarial parasites in them must be in the right stage for infecting people. The atmospheric temperature must be right, and, finally, the person bitten must be one incapable of throwing off the number of parasites which the biting mosquito injected into him.

All these stars come into combination just about this time. They will be in combination for a few months. While they are, the wise man will avoid being bitten when he can avoid it and when bitten, and when malaria develops will take enough quinine to break his chills and then enough to cure completely—meanwhile keeping away from mosquitoes that he may not infect others.

We have learned a great deal about the habits of mosquitoes in recent years. Every item of information of this sort helps us to protect ourselves against them.

Here are a few additional items about them and their habits, contributed by Bruce Mayne, to whom we are under obligations for so much information about these pests.

The longest period of survival of an anopheles mosquito, observed under the best circumstances, was 231 days. Where the diet was exclusively fruit juice these mosquitoes survived, on an average, ninety days. Where they were given one to three meals of blood, and fed at all other times on fruit juice, the average length of life was 100 days. The possibility of an extreme old age of over 200 days was greatly increased by one to three feedings of blood.

A certain form of culex is supposed to live exclusively on fruit juice, unless it occasionally feasts on frog's blood. Specimens of this form of culex, kept under ideal conditions, and eating nothing but fruit juice, lived 265 days.

Malarial parasites were observed in anopheles mosquitoes as long as ninety days after they had bitten persons with malaria. But not all these parasites were living.

It was found that infected mosquitoes, kept just right, were capable of infecting persons with malaria for as long as fifty-five days. Even though they were found to harbor parasites between the sixtieth and ninetieth day, they could not infect. The parasites were dead or were so sick that they were ineffective.

These experiments prove that mosquitoes, under ideal conditions, can live through the winter and reappear in the spring.

They prove that a last year's mosquito, which awakened about March 1, bit a malarial man, could have infected a susceptible man somewhere towards the end of May.

Given a careless infected man and plenty of mosquitoes, and nature left to take its course, lots of trouble can brew before October.

SHE OBJECTS TO BARE KNEES.

R. W. N. writes: "Your answer to S. P. on bare knees attracted my attention. I note you advise children (girls) between 11 and 13 to bare their knees in winter. In my own mind I have never approved of this.

"1. Am I old-fashioned, misinformed, or what? I have always believed children should keep their extremities warm as an aid to good health. Surely that is true in infancy, and I thought it always applied. My little daughter of 11 wishes to wear sox all the year round. Am I wrong in thinking that if the extremities are not well protected the vitality has an extra drain upon it in order to warm the body? Also, that a little girl from 11 years on for a few years needs rather extra care?

"I know of children who wore sox all winter. I cannot see any ill effects, but can it not be that they are sturdy children and are not easily affected?

"2. Woolen stockings have become very popular with all ages. Apparently people enjoy their warmth. Along with this, does it not seem incopsistent to bare the knees?"

REPLY.

1. Vigorous children are not harmed by going bare kneed. Children with vasomotor disturbances may be.

2. The average young person does not need woolen stockings. They are wearing them because it is the fad.

FISH, IODINE, AND GOITRE.

M. Y. writes: "Some time ago, I read in your column an article regarding iodine in fish, etc.; also in sea breeze and that it was a preventive in goitre."

REPLY.

The people who live near the seashore have much less goiter than do those who live inland. The theory is that the former generally get the iodine they need.

Animals and vegetables derived from sea water contain more iodine than others used for food but grown away from the sea.

Air near the sea contains sprays and mists which add to its iodine content slightly.

The body does not requite much iodine.

TOO YOUNG FOR EGGS.

E. T. S. writes: "1. May a baby of 6 months, who lives in the city in winter and in the country in summer, eat a freshly laid egg if it just has one boiled?

"2. What may it eat besides?

"3. Is it advisable for a baby of that age to leave the city, as it makes a change of air perhaps dangerous?"

REPLY.

1. No. Eggs are for older children.

2. Mother's milk or cow's milk heated, properly diluted, fruit juice, tomato juice, and cereal.

3. Yes, if the place is all right and especially if the water and milk are safe.

SAFETY IN VACCINATION.

M. E. S. writes: "I know a child in western Nebraska with smallpox, whose little sister (vaccinated) goes to school.

"His father goes about his business and his mother, his nurse, writes letters and mails them freely."

REPLY.

This is safe enough, assuming that the little sister and the father have been successfully vaccinated.

DESERTS NATIONAL GUARD.

Chicago, June 5.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—My brother, aged 16, enlisted in the National Guards. He is now 18 and hasn't been to drill meetings for the last six months or more. In fact, he only went about sixteen times in all. 1. How can I get an "under age" enlistment discharge for him? 2. Can they court-martial him for not appearing at drill? 3. Does the fact that he was under age and a minor at time of enlistment make his enlistment void? 4. If he appears now at drill meetings since becoming 18 would that confirm his enlistment?

B. A.

From your statement of facts your brother is in grave danger of being punished either for desertion, which may be punished by imprisonment in the county jail, or perjury, which may be punished by imprisonment in the federal penitentiary.

In reply to your questions:

1. There is no way unless you force your brother to admit having committed perjury in falsely swearing that he was 18 years of age, in which case he may be sent to the federal penitentiary.

2. They can and probably will.

3. No. He swore he was 18 years old. That is the only evidence that exists in the army records as to his age.

4. His enlistment is sanctioned whether he appears at drill or not.

Your brother is at the mercy of the captain of his company. Should he desire to punish him for desertion he can do so without any trouble. The best thing for your brother to do is to throw himself upon the mercy of his commanding officer, promise to attend drills in the future and serve out his term of enlistment like a man. It he does so his desertion may be overlooked.

SPITE FENCE.

Chicago, June 6.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Am I allowed to paint or calcimine the yard fence on both sides? I mean the sides facing my yard? The boards are dirty and look bad and I want them white. I was stopped by the tennant next door from painting my fence on that side as she claimed it was her fence.

C. F. M.

We see no legal objection to your painting your side of the fence.

A CARELESS FELLOW.

Chicago, June 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What can be done to stop a fellow who works until 12 at night and then comes home and moves furniture about and throws things around until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning?

2. Can one collect damages from a tenant who drives nails into woodwork when his lease expressly prohibits it?

F. F.

We assume that you are the landlord.

1. If his conduct amounts to a nuisance it should be possible to stop him. Employ an attorney.

2. In general, yes.

MEMORY TESTS Can You Answer These?

Answers to these questions will be published tomorrow.

1. Where is Mecca?
2. Why is rain water better than any other for plants?
3. Does the government test or adjust watches?
4. Into what does the Niger river empty?
5. What are five synonyms for the word accommodate?
6. Why is salt mixed with ice in making ice cream?
7. From what products are buttons made?
8. When were Jews given the first official permission to enter America? By whom?
9. What noted author was exposed in the pillory, fined, and imprisoned for writing an intolerant tract?
10. Who was Whistler?

Answers to Yesterday's Questions.

1. Does the earth vary in its speed of rotation? The lengths of the days and nights appear not to have varied appreciably since the earth took the present shape. A very slight change of rotation would produce grinding and fracturing in the rocks, and geologists find no trace of such action.
2. What river in Kentucky leaves the state and then enters it again? The Cumberland. It flows through the eastern and south-central part of the state, then turns south into Tennessee, but farther west enters Kentucky again and joins the Ohio a few miles east of the mouth of the Tennessee river.
3. What are the principal products of the Alps? Iron and lead.
4. What is said to be one of the lost arts? Flexible glassware. It is referred to in the middle ages as an Egyptian art.
5. Does a fan cool the air? No. By increasing the air currents, however, it increases evaporation of moisture from the skin, producing cold.
6. What is the highest mountain in Europe? Mont Blanc, in the French Alps. It is about 15,781 feet above the level of the sea. The summit was first reached in 1786.
7. What are the racial affiliations of Turks and Arabs? The Turks are of a Mongolo-Tatar stock, related to the Tartars of Russia and points east; the Arabs are a Semitic people, related to the Jews.
8. What river forms the boundary line between West Virginia and Ohio? The Ohio river.
9. What are five synonyms for the word addicted? Accustomed, prone, inclined, given, and habituated.
10. What are the United States coins known as flying eagle silver dollars? Pattern pieces of 1836, 1838, and 1839. Coinage of these dollars never received congressional authorization, but a small number of them managed to get into circulation and these are now much sought by numismatists.

CANARY BIRDS FOR CONDUCTORS.

Chicago, May 30.—Do you remember away back when the motorman stood outside in a raging blizzard on the grip cars and the conductor walked through the cars and collected the fares? Now that is all changed for the better and we are all glad of it. However, the railroad itself appears to be so exhilarated about it that it shows a tendency to go to the opposite extreme. Most industrial lines of labor have had to stand for a cut in wages, but the street car men still have their war rate and the working classes are largely the ones who pay it. The motorman today stands or sits in a comfortable, cozy compartment and on some lines this is the only warm spot in the winter. Further, they have designed a car where the conductor and motorman can be together and when not busy exchange views on baseball or Muscle Shoals. There is a rear door marked "Exit Only," but it is never in operation. On last Monday about noon I rode on one of these "Pay as You Enter" cars from 22d street to the loop. The car, No. 5779, was not crowded, but the conductor even had the luxury of a lady companion inside his small railed inclosure. She wore a yellow trimmed hat. I suppose I shall learn it was his wife. So much the better. I am in favor of it. All they need now is a canary bird and a couple of vases of flowers and they are "all set." By all means let us go the limit and do the thing right.

RESTORING THE SALOON.

Danville, Ill., May 30.—The leading editorial in edition of The Tribune of May 30 can only be described as rot, rot, rot. The worst kind of drivel. That editorial carried out would restore the saloon in all its criminal and debasing ugliness. It was beer that made the saloon. It would do far less harm to restore the sale of whisky than it would to permit the selling of beer. The writer can remember when there were not saloons. The lager beer industry made the saloon necessary. Beer and light wines can't be sold without the saloons.

ISAAC A. LOVE.

ANSWERING QUESTIONS ON THE MAYOR'S OUTINGS.

Urbana, Ill., May 31.—After reading the articles on Mayor Thompson's outings, I find that there is the danger of robbing the school children of an extra day of pleasure because of a political difference. The children will gamble, that is true, but rather than deprive these young ones of the other enjoyments at the park, why not eliminate the gambling devices and not the outings?

In answer to M. M., I want to say:

1. Mayor Thompson's outings were not responsible for the late arrival of four boys who came home "after midnight."
2. There is plenty of "clean enjoyment" at Riverview park.
3. Does not the office man greet an extra day of pleasure?
4. The parks are visited very frequently by the school children, accompanied by their parents.
5. Grace Reed has the right to believe that her children did not gamble until they have been proven guilty of the offense.
6. The car fare money comes jointly from the mayor and the park management.
7. Let M. M. visit the public playgrounds, parks and bathing beaches and see if the children are enjoying themselves on their own hard earned money.
8. Your question is entirely off the subject.
9. If you are given something, do not refuse it and purchase a like article to be what you call "self-respecting."

DONALD A. HISER.

EVIDENCE OF OUR PERFIDY.

Chicago, June 1.—The Tribune is a biased newspaper that, when it can avoid it, prints nothing but what the policy calls for. There is not room to cite to The Tribune. I have found out from shipping articles to the Voice of the People that were never printed.

O. B. T.

NEW YORK'S HISTORIC POLICY OF OBSTRUCTION.

Manistee, Mich., May 27.—I note in a recent issue of The Tribune that Gov. Miller of New York is opposed to the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Waterway project.

The situation has an historic parallel. In 1787 Gov. Clinton of New York, believing that maintenance of states rights and a loose confederation would give New York commercial advantages which it would not enjoy under a strong federal government, vigorously opposed the constitution and the birth of the United States as a nation. It was only the broad vision and persistence of Alexander Hamilton that finally secured an affirmative vote on ratification in the New York legislature. And with what good to New York!

Has New York no present day Hamilton to show her the light?

J. C. BENSON.

"IN THE NAME OF ALL THAT'S GOOD AND WHOLLY."

Chicago, June 1.—I would like to say up the paper some morning and read some news besides Mary Baker and Medill McCormick.

I ask you, in the name of all that's good and wholly, who cares if they ever marry, or who they marry? I, for one, don't, and thousands more back of the yards are of the same feeling; so, please, Mr. Editor, give us Babe Ruth, Fred Bischoff, Fatty Arbuckle, Tommy O'Connor—anything but Mathilde and Mary.

JAMES F. GORMAN.

CONCERNING MR. WILLIS HOUGH.

Rochester, Minn., May 31.—We note with interest the letter of that intelligent gleaner Mr. Willis Hough printed in your paper of the 30th and also the contents of his booklet in which he claims to have exposed the methods of the Chicago Board of Trade which he looks upon as the greatest evil of all time.

Mr. Hough is one of those gentlemen who takes himself too seriously and who might be of the impression that he was the writer of the Declaration of Independence were it not for the school text books. He knows that all men except himself are dishonest and that the only "Stop Thief" is in order at all times. What Mr. Hough does not know about the Chicago Board of Trade would fill a larger book than the one he wrote two years ago.

Mr. Hough fails to realize that there are honest men on the Chicago Board of Trade and that they conduct their business as honorably as he would like to have all people believe that he conducts his.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

NEARER HOME.

By Phœbe Cary.

One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er:
I'm nearer my home today
Than I ever have been before;

Nearer my Father's house,
Where the many mansions be;
Nearer the great white throne,
Nearer the crystal sea;

Nearer the bound of life,
Where we lay our burdens down;
Nearer leaving the cross,
Nearer gaining the crown!

But lying darkly between,
Winding down through the night,
Is the silent, unknown stream
That leads us at length to light.

Closer and closer my steps
Come to the dread abysm;
Closer Death to my lips
Presses the awful chrism.

O, if my mortal feet
Have almost gained the brink;
If it be I am nearer home
Even today than I think;

Father, perfect my trust;
Let my spirit feel in death
That her feet are firmly set
On the rock of a living faith!

INDUSTRY HITS FASTER STRIDE; MIDWEST LEADS

Jobless Get Work as Most Trades Speed Up.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Industry in June is shaking a more sensible leg than in May. It has tossed away its crutches of last winter and is getting along at a faster pace than many perceive.

This is not optimistic hokum of the sort the "Cheer 'Em Up" boys were putting a year ago when the tires were all flat. It is the story by cold figures collected by the employment bureau of the United States department of labor.

The monthly survey of this service covering the month of May, gives statistical demonstration of the improvement which financial and economic observers have been noting in the public prints.

Midwest Leads Revival.

The middle west, it appears, is at present leading in the recovery. From the Great Lakes basin to the Rockies, industry is actually getting into a real stride. The army of the unemployed is fast diminishing. In some lines a shortage of labor is reported, especially in some of the automotive centers and the steel regions. Nearly everywhere the supply of building craftsmen has been absorbed in one of the most extensive building booms the country has experienced.

The automobile towns of Michigan are in far different shape than a year ago. In some agricultural sections, a shortage of experienced labor is reported, the emphasis being put on "experienced." In the coal producing districts some 640,000 bituminous and anthracite miners have been idle since April 1, but outside of this, employment in nearly every branch of industry is on the mend.

Is trade getting better? In some communities wages have been reduced to the point where the increase in employment has not been followed by any proportionate growth in buying. But in general the volume of trade is increasing. Car loadings at present, after deducting coal trains which are not running, are reported the highest in the history of railroading. The load per car is, however, somewhat lower than in 1920, the year of "peaks."

More Employment in Chicago.

On June 1, the survey says, 3.2 per cent more workers were employed than on May 1. This is based on returns from employers with 1,669,000 employés in May. Chicago registered an increase of 6 per cent while New York had less than 1 per cent increase in employment. Of sixty-five cities, forty-nine had a growth of employment in May over April. Of fourteen groups of industries, eleven reported gains.

In Chicago, the iron and steel mills kept increasing forces in May, so did the stockyards and the metal trades, according to the report. Milliners, printers, cotton goods laid some off, while clothing manufacturers put workers on. Building operations were going full tilt.

The Situation in Illinois.

Department of labor agents report the following conditions in Illinois and nearby states and the situation in the midwest states is reported as similar:

East St. Louis.—Optimistic feeling regarding business conditions, caused by improvement in employment situation. The building of public roads employs 500. A surplus of workers prevails in the steel industries. The foundries at Granite City have put on 1,000 old employés.

Peoria. — Employment conditions greatly improved. All plants are reviving rapidly; a shortage of skilled mechanics and molders; a few plants are still closed; increasing employment in building trades.

Springfield.—Material improvement in employment; street pavements, city heating system, street car tracks, and building program offer work for 2,000 men. No plants closed. Two large manufacturing plants running overtime with a 50 per cent increase to normal force.

Bloomington.—Decided increase in employment. Almost all industries except coal mines, operating with normal forces. Building trades all employed. Railroad shops working full time. Still a surplus of automotive mechanics, truck drivers, clerical help and electricians.

Danville.—General improvement in all lines. Building trades nearly all busy. Manufacturers of builders' hardware are increasing output. Glass companies still closed. Coal suspension affecting employment. Sufficient supply of labor except farm hands.

Rockford.—Situation bright. An acute shortage of farm labor, also road labor, skilled men in furniture and phonograph plants and track labor for Dixon. All building workers busy on new construction program costing $1,146,000. Agricultural implement plants not yet normal.

Aurora.—Employment gradually improving. Several factories making sheet metal lockers, filing cases and other specialties working overtime, and one has added night crew. The cotton mills have closed for a month for repairs. Corset factories running about 65 per cent normal, but laid off 200 women. Several foundries remain closed and others are running part time, with small forces. A shortage of farm hands exists. Building operations are absorbing unemployed.

Rock Island-Moline District.—A further advance in employment made in May. A shortage of road workers and a demand for all available labor exists. Construction work has absorbed the greater number of those temporarily released from other lines.

Indiana Auto Plants Busy.

General.—A surprising activity in most lines throughout the state. The demand for skilled help in the automobile and accessory line is so active certain classes of workers can be supplied only with difficulty.

Gary Industrial District.—[Including Gary, Hammond, East Chicago, Whiting and Indiana Harbor.]—Iron and steel industries slowly approaching normal. Labor scarcity in the Calumet region in the iron and steel industries. Car building and repairing remained almost stationary. At Gary, all plants have resumed operations, although many on a small scale. Besides a shortage of iron and steel workers at East Chicago, there is a shortage of masons and carpenters in the construction lines. Chemical industries running full force and a shortage of labor.

Wisconsin Keeps Pace.

General.—Most industries running 75 to 85 per cent of capacity. Decided increase in number of employed, with iron and steel industries leading.

Moonshine Death Rate "Blessing of Prohibition"

Muskegon, Mich., June 10.—[Special.]—The high death rate from moonshine was hailed as one of the chief blessings of prohibition by Mrs. C. L. Calkins, president of the state association of the W. C. "It is one of the chief blessings."

GOVERNMENT IS URGED TO HOLD MUSCLE SHOALS

Danger to Industry Seen in Sale of Plant.

BY HALLECK W. SEAMAN.

In the northwest corner of Alabama, on the southern shore of the Tennessee river, near Sheffield, stands one of the few war-built government plants that have not found its way to the junk pile. Billions of dollars' worth of wartime construction for making aeroplanes, ships, guns, explosives, and other munitions of war have been scrapped and are now only a memory. But at Muscle Shoals, near Sheffield, the people of the United States still own, in perfect condition, ready for immediate use whenever it may be needed, one of the finest chemical plants in the world.

It seems to be the natural fate of government owned property to tend to slip away from public ownership into private hands, and usually at only a small fraction of its real worth. In a contest between the public treasury and private purses the public interest usually comes out the worst. The government nearly always buys dear and nearly always sells cheap.

Plant Cost $87,000,000.

The government nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals cost, all told, about $87,000,000, but the best offer that has been made for it to date, including certain other properties, is $5,000,000. This offer was made by Henry Ford and covers not only the Muscle Shoals nitrate plant but another smaller nitrate plant at Sheffield, three miles away; a government owned limestone quarry; and a government electric power station on the Warrior river, about eighty-eight miles distant.

Moreover, the offer made by Mr. Ford has a string tied to it. Mr. Ford offers to buy $87,000,000 worth of government property for less than 6 cents on the dollar if the government will spend about $28,000,000 more to complete the Wilson dam near Muscle Shoals, upon which the government has already spent $17,000,000, build another dam further up the river, and then lease the power to him at an annual rental of about $3 per horse power a year.

What Ford Demands.

In other words, the government, in order to receive $5,000,000 for property that cost it $87,000,000, must spend another huge sum, variously estimated at from $28,000,000 to $33,000,000, and then give Mr. Ford, his heirs and assigns, the exclusive use of all the power at Muscle Shoals for 100 years, with the privilege of renewal for an annual rental of about one-sixth of the present market value of the power.

Further, under this plan, if there should be any difficulties in connection with the foundations of the dam washing out, which is not a remote possibility in view of the enormously costly experience with the dam at Hale's Bar, about 100 miles farther up the Tennessee river, the government, as landlord, would have to make good all repairs or build new construction, regardless of the cost.

Acceptance Favored by Some.

One would naturally think that an offer on terms as unfavorable to the government as these would be summarily rejected. On the contrary, there are many people in the south, as well as in the west, who seem to be heartily in favor of its acceptance. How is it that this proposition, which promises to separate the government from its property at a few cents on the dollar and to involve the government in new heavy expenditures and risks with no compensating return, can find support? Again we find a case of private purses against the public treasury. The farmers have been told that if Mr. Ford gets the nitrate plant, he will give them cheap fertilizer.

Mr. Ford himself has not promised cheap fertilizer. All he has promised is that he will experiment to see what he can do, and that he will sell whatever fertilizer he makes at cost plus 8 per cent.

Have Confidence in Ford.

So great is the faith of the farmer in Mr. Ford's genius that this promise completely outweighs the hard, cold fact that the Muscle Shoals plant is not a fertilizer plant. It produces ammonium nitrate, a military explosive. This substance, while it contains nitrogen, which is one of the three fertilizer elements, absorbs moisture so easily from the air that it cannot be handled like an ordinary fertilizer, and besides, is about twice as expensive as any other fertilizer.

It is true that in the course of manufacture of ammonium nitrate, along about half way in the process, there is an intermediate product known as crude cyanamid, which, with a certain amount of investment in new equipment, could be converted into a fertilizer, cyanamid, of which there is about 40,000 tons a year consumed in the United States. The Muscle Shoals plant has a capacity to produce 220,000 tons of this product a year.

Cyanamid Little Used.

In the twelve years that cyanamid has been on the market, the maximum consumption that has ever been reached in one year was 43,000 tons. The reason for this is that the product is not suitable for use by the farmer, on account of its dry, dusty nature, and all efforts to make it suitable have been in vain. It is used only by fertilizer manufacturers at the rate of forty to sixty pounds in a ton of fertilizer. It is seen, therefore, that a little cyanamid goes a long way.

The Muscle Shoals plant could be converted so as to make sulphate of ammonia, which is also a commonly used fertilizer material, but this material also is not used by farmers because it contains only nitrogen, whereas the farmers demand a balanced fertilizer which contains nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. Practically all the sulphate of ammonia used in this country is taken by fertilizer manufacturers, who consume annually about 150,000 tons.

Would Increase Cost.

All the estimates, however, that have ever been made on the subject, including those of the government experts, show that it would add about 50 per cent to the cost of cyanamid to convert it into sulphate of ammonia, and this would bring the cost for about the average price at which sulphate of ammonia, obtained from the by-product coke ovens, is available. The farmers simply will not buy sulphate of ammonia for direct application, as witnessed by the market for this product, which last fall dropped to as low as $40 a ton without awakening any demand whatsoever from our farmers. And this was after the price had fallen from $120 a ton during the war, and in comparison with a five year pre-war average of $60 a ton. The fact is that this product is not suitable for direct use as a fertilizer, because it furnishes only one of the three necessary plant foods.

Muscle Shoals Rainbow.

So the farmer who thinks that he would get cheaper fertilizer out of Muscle Shoals is only chasing rainbows. Nobody can tell what is in Mr. Ford's mind, but his desire to have control of four or five times as much electric power as the operation of the nitrate plant would require, indicates that he has something else in mind; in fact, Mr. Ford has let it be known that he intends to make an "industrial empire" of the south. Undoubtedly, with electric horse power at $3 a year, Ford could do great things in the manufacture of electric steel, alloys, aluminum, etc. But so could anybody else. What would happen, if anybody got electric power at Muscle Shoals at $3 a horse power a year, is that the people who are making industrial products with electric power costing $18 to $24 a year would simply have to go out of business and see their business transferred to Muscle Shoals. But why should the government subsidize one manufacturer's business at public expense to the injury of the business of other manufacturers? If that is a necessary condition of government ownership, it would be better, in the interests of all, if the government stayed out of business entirely.

Has Electric Power Plant.

There is no need for water power to run the nitrate plant in time of war. The nitrate plant has its own electric power plant, run by steam power; in other words, the nitrate plant is a self-contained unit, and in an emergency could be operated without diverting electric power from any industrial purposes.

For the last twenty-five years congress has been working on legislation to protect the natural resources of the country, and to prevent them from falling into the hands of private monopolies. This legislation is expressed in the federal water power act. Hundreds of water powers have been developed and are being developed under this act, with complete satisfaction to private interests, and with full protection to the public welfare. Several bona fide offers for the development of the power at Muscle Shoals have already been made to the government under this act, in which private capital assumes all risks and under which the rights of the public are adequately protected as to cost of service, and under which after fifty years the dams revert to the government.

Purpose of Muscle Shoals.

The nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals was erected for a purpose. That purpose should be respected—namely: to have a reserve capacity for the production of a war explosive, ammonium nitrate, in case of need. There is no necessity for sacrificing this protection in return for a mere $5,000,000. The nitrate plant is not a fertilizer plant and cannot make cheap fertilizer, regardless of any statements that may have been made on the subject. The water power at Muscle Shoals can be and should be developed under the laws already made and provided—namely: the federal water power act. There are plenty of people who are willing to make a development of this kind without asking a gift of millions of dollars from the public treasury, in addition to a perpetual, private monopoly, free and unrestrained, except as to a nominal rental, of one of our greatest natural resources.

Power at Niagara Falls.

At present there is 350,000 horse power developed on the American side of Niagara Falls and 450,000 on the Canadian side. This total of 800,000 is about equal to the contemplated hydro-electric devedopment at Muscle Shoals—but all of the latter will be on American soil, available for American industries, and located in the very heart of the country, far removed from a possible enemy border.

The Muscle Shoals region is truly a wonderland of industrial possibilities. No human engineer could have designed a more perfect layout, nor one wherein all the basic elements essential to successful large-scale operations are strategically combined in so compact an area. In the immediate neighborhood of the Muscle Shoals power station we find a continuation of the well-known Birmingham iron ore deposits. Superimposed upon the iron stratum is an immense bed of limestone suitable for fluxing purposes, and above that are workable seams of coal of a coking grade.

On the Missabe range, from which Pittsburgh and Gary draw their ore supplies, the mines are not operated during the winter on account of the ice blockade on the Great Lakes. This situation does not prevail at the Alabama fields, where the climatic conditions are favorable for both summer and winter operation. The Tennessee river is a noble stream, with deep and open water the year around, and upon which can be floated the finished products of the mills for domestic use and to New Orleans for export to the markets of the world. The proximity of Muscle Shoals to raw materials for steel making and its ready access by rail and water to consuming markets are unparalleled.

The electric furnace turns out a superior quality of steel, and is indispensable in the making of the so-called ferro-alloys. From a metallurgical standpoint the situation at Muscle Shoals is certainly unique as well as ideal. The electro-chemical industries now, perforce, largely centered at Niagara Falls will also find at Muscle Shoals an opportunity for much needed expansion.

How U. S. Could Profit.

The welfare of the country at large demands that the government shall complete this vast water-power project, sell the electric energy over the switchboard at a reasonable price to a variety of consumers—all under the existing enabling act—and thereby eventually reimburse the national treasury for the many millions of the people's money already expended upon the enterprise. Muscle Shoals belongs to the country as a whole, both north and south. It can be made a dependable asset for peace as well as wartime requirements.

Mr. Ford's specious scheme of issuing fiat currency against the units of electric energy to be developed with which to pay for the cost of completing the dams is a rank insult to the intelligence of the land. He should not be put in a position of hogging for 100 years nor for one moment the control of a business enterprise that with $3 a year horse power will enable him to defy competition and to work irreparable injury to the industrial fabric of the whole United States.

Constructive legislation along approved business lines is imperatively needed right now at Washington to handle this gigantic power development. The waste of energy is deplorable. Muscle Shoals has furnished its full share of political scandal for the past fifty years or more. The merits of the project have never been seriously questioned. Now that the government has already completed more than 75 per cent of the work, there should be no further unnecessary delay in finishing the undertaking.

The Tennessee river should be opened to through navigation from Chattanooga down, and the electrical power thereby made available should likewise be developed to the limit. While the establishment of an "industrial empire" would follow as a natural consequence, nevertheless, the welfare of the country demands that the business-like control of such an "empire" should at all times remain with the government of the republic under whose auspices its foundation was laid.

NAVY BUDGET IN SENATE BOOSTS HOUSE FIGURE

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[United Press.]—Calling for an increase of approximately $43,000,000 over the house figure, the naval appropriations bill was introduced in the senate today with an appropriation of $294,235,244.

The senate allotment is about $131,000,000 less than the amount estimated by the navy department as necessary for the year. It is more than $119,000,000 below last year's appropriation.

No change was made in the house appropriation for enlisted personnel, both bills providing for 86,000 men for the navy and 19,500 for the marine corps.

WILKERSON CASHIER ON RECORD OF DEALS IN SMALL'S TRIAL

Books Don't Show Who Got Interest.—Griffin.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Waukegan, Ill., June 10.—[Special.]—During a three hour examination of Joseph Griffin, cashier of the Grant Park Trust and Savings Bank, today John H. Wilkerson, assistant attorney general, developed a group of facts which the state considers of importance in the prosecution of Gov. Len Small.

These are:

There is no record of the bank showing to whose account was credited the $1,500,000 of interest on "Package notes," which had been traced to the doors.

There is no record of the bank showing from what account the late Edward C. Curtis withdrew the $254,000 with which he purchased stock in the Ridgely National Bank of Springfield, and which, according to the state, later was replaced by stock in the Ridgely Farmers State bank which was delivered to Curtis, Gov. Small, and Secretary of State Emerson.

There are no important records of the bank missing except the "certificate of deposit register," showing to whose credit numerous large deposits were made, and how, when, and by whom those deposits were withdrawn.

Attorney Wilkerson went into great detail to bring these facts before the jury, which already has been told that part of the books of the Grant Park Trust and Savings bank were destroyed by burned by a janitor. With close attention to dates and amounts he attempted to trace payments into the bank, only to wind up when he came to the missing register. And similarly he showed Curtis' large withdrawals from the bank and brought out that none of the available records indicate the account or accounts from which they were made.

Fail to Show Recipient.

From the bank's cash book it was shown that on certain dates the bank received many deposits for which certificates were issued, but that book failed to show the identity of the recipient. Then later the witness was asked about Curtis' checks for the same amounts shown as covered by the certificates. He said he could produce no additional record concerning these matters.

For example, the witness identified an entry showing a certificate of deposit for $12,950 on Nov. 21 and Curtis' check for the same amount cashed by the bank at about the same time.

This line of inquiry also brought out that two of the "Liquidation dividend" checks of the Ridgely National bank, amounting to nearly $70,000, and indorsed by Small, were put in the Grant Park Trust and Savings bank in exchange for certificates of deposit which could not be traced.

Can't Recall Individual Deals.

The witness frequently said he could not remember individual transactions of the bank, several large items being called to his attention. He was asked about two loans to Cudahy & Co., made in the name of the Grant Park Trust and Savings bank. One was $250,000 and the other was $500,000. He said they did not appear on the bank's records of its loans and discounts.

"Do you recall that your bank made or did not make it?" asked Mr. Wilkerson, concerning the larger loan.

"I don't recall it," was the answer.

"Do you recall that it did not make it?"

"No, I don't recall that."

The examination of Mr. Griffin will be resumed Monday morning.

CAPITAL BRIDE

MRS. CHAUNCEY L. WADDELL
[Underwood & Underwood.]

SOCIAL-OFFICIAL ROYALTY AT MISS HUGHES' WEDDING

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—The President and Mrs. Harding were among the distinguished guests this afternoon at the wedding of Miss Catherine Hughes, daughter of the secretary of state, and Mrs. Hughes, to Chauncey Lockhart Waddell of New York, which occurred at 4 o'clock in Bethlehem chapel of the Episcopal Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul.

The wedding was followed by a brilliant reception at the Pan-American Union building, attended by hundreds of persons distinguished in the official and social life of the capitol.

The president and Mrs. Harding cut short their visit in New Jersey in order to be back in time for the ceremony. The Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge also were present, and the cabinet and the diplomatic corps united to do honor to the first cabinet bride of the present administration.

Attended by College Classmate.

Miss Hughes, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Miss Elisabeth Kirkland of Nashville, Tenn., who was her classmate at school and college. There were two matrons of honor, her sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles Evan Hughes Jr. of New York, and Mrs. Ralph Dunlap of Akron, sister of Mr. Waddell. Charles Evan Hughes III., and Stuart Hughes, small nephews of the bride, served as trainbearers.

Gerald Fessenden Bell of New York, was best man for Mr. Waddell, and the ushers were Charles Evans Hughes Jr. of New York, Ralph Dunlap of Akron, James Alexander of Atlanta, Dr. Byron Blaisdell of Hartford, Kenneth Gaston and Ralph Bollard of New York. Whitney Young of New York, assisted the ushers.

The ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. Alfred Harding, bishop of Washington, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Abernathy, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, of which Secretary and Mrs. Hughes are members.

Wedding Gown of White Satin.

The bride's wedding gown was of white crepe-basked satin, embroidered in pearls, with Lanvin sleeves of silk net. It was shirred in soft folds on either side of a low waist line and fell in a graceful, uneven hem line. The court train of satin was also embroidered by pearls to an over-drapery of net reaching from the shoulders. The long veil of net hung from a coronet of pearls.

The bride's attendants wore gowns of colored organdie. Miss Kirkland, the maid of honor, was in shell pink. Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes Jr., in lavender, and Mrs. Dunlap in corn color. The gowns were trimmed with narrow, shirred ruffles of the organdie and the large picture hats were of the same material.

The bride's going away gown was of blue and beige canton crepe, the upper part of the gown and the sleeves being of the latter, with a blue cape of the crepe. Her hat was of soft beige straw, trimmed with flowers, in a deeper tone.

Mrs. Hughes, mother of the bride, wore a gown of beige georgette and lace with a shaded lavender girdle and a lavender hat.

Valentino Witnesses Subpœnaed by Woolwine

Los Angeles, Cal., June 10.—[Special.]—Witnesses who testified in the police court hearing on the bigamy charge against Rodolf Vanlentino will tell their stories to the grand jury June 26. They have been subpoenaed by District Attorney Thomas Lee Woolwine, who intends to reopen the case of Valentino's marriage in Mexico to Miss Winifred Shaughnessy. Justice J. Walter Hanby dismissed the bigamy charge on the ground there wasn't enough evidence to show the couple lived as man and wife in California. Woolwine says the grand jury will investigate a number of other across the border marriages.

MOTHER-IN-LAW OF WARD MUST GO ON STAND

New York, June 10.—[Special.]—Subpoenaes to appear Tuesday before the Westchester grand jury to give testimony as to the killing of Clarence Peters by Walter S. Ward were issued today for service on Mrs. M. W. Curtis of Brooklyn, mother of Mrs. Walter S. Ward, and on George W. Sutton, a neighbor of the Ward family in New Rochelle.

Mrs. Curtis has been said to have been at the home of her daughter early on the morning when the body of Peters was found.

Neighbor Heard Nothing.

Mr. Sutton was at the Ward home on the night of May 15. He has said in interviews that he saw nothing and heard nothing in the Ward home which would help solve the mystery.

George S. Ward and Ralph D. Ward, a brother of Walter, could not be found by subpoena servers yesterday. Members of the family assured the authorities, however, that the two had gone to a bakers' convention at Bedford Springs, Pa., and would undoubtedly accept service before Tuesday.

The fifth witness sought is Miss Fifi Ziegler, a French governess, who, according to information of District Attorney Weeks, was for a few days a member of the Ward household.

See Powerful Influences.

Some of the Westchester officials have begun hinting at "powerful influences" that seem to be hampering them in their investigation. Sheriff Werner intimated a belief his telephone wires might have been tapped.

In regard to the failure to find Rogers and Jackson, believed to be "Charlie Ross" and "Jack," in Syracuse, he was asked if Deputy Sheriff Miller still had hope. He replied he hadn't discussed the matter with Miller "for fear the telephone wire might be tapped."

Cunningham, the witness who said Ward had killed Peters and wounded another man in the Ward home, was released today from the White Plains jail on $3,500 bond. He departed at once for New York City with his lawyer.

BRITISH ENVOY TO BERLIN MAY BE KEPT AT HOME

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 10.—Lord D'Abernon, the British ambassador to Germany, has arrived in London fom Berlin and reports are current that he will not return to his post. It is known that there have been unofficial French protests over Lord D'Abernon's reputed pro-German attitude, and his policy of going beyond his ambassadorial functions in counseling and advising the Germans. This strengthens the belief that he will soon be relieved of his position.

It is generally believed he assured the Germans that Prime Minister Lloyd George would never consent to the Germans losing Upper Silesia, and he is now charged with supporting the campaign for reductions of reparations.

Lord and Lady D'Abernon have been prominent figures in Berlin social life, entertaining leading Germans and attending German social functions which the other allied diplomats eschew.

BROKER'S WIFE AGAIN STARTS TO FIGHT HUSBAND

Undismayed by Superior Judge Charles A. McDonald's recent dismissal of suit for separate maintenance from Joseph M. Banahan, note broker, associated with the F. S. Moseley company, Mrs. Lillian Banahan yesterday filed a second suit in the Circuit court.

In the bill filed yesterday by Attorney Cuthbert Potts, Mrs. Banahan cites many instances of cruelty, as the cause of the separation of the couple, who have two children, Lillian, 3, and Jack, 2.

On November 19, 1919, the broker is alleged to have severely beaten Mrs. Banahan, according to the bill, and March 10, 1920, following another beating, Mrs. Banahan asserts she was forced to flee, fearing that he would put into execution his oft-repeated threat to kill her.

Nottingham Rats So Big They Even Kill Wild Cats

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 10.—A Nottingham municipal medical officer has this to say about rats in his city: "A half million rats, some two feet long and weighing two pounds, inhabit the prehistoric subterranean passages of the city. They would attack elephants. They have killed and devoured mongooses, ferrets, and wildcats, and men do not dare invade their haunts. An underfed female cat alone is superior to a big rat. The city tried poisoning them, but the rats quickly discovered the food was tampered with and they refused to eat it." Asphyxiation poison gas has been suggested to rid Nottingham of the horde of rodents.

BORAH'S WARNING ENDS COAL MEN'S FIGHT ON HOOVER

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—Secretary of Commerce Hoover and the National Retail Coal Merchants' association patched up their differences today and coöperation between them in the interest of the public consumer of coal is expected to result.

Following receipt of another letter from Roderick Stephens, of the association, Secretary Hoover issued the following statement:

"Senator Borah's useful warning that no aid or comfort will be given from the committee of the senate of which he is chairman, to those who have refused to coöperate in the voluntary plan for restraining coal prices will, I trust, put an end to the recent actions of some people in attempting to upset these arrangements through senatorial support.

Agrees to Coöperate.

"The retailers' association now informs me that it wishes to coöperate and I have no doubt will reply to my original propositions. In the meantime various state and local retail associations are assuring me that they will play the game.

"Some of the smaller groups of operators have refused to accept the basis that I have proposed, but the larger fields are coöperating to solve a difficult situation, as witness the halt in prices and their reduction in the past few days.

"There seems to be some mistaken impression that the secretary of commerce has any duty or authority to control prices other than the desire of the administration to use its good offices to protect the public.

"Congress has given no powers to the administration and in their absence if these good offices prove ineffectual it is up to congress to devise some other method."

Accept Hoover's Suggestion.

In his letter to Mr. Hoover, Mr. Stephens said:

"We will immediately study the specific suggestions you offer as a policy for guidance of the retail coal trade and we have no doubt but that we shall be able to agree without delay upon a program of coöperation that will accomplish the end which we have both had in view, namely, the fairest possible distribution of coal to the public and the maintenance of fair prices at all times."

The production of soft coal in the tenth week of the strike is expected to pass 5,000,000 tons, according to the geological survey. Production of anthracite, however, remains practically zero.

In the ninth week of the strike, May 29, June 3, the combined effect of the Memorial day holiday and of a pay day reduced production of bituminous coal to 4,623,000 tons. The output of anthracite was barely 8,000 tons, and the total quantity of all coal raised was 4,631,000 tons.

BRITISH WORRY AS PRINCE OF WALES VISITS IN EGYPT

LONDON, June 10.—There is much apprehension here concerning the safety of the Prince of Wales, who arrived yesterday at Cairo, the last stop on his homeward journey, with the exception of short visits at Malta and Gibraltar. Those who are fearful point to the anti-English feeling in Egypt and the recent assassinations of foreigners. All messages from Cairo give the impression that the welcome given him by the natives was a cool one.

PRINCE OF WALES. [U. & U. (C.) Photo.]

Reuter's Cairo correspondent says the prince and King Fuad exchanged visits today. The prince, seated in a motor car beside Viscount Allenby, the high commissioner, smilingly acknowledged the hearty cheers of groups of English people gathered along the route.

This afternoon the prince visited the native bazaars. Later he played number one on Pasha Yusry's polo team against the 9th lancers, scoring two goals. The gold cup won by Yury's team was presented to the Prince of Wales.

FRANCE QUIZZED ON $200,000,000 OF RUSSIAN GOLD

PARIS, June 10.—What became of the 400,000,000 gold rubles ($200,000,000) handed over to Germany by Russia under the provisions of the treaty of Brest-Litovsk, which were delivered to the allies by Germany after the armistice and transferred to the vaults of the Bank of France?

This is the substance of a written question put to Minister of Finance De Lasteyrie in the senate by Senator Gaudin de Villaine.

If the gold still is in the vaults, the senator asks if the French government should not request the Hague conference definitely to turn over the sum to France for the purpose of paying the interest due French holders of prewar Russian bonds.

DUTY ON RAZORS REDUCED, BUT IS STILL HIGH

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—Duties on razors were reduced by the senate today on the motion of the finance committee from those carried in the tariff bill as originally reported from the committee. The rates as approved, however, are not only much greater than in the present law but represent a large increase over those in the former Payne-Aldrich law. Democrats in attacking the new rates declared that they would be the equivalent of from 200 to 450 per cent ad valorem.

Details of Changes.

Duties were approved as follows:

Safety razors and safety razor handles and frames, 10 cents each and 30 per cent ad valorem, instead of 20 cents each and 30 per cent ad valorem, as in the McCumber bill as reported originally to the senate.

Razors and parts valued at less than 75 cents per dozen, 20 cents each, instead of 30 cents each, plus 50 per cent ad valorem, instead of 60 per cent.

Razors valued at more than 75 cents per dozen and less than $1.50, 30 cents each and 50 per cent ad valorem.

Razors valued at more than $1.50 and less than $3 per dozen, 35 cents each and 50 per cent ad valorem.

Razors valued at more than $3 and less than $4 per dozen, 40 cents each and 50 per cent ad valorem.

Razors valued at $4 and more, 50 cents each and 50 per cent ad valorem

Under McCumber Bill.

Under the McCumber bill the ad valorem rate in each bracket, except on safety razors, was 60 per cent. Each specific rate was reduced somewhat.

The Republicans defended the high rates proposed on the ground that they were necessary because of German competition. The Democrats challenged this contention.

The senate also approved finance committee amendments relating to antimony, bismuth, cadmium, metallic arsenic, nickel silver sheets, and gold leaf.

CHEMIST FINDS POISON IN MRS. BERGGREN'S BODY

Woman Died Suddenly a Week Ago at Morris, Ill.

Discovery yesterday by Coroner's chemist, W. D. McNally of a large amount of carbolic acid in her vital organs added to the mystery surrounding the death a week ago of Mrs. C. H. Berggren, wife of a wealthy Sioux City, Ia., business man, in Morris, Ill.

On the evening of her arrival in Morris to visit her sister, Mrs. Hans Samuelson, Mrs. Berggren was heard by members of the Samson family stumbling into her room and tearing at the wall with her fingers. Unable to speak and apparently in great agony, Mrs. Berggren died before aid could be summoned.

Suicide was scouted by police of Morris when no carbolic acid container could be found, and a prescription, obtained from a Morris druggist for her sick daughter, by Mrs. Berggren, when analyzed, failed to reveal a trace of poison. Dr. W. G. Sachse, coroner of Morris, appealed to Coroner Peter Hoffman for aid in solving the mystery.

Mr. Berggren, summoned from Sioux City, was unable to explain his wife's death, and declared that no secret worries oppressed his wife.

"She was in unusually good spirits," the husband declared, "and had looked forward to a reunion with her sister with great joy. There was no sorrow in her life of which I know, and we were very happy together. We had made plans for the summer with the baby."

Echo of War Hatred Heard in Fight for Kansas Child

Hiawatha, Kas., June 10.—[United Press.]—The long and bitter fight between the American family of C. C. K. Scoville, Kansas banker, and Baron Demumm, of the German wine maker family, for custody of Mary Demumm, 8, ended today when Mrs. Scoville left Seneca with the child to deliver her to Demumm in Chicago.

A daughter of the Scovilles married Demumm before the war. The war wrecked the international romance. The baroness died and her father, C. C. K. Scoville, was the victim of a fatal illness while fighting to save his grandchild's fortunes.

The court decision in New Jersey awarded custody of the child to Demumm.

JANITOR "TOO BUSY"; MARSHAL FOCH AIDS A BLIND SOLDIER

MARSHAL FOCH.

PARIS, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—"Excuse me, am I near the Wounded Soldiers' institute?" asked a blind veteran of a passing pedestrian as he tapped his way along the sidewalk. "I've only been there twice, and I'm not quite sure of the way."

"You are close to it now; let me take you," came the reply.

Arriving at the door, the guide said to the janitor: "Kindly take this man to the section for the blind."

"Take him yourself," growled the janitor. "Under the archway on the other side of the courtyard."

The civilian did so, but on the way out addressed the janitor again. "Couldn't you be a little more obliging to the bling?" he asked gently.

"There are too many, and I haven't the time," was the surly response.

"It seems to me it is your duty to help them," said the other. "I can find time, and I am Marshal Foch."

ASK DISBARMENT OF REMUS, JUDGE TRACEY, 3 OTHERS

Disbarment proceedings have been instituted in the Supreme court at Springfield by the Illinois State Bar association against four Chicago attorneys—George Remus, D. B. Brillow, Benjamin Wolf, and Edward T. Jurkowski—and against County Judge Andrew E. Tracey of Toluca, Marshall county.

Attorney Remus, known as the "millionaire bootlegger," was convicted of a number of violations of the prohibition laws in the federal courts at Cincinnati and it is on this record that disbarment is asked.

Judge Tracey is accused of the conversion of sums turned over to him for clients and correspondents, totaling less than $1,000.

Attorney Brillow is alleged to have made fraudulent representations to Superior Judge Charles M. Foell and Master in Chancery J. V. O'Donnell. Attorney Wolf is charged with failing to account for moneys coming into his hands for clients and Attorney Jurkowski with having applied money, given him to place in escrow, in payment of fees to which he was not entitled.

CONSCIENCE POOR BEACH CENSOR, SO ORDINANCE RULES

Suits This Year Must Be Within Law.

Let your conscience be your guide—but not as to bathing suits; for those read the city ordinance.

This was the dictum yesterday of Deputy Commissioner of Public Works Burkhardt, anent the opening of the public bathing beaches next Saturday.

"We tried the conscience rule once—we'll try anything once—and it didn't work," the commissioner said, "and so this year the city ordinance and not the bathers' consciences will govern bathing suits.

Points, Says He!

"Nature is truly wonderful," he continued, "but there are times—well, there are times, when it is best to hide some of its fine points. We have learned from experience in the past that the so-called bathing public's conscience must not be trusted. Moonlight beach parties, in which the noble sea lions and nymphs appeared in moonbeams and all that, you know. Tell 'em to read the city ordinance this year if they would keep out of trouble."

Four beaches—the Rogers Park, Clarendon, Rainbow (74th street), and Rocky Ledge (79th street)—will be officially opened next Saturday.

The ordinance says all bathers must wear "suitable dress," and prohibits white or flesh colored suits or suits that expose the chest lower than a line drawn on a level with the arm pits and sets the following "minimum requirements":

"Men—Must wear suits with skirt effect or shirt must be worn outside of trunks, except when flannel knee pants with belt and fly front are worn. In all cases trunks must not be shorter than four inches above the knee and the skirt or shirt must not be shorter than two inches above the bottom of the trunks.

Blouse and Bloomers.

"Women—Blouse and bloomer suits may be worn with or without skirts and with or without stockings, provided the blouse has one-quarter arm sleeve or close fitting arm holes and the bloomers are of a pattern that is full and not shorter than four inches above the knee. Ladies' jersey knit suits may also be worn, with or without stockings, provided the suit has a skirt or skirt effect reaching to within two inches of the bottom of the trunk."

The penalty attached for violations of the ordinance is a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $20 for each offense.

Guards will be placed at all street ends where bathing is permitted.

PRESIDENT EBERT'S MUNICH VISIT STIRS BAVARIAN PROTEST

PRESIDENT EBERT.

MUNICH, Bavaria, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The National Union of Patriotic Societies of Munich has issued an open letter to President Ebert, expressing disapproval over the proposed visit of the president to Munich next week. The declaration says the union is not against Herr Ebert personally, or against the republic, but rather against the system which he represents. As Bavarians, it adds, the union's members do not recognize Herr Ebert as the lawful head of the republic, according to the Weimar constitution.

ADMITS ROADHOUSE SLAYING.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 10.—Casper Jones confessed last night to the slaying of Chris Zimmerman, proprietor of the Oakley club, a roadhouse on the outskirts of Indianapolis.

MILLER TO GET NEW HEARING ON BAIL PETITION

Because of alleged charges made before the Supreme court that bail was denied "without the hearing of testimony," Chief Justice Scanlan yesterday granted a rehearing on a petition for bail by attorneys for Max Miller, indicted with four others for the murder of Abe Rubin last April.

The motion for bail was denied several weeks ago by Judge Joseph H. Fitch, who yesterday occupied the bench with Judge Scanlan. Judge Fitch pointed out to Attorney Rocco DeStefano of counsel for Miller, that though he was technically correct in saying bail was denied "without the hearing of testimony," the implied meaning of the phrase was false, because the motion had been decided on a reading of the coroner's minutes by agreement of counsel.

HURT IN FALL; DIES.

O. L. Johnson, 60, 714 North 7th avenue, died yesterday at the West Suburban hospital from injuries sustained several days ago in collapse of scaffold at the American Can company's plant in Maywood.

MILITARY HONORS TO MARK BURIAL OF WAR VETERAN

Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Capt. Frank B. Stretton, who died at San Antonio, Tex., on June 5, from the chapel at 2935 Madison street, to Our Lady of Sorrows church, Albany and Jackson avenues, starting at 9:45 o'clock in the morning. Interment will be in Mount Carmel.

A full military funeral will be accorded. Former officers and men of the 1st Illinois cavalry and 123d Field artillery will assemble at the chapel and march to the church under command of Maj. Gen. Milton J. Foreman.

Capt. Stretton is survived by his mother, Mrs. Pauline Stretton, and a sister, Margaret, both residing in Chicago. He was a member of Americus council, Knights of Columbus.

EX-MARINE A SUICIDE.

"Suicide," declared a coroner's jury, investigating the death of Joseph P. Gaul, former marine, despondent through inability to find work because of a paralyzed arm and side. Gaul shot himself Friday at 3017 North Racine avenue.

LET OUR RECORD BE YOUR GUIDE: FESS TO VOTERS

G. O. P. Achievements Are Campaign Keynote.

Columbus, O., June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Sounding the keynote of the coming Republican congressional campaign, Congressman S. D. Fess of Ohio, chairman of the congressional committee, tonight declared that the Republican congress has made good on every one of the platform pledges of 1920 and that Republican congressional candidates will face the voters this fall on an "affirmative platform." The address was made before the Buckeye Republican club.

"The problems to be solved by the congress during the last two years were ready made for the new administration," said the Ohio congressman. "They were created by the mistakes of the preceding administration. That is, they were made for and not by us as Republican congressmen.

Summary of G. O. P. Feats.

"As legislators we have faced and made good on the problem of reducing the cost of living, cost of government, and the taxation burden. Through the adoption of the federal budget system we have established a permanent safeguard against further extravagance such as characterized the preceding administration.

"We have arranged to finance the federal government by keeping within the budget and to carry immense special governmental financial burdens, and yet we have reduced the burden of taxation.

"We have taken steps to fund the immense foreign debt which grew out of loans to the allied nations during the war. This is of immense significance, as it means we have provided the financing of these vast obligations. Without this funding America could not have collected the interest upon the debts. The funding also removes the foreign debts from the realm of politics and makes them a straight matter of finance.

Three More Jobs to Do.

"Congress has three problems to complete the list of campaign pledges. These are enactment of a federal ship subsidy law, adoption of the bonus legislation, and revision of the tariff.

"Some of these measures may not be fully understood by the voters in their real significance and actual effect upon the economics of the nation. It is our special job to explain these matters to the voters, so they will understand just what has been done. We will do so fully before election day.

"And we rest upon that showing satisfied that the voters, when they fully understand what has been done, will give hearty and unqualified indorsement to the congress by electing a Republican majority to carry on the splendid work of the last two years."

RUSSIA'S MYSTERIOUS MONK, ILIODOR, HELD IN LATVIA AS A SPY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, June 10.—Iliodor, Russia's mystic monk who appears and disappears throughout Russia, has been arrested here while en route for a tour of Europe and America. He is being held by the political police, who accuse him of spying for Russia. It is stated that he married a member of a nunnery at Tsaritsin, where during the past year he ran a monastery.

ILIODOR.

Iliodor is one of the most famous figures of Russia, half the peasantry believing him to be divinely inspired and the other half believing him to be a devil. He is reputed to have made many marvelous cures through laying his hands on diseased persons. He founded religious cults which were love cults, and he always disappeared when little Iliodors began arriving.

Iliodor was a close personal friend of the monk Rasputin, whom he introduced to the late czar.

RIO'S LEADER IN WOMAN'S SPHERE DUE HERE TODAY

Dona Bertha Lutz, Brazilian delegate to the Pan-American conference of women, held recently at Baltimore, will arrive in Chicago this afternoon to remain for two days as a guest of the Illinois League of Women Voters.

DONNA BERTHA LUTZ.

Miss Lutz, who is the leader of the woman's movement in Brazil, is touring the United States in the interests of the exposition to commemorate the centenary of Brazilian independence, which is to be opened at Rio Janero Sept. 7, 1922. She hopes also to bring about a clearer understanding and closer cooperation between the women of the two Americas, a plan for which the League of Women Voters is working.

Miss Lutz will be the guest at a luncheon given by the Illinois League of Women Voters tomorrow noon at the Union League club, with Mrs. Henry W. Cheney, state president, presiding. Speakers will include Dr. Charles F. Millspaugh of the Field museum, Mrs. Arthur T. Aldis and Mrs. Willa B. Laird. Miss Lutz will make an address. In the afternoon there will be a tea for her at Ida Noyes hall to meet members of the faculty of the University of Chicago.

Tuesday Miss Lutz will be entertained at luncheon at the Art institute to meet Chicagoans distinguished in the sciences. The reception committee includes Mrs. Henry W. Cheney, Miss Jane Addams, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, and Mrs. James W. Morrisson.

INJURIES PROVE FATAL.

John Devlin, 2838 West Monroe street, died in West Suburban hospital yesterday from injuries received June 8, when he was struck by an Oak Park elevated train at the Euclid avenue crossing, Oak Park. Devlin was employed as a track laborer.

NEW YORK MAN IS MARRIED TO MISS DE WINDT

Miss Caroline de Windt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heyliger De Windt of Winnetka, and Albert Seliner Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gardner of New York, were married yesterday afternoon in the Congregational church, Winnetka. It was one of the season's smartest society weddings.

Robert H. Gardner was best man and Miss Alice De Windt matron of honor.

SENATE HEARS TRIBUNE QUOTED ON TARIFF BILL

presumably speaks the views of a very large constituency in the region in which it circulates; at least, I should imagine so.

"But the point I am making is that the paper, a leading Republican paper, is commending those of us who are endeavoring to scan the various items in the bill lest there shall appear to be in it thousands of items that are as open to criticism and objection as is the duty upon aluminum."

TILT OVER G. O. P. FUND

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—A tilt occurred in the senate today between Senator McCormick (Ill.), chairman of the Republican senatorial committee, and Senator Harrison (Miss.), Democrat, over the decision of the Republican leaders to raise $500,000 for the Republican national committee to finance a campaign to retain Republican control of congress.

Senator Harrison declared that the "sky's the limit" on Republican campaign expenditures this year. Senator McCormick promptly retaliated that "the sky's the limit" on Democratic misrepresentation. Senator Harrison pointed out that he had read of the Republican leaders' plans in a dispatch to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

"The senator overlooks the fact that I have THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE on my desk," said Senator Harrison.

"I do not," said Senator McCormick. "The senator has an excellent paper with which I am often in disagreement."

"And on the tariff also in disagreement," retorted Senator Harrison.

Tells of Wrigley's Contribution.

Referring to the conference at which it was decided to raise $500,000, Senator Harrison said: "Mr. Wrigley is quoted as saying, 'I'm not a speaker, but here is my check for $25,000,' and he handed it over to Chairman Adams. It must have cost them $3,000 or $4,000 to eat at the table. The sky is the limit for contributions to the Republican campaign fund this year.

"Wrigley, who got up the slogan of 'Wiggle and Wobble,' whom you took care of in the revenue bill by taking the tax off the chewing gum, was there. You legalize by law that railroads no longer give rebates, and yet here the Republican party says: 'Give us large contributions, Mr. Wrigley,' and he hands over a $25,000 check, and they rebate him by putting through congress a law that will take the tax off chewing gum."

G. O. P. Cut in Expenditures.

"The people know," Senator McCormick said, "that when the Republican administration took office it assumed responsibility for liquidating the economic consequences of the war and of governmental affairs during the months thereafter. They had a heavy task before them. The people have not forgotten that when the Republican party came into power the annual expenditure of the national government was at the rate of $6,000,000,000, and that under the budget system, the appropriations of this congress will not exceed $3,500,000,000. The people know taxes have been reduced by $1,000,000,000, that income taxpayers have been relieved that 'nuisance' taxes have been abolished, railroad rates reduced. These things they know, and they also know that in the last ninety days 2,000,000 idle men have gone to work because there is promise that this tariff bill will become a law. They know that by the time cold weather comes there will not be an idle man in this country.

Democratic Financial Aids.

"I count it no offense against citizenship that Mr. Adams and his associates are planning to bring the knowledge and details of the facts to the people. Mr. Chadbourne, if the steel merger reports are true, soon will be able to contribute again to the Democratic fund. And Mr. Charles F. Evans has returned and Mr. Baruche, who has gone to Europe, will shortly return. The senator from Mississippi says 'the sky is the limit' and it is the limit for the unfounded charges to which the opponents of this administration give utterance during these days in the congress of the United States."

GERMANY MAKES BIG CUT IN VISA CHARGE TO YANKEE TOURIST

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, June 10.—Germany has reduced its $10 visa charge for Americans to $2.40 for transit across Germany and $3.60 for crossing Germany and return.

A. M. THACKARA.

The $10 visé charges against Americans by all countries except France, Holland, and Switzerland have become such a burden on American travelers that Alexander Thackara, the American consul general at Paris, was instructed by the state department last month to ask all the European states to reduce transit visés, as America charges only $1 for transit visés, but $10 for ordinary visés.

A trip from Paris to Constantinople means $70 for visas even without stepping off the train, and even without seeing a country by daylight. Czecho-Slovakia also has consented to make greater reductions, and other countries promise concessions. Italy and Portugal have refused concessions.

MARS ONLY A SELLING PLATER TO EARTHLY MORVICH IN THIS RACE

Cambridge, Mass., June 10.—They're off!

It's a race between the planet Mars and earth.

Today Mars, the earth and the sun are in opposite, according to Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, Harvard astronomer. That is, they're in a direct line with each other. That's Mars, that red star over in the east.

The earth is a sure thing in this race, for from June 18 on the old planet on which we scratch for a living will nose ahead and gradually leave Mars far behind.

On July 19, last year, the two planets were on opposite sides of the sun, 242,120,000 miles apart. Today they are 42,709,000 miles apart. On June 18 they will be only 42,176,000 miles apart, and then the earth will pull ahead.

EDISON INVENTS ANOTHER LIST OF BRAIN BENDERS

Applicants for Job Have a Real Chance to Shine.

New York, June 10.—[Special.]—Thomas A. Edison is looking for a right hand man. Several hundred college graduates have been tested at the Edison plant with a new and improved questionnaire. Thus far, it is reported, Mr. Edison has not found a young man of sufficient intellectual attainment and promise to be his first assistant.

The first Edison questionnaire was a test for candidates for positions of minor importance. The new series, intended to search out a worthy pupil and personal assistant for Mr. Edison, is greatly elaborated and contains new types of questions.

The new Edison brain meter has questions devised to show how fast and how well the candidate can think.

For the New Assistant.

One of the questions follows: "You have only $10 in the world and are playing poker with a man you have never seen before. On the first deal he holds a pat hand; you have three eights before the draw. There is 50 cents in the pot. He bets a quarter. What are you going to do, and why?"

"Are you hard boiled?" is a verbal question which the inventor put to some of his candidates.

"Stand up; turn around," ordered Edison as candidates were led into his office and seated before him. Each had an uncomfortable half minute while the great man inspected the cut of his coat and the cut of his jib.

The candidate's answers were shouted to Mr. Edison, who is hard of hearing, by a secretary at his elbow.

Would You Blackmail?

"You are a salesman," is another question, "making every effort to get an order from a big manufacturer who is married to an unusually jealous wife. One evening you see this prospective customer dining in a restaurant with a chorus girl. What would you do?"

As in his first questionnaire, the literary questions are elementary, calling for only the thinnest smattering of knowledge, while the scientific questions could be answered only from an extraordinary range of scientific reading. The classical culture of the candidate is briefly canvassed by:

"What is the meaning of the following: 'Sic semper tyrannis' and 'Et tu, Brute!'"

Literature is also represented here and there in the examination.

"Can you name four localities where civilization existed 3,000 B. C.?"

"Why is it necessary for us to breathe?"

"How was the planet Neptune discovered and by whom?"

"Bound Persia."

"Who was Kit Carson."

"What are leucocytes?"

"How many square feet in an acre?"

How Fast Can They Run?

"Name approximate speed in miles per hour which can be attained by the following: A runner, an express train, an airplane, a rifle bullet."

"How can you prove by scientific apparatus that the world revolves?"

"What is the function of clover or beans in rotation of crops?"

"What is the volume of a rectangular piece of ice, 8 feet long, 7 feet wide, and with 2.4 inches of its thickness projecting above the surface of the pure water in which it is floating, if the specific gravity of ice is .9?"

"State briefly the necessary requirements for a manufacturing executive."

"Can you think of any event which has happened since Jan. 1, 1921, that will be reported in histories fifty years from today?"

An Old One but a Hard One.

"A man goes to a lake with a three gallon and a five gallon measure. How could he measure out exactly four gallons (using no marks on the can)?"

"'How come he ain't seen you was not home!' Write this in correct English."

"What three American coins make a dollar?"

"To what is the disease called beriberi due?"

"In what country was first laid the story of Evangeline by Longfellow?"

"What materials are used on the sides of boxes containing safety matches, by means of which the matches are ignited?"

"What are menhaden?"

LEAP TO DEATH

Locking her nurse in the bathroom yesterday morning, Mrs. Rose Wolfe leaped from a window on the fourth floor at 5492 South Shore avenue, breaking her back and arm. She died an hour later.

Mrs. Wolfe, a sister of Mrs. Jules R. Kahn, and the wife of Albert Wolfe, a Fort Wayne business man, had been ill several months. She arrived here for a visit Thursday.

FRENCH PRIESTS WHO MARRIED TO FORM A CHURCH

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, June 10.—Maxime Ardot, one of 600 French priests who have been expelled from the Roman Catholic church of France for marrying, announces the foundation of a national church.

"We consider marriage a necessary safeguard for a great number, and it is an indispensable liberty for all," he said. "Marriage is only a question of discipline in the church, and it is not dogmatic. Marriage was permitted in Catholic churches until 1059."

Mr. Adrot is finding support from among the other expelled priests. They say they will wear clerical garments, conduct services, and maintain themselves as priests.

Chicago Girl in Russia to Help Quakers' Relief

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

RIGA, Latvia, Jun e10.—Miss Dorothy North of 7 West Walton place, Chicago, and Karl Borders of 5703 Kenwood avenue, Chicago, have left Riga for Moscow, where they will join the American Friends' service committee. They expect to be stationed in Saratoff, where the friends are carrying on famine relief work.

Miss North, who is a daughter of Mrs. William Stanley North, spent much time in France aiding a Quaker reconstruction movement.

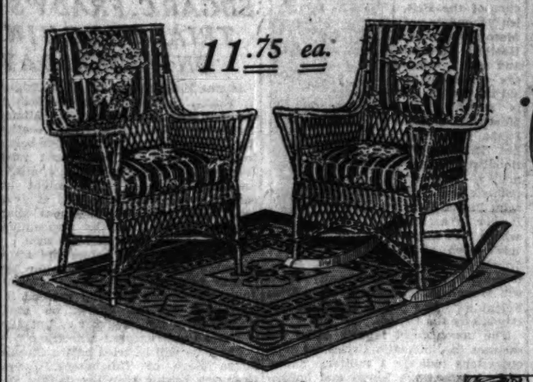
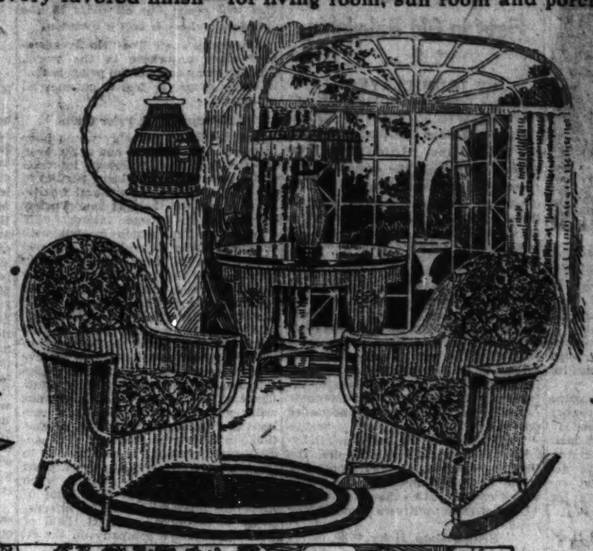
At Mandel Brothers'—fiber furniture
—three carloads at half price—June sale

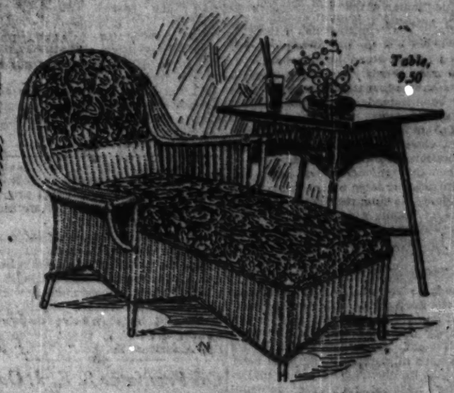
A well-turned trade transaction on a maker's "three carload surplus" netted us generous concessions. This, together with radical price reductions on discontinued numbers from our regular stock, culminates in quotations 50 per cent below those current. Fiber suites (in many instances but one of a kind) and fiber pieces in every favored finish—for living room, sun room and porch—are numerously represented in the lots.

Upholstered baronial chair or rocker, 11.75
They are equipped with comfortable, spring filled cushion on spring bottom and back semi-upholstered with excellent cretonne, as pictured below, 11.75. Also available in tapestry at 14.75.





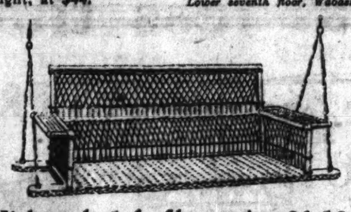
4-piece grouping of fiber, 149.50
For the living room or library, this little grouping in a soft leather brown finish and upholstered in velour, will "work in" very nicely with most any kind of furniture. Chaise longue (below), table, chair and rocker (at left), 149.50. Bird cage and stand (at left), 12.75.



Settee and two rockers for $44
Baronial finish suite with all braces and stretchers tightly wrapped with fiber. The broad arms and roomy seat make the set most comfortable. Settee and two rockers, as sketched below at right, at $44. Lower seventh floor, Wabash.

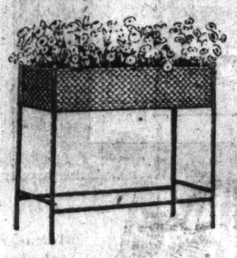
Fiber table, June sale, 9.50
Artistic, superbly constructed table, that will harmonize with many interior schemes—as pictured above, 9.50.

Fiber furniture is the ideal summer furniture—it is the most beautiful and most durable, lending "life" to the surroundings, and lasting longer than is commonly expected. Lower seventh floor, Wabash.



High grade 5-ft. fiber swing, 26.50
Closely woven fiber swing finished in baronial or grass green. Swing complete with chains, as pictured above, 26.50. Also in 6-ft. length, 29.75.

Fernery and bird cage, at 14.75
—as sketched at the right. Limited quantity.



Reed fernery, June sale special at $5
Sample reed ferneries, combination ferneries and bird cages, bird cages and stands in fancy finishes are to be disposed of. The fernery pictured at left is but one of the many styles.

Upholstered frosted brown 3-pc. set, 66.50
—with comfortable cretonne upholstered back, broad, restful arms and with separate spring filled seat cushions on spring bottom. 48-inch settee, chair and rocker, as illustrated below, for 66.50. Separate pieces available.

Five pieces for 59.50

5-pc. breakfast suite, 59.50
The table is constructed in the regulation gateleg style, with 42-inch wood top, with all legs and stretchers covered with fiber and finished in baronial. 4 chairs and table sketched at left, 59.50. Fiber buffet to match available.

Settee, chair, rocker—3 pieces, 59.50
—sturdily constructed of fiber and equipped with separate spring cushions on spring bottom and semi-upholstered back covered in a good grade of cretonne. The finish is India ivory. 48-inch settee, chair and rocker, as pictured below, for 59.50. Separate pieces available.

U. S. MAY DRY UP GOLDEN INK FOR FOREIGN BONDS

Want Issues Spent Here; Vast Sums Leaving.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—The American money market may be closed to foreign governments engaged in floating loans in this country, particularly the governments in South America, unless they will agree to expenditure of the funds in the United States.

For more than a year foreign governments have come to this country with their bond issues and by paying highly attractive interest rates—most of them as high as 8 per cent—they have borrowed close to $1,000,000,000 through international banking houses.

When this movement first began the administration took serious note of it. President Harding invited a leading group of bankers to dinner at the White House and insisted that no more loans be made until they had first been submitted to the government.

Think of Sam as Collector.

The bankers readily agreed, realizing that the good offices of the government might have to be invoked if any foreign borrower defaulted on either interest or principal. Since the White House conference all foreign loans have been examined in Washington before underwriting negotiations were consummated.

The amount of money being borrowed in the United States for foreign account, however, has reached so enormous a total—a total that continues to swell with each passing week—that high officials of the government are considering the desirability of a restrictive clause in future contracts requiring that the funds raised be kept at home.

The Federal Reserve Board itself refers significantly to the importance of keeping some, if not all, the gold borrowed in the United States at home, by means of contract stipulations insisted upon by underwriting syndicates.

That Loan to Germany.

Discussing the matter in connection with the proposal that an international loan be extended to Germany in order to help that country meet her reparation demands, the board says:

"Judging from experience during the first few months of the year, the United States is now lending funds to foreigners in large amounts. Indeed, for the first few months of this calendar year the movement has proceeded so rapidly as to create an adverse international balance.

"In view of this situation, coupled with the realtive decline in export trade, the question has been raised by not a few bankers and business men whether the advances made now and in the immediate future should be accompanied by restrictive clauses, requiring that such funds be spent in the American market."

BULGARIA FIGHTS ALLIED CONTROL OF HER FINANCES

SOFIA, Bulgaria, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Bulgaria refuses to accept the establishment of allied control over her finances, as proposed by the reparations commission, and will attempt to reopen the question at the Hague conference, it is declared by Premier Stamboulisky.

ALEXANDER STAMBOULISKY.

"I will not sign any such convention," the premier told the correspondent. "We refuse to recognize such a convention, and in so doing are basing our stand on the treaty of Neuilly.

"I am going to The Hague to ask the powers to appoint another commission to study anew Bulgaria's capacity for payment."

Oil Promoter S. E. J. Cox Acquitted of Fraud Charge

Houston, Tex., June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—S. E. J. Cox, oil promoter and aviation enthusiast, formerly of Chicago, was found not guilty of charges of using the mails to defraud in a verdict returned by a federal jury here late today. The jury had been deliberating since 4 p. m. Friday. Cox was tried on fourteen counts of an indictment returned in connection with the sale of oil and potash shares and leases.

They are said to be the first triplets sisters to be graduated from the same class.

YANKEE RIGHTS OVERRIDDEN AS BRITISH NAB OIL

U. S. Men Wage Uneven Fight in Old Babylonia.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BAGDAD, June 10.—Since the dawn of history the "Land of the Two Rivers" has been the crossroads between east and west. From the earliest days the struggle of world empires have centered around the possession of its wealth and resources and its commanding position on the world's trade highways.

Whether it was called the land of the Chaldees, Babylonia, Mesopotamia or Iraq has made no difference. Ownership of its fertile plains, its pasture lands, and above all, its ports and caravan routes have been a prerequisite to control of the world's commerce. Possession of its hinterland and the trade routes from the Mediterranean to the Persian gulf have given the fortunate nation in the saddle almost unbounded powers.

The kingdom of the Assyrians, Babylonia, the great Persian empire, the Grecian ascendency, the epoch of Rome and the empire of the Turks waxed or declined as their hold on the "Land of the Two Rivers" was firm or weak.

British Gain It by War.

Today, by the fortunes of war—a war of which one of the fundamental causes was approaching German control of the Constantinople-Bagdad route through a German railway—the British empire's flag floats over most of the land. Its troops bivouac in Ur of the Chaldees; a military wireless station caps the tower of Babel; Bagdad has become an English military center and Nineveh the forgotten, a campsite for British troops.

With the coming of the British army and British civilian control England has tacked up a "no trespassing" sign. She has said in so many words that the commerce of Iraq and the oil fields of untold wealth are hers to exploit.

The kingdom of Iraq covers a part of Mesopotamia. In return for the United States government's approval of the British mandate for Mesopotamia, United States citizens are granted equal rights with other nationals in the mandated territory. Whether this will cover the oil fields in the kingdom of Iraq is still a question.

Americans don't like "No Trespassing" signs anywhere in the world. The American commercial policy is that all lands should be free to commercial enterprise.

Americans Have Prior Claim.

The discussion probably would have been entirely academic had it not been for the fact that American interests had a prior claim to a large portion of the Iraq oil fields and mineral wealth. Were it not for the fact that Turkey granted to the Chester interests railway concessions which carried with them the right to exploit all mineral oils between the Tigris and the Persian border the United States probably would have been interested in Iraq only as a principle, and principles get rough handling when diplomats quarrel.

While the American state department has bombarded the British foreign office with notes to which evasive replies were given, the Anglo-Persian Oil company has become firmly established in the country. An enormous refinery and filtering plant has been built at Bagdad. Drilling and production has already commenced. The Anglo-Persian company is making hay in the sunshine of a friendly government and within another six months, when the time comes to take the claims of American interests before an international or national court the hold of the Anglo-Persian company on the oil of Iraq will be complete.

Salinas, Cal., June 10.—[United Press.]—A sharp earthquake shock was felt in Salinas this morning. No damage was done.

TURKS MASSING TO INVADE IRAQ, LONDON HEARS

Vast British Oil Fields Are Threatened.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 10.—Secret reports here state that the Turk nationalists are preparing to invade the kingdom of Iraq, a part of the British mandate of Mesopotamia. Hostile Kurdish and Arab tribes are expected to aid the Turks. It is stated that Mustapha Kemal Pasha, premier of the Turkish nationalist government, has appointed Gen. Kiazim Pasha Kara Belir Pasha, whose troops have been withdrawn from the west Anatolia front, to command the Caucasus army which will launch an offensive against King Feigal, who was put on the throne at Bagdad by the British.

KING FEISAL.

The unconfirmed reports cause uneasiness in diplomatic circles, as such operations indicate a military agreement between the Turks and bolsheviks. The seizure of Iraq, including the Mosul oil fields, by the Turks would strengthen the position of the Russian allies' oil holdings.

British Troops Still There.

Small British contingents remain in King Feisal's kingdom, and there is much ammunition remaining from the Bagdad operations, but the military leaders regard the Turks as better fighters than King Feisal's unorganized troops.

Oil interests here are interested and agitated by the report. Certain quarters assert Great Britain's sudden and keen interest in Armenia and the establishing of peace in Asia Minor is aimed directly to prevent the Turks from intruding in Iraq and other territories where the British have vast interests.

Pressure on Greeks.

Yielding to British pressure to maintain a solid front against the Turks, the Greeks in Constantinople have buried the hatchet with the Venizelists, and sixty-five officers of former Premier Venizelos' régime have been reinstated in the active Greek army lists and have been given commands at the front.

The attitude of the French in Syria in the event of hostilities on the part of Kemal is causing certain anxiety owing to the Franklin Bouillon trade treaty with the Turkish nationalists.

EDGAR C. FRADY'S TRIAL TO BEGIN ON WEDNESDAY

Miami, Fla., June 10.—Trial of Edgar C. Frady, Chicago automobile dealer, charged with the killing at Miami beach last winter of his wife, Dorothy Thompson Frady, is scheduled to begin in Dade county Circuit court next Wednesday. Reports that a continuance until the fall term might be sought apparently were set at rest today with the announcement that Frady's counsel and the prosecution were preparing for immediate trial.

Frady now has before the state Supreme court an application for his release from jail under bond, Circuit Judge Branning having refused it. Argument on the application took place nearly two weeks ago but the court had not rendered a decision.

The case will be tried before Circuit Judge Love of Tallahassee, Judge Branning having been disqualified because of a remark he is alleged to have uttered at the habeas corpus hearing before him several weeks ago.

AUTO VICTIM DIES.

Injuries received Friday when his automobile turned over while rounding a corner in Jackson park at 60th street resulted in the death yesterday of George Murry, 37, 10144 Avenue L, at the Illinois Central hospital.

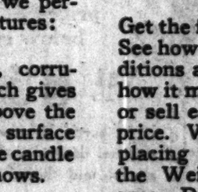
Why this famous boiler reduces fuel costs

Facts all should know about heating

THERE are two major functions that every boiler must perform to be perfect. First, completely burn all fuel; second, fully utilize every heat unit. Weil-McLain Boilers cut fuel costs because in them these two major functions are developed to the highest degree of perfection.

To attain complete burning of the fuel we perfected scientific combustion. Due to this feature each pound of fuel is entirely consumed—made to yield a maximum number of heat units. Waste is largely ended. To attain remarkable utilization of heat we perfected the three following valuable features:

First, the Weil-McLain fuel-saving, corrugated, double-surface crown sheet which gives double the heating surface directly above the fire. This is the most valuable heating surface in any boiler, as the candle test illustration shows.

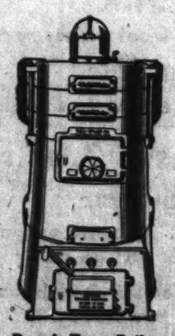


Second, in these boilers all other heating surfaces are also corrugated. This further promotes economy of fuel and heating efficiency.

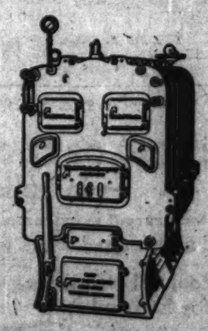
Third, a long "back and forth" fire travel which holds the hot gases in contact with all the fuel-saving corrugated heating surfaces. This acts as a final safeguard against waste of valuable heat units.

Other features which make Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boilers easy and economical to operate are: Large fire door; handy front clean-out doors for each section; smooth, non-clogging surface of lower one-third of fire pot; triangular grates which cut and shake out all ordinary clinkers.

Get the facts now about this remarkable boiler. See how it insures healthful heat under all conditions and at lowest fuel expense. Find out how it means not only a building that will rent or sell easier but one that will bring a higher price. Whether erecting a new building or replacing an old boiler, be sure to investigate the Weil-McLain at once. Descriptive matter will be sent on request, and also the name of a competent heating engineer who will properly advise you.



Round Type Boiler
With corrugated, double-surface crown sheet and all other heating surfaces corrugated; also long "back and forth" fire travel. Made for steam, vapor, vacuum and hot-water heating; suitable for residences, residences and 2-flat and 3-flat apartment buildings.



Square Type Boiler
Like the round type, has maximum heating surface directly above the fire and long "back and forth" fire travel. Made for steam, vapor, vacuum and hot-water heating; suitable for apartments, factories, schools, theatres and all public buildings.

ON CONVENTION MEETS TUESDAY; FAST WORK IS PLANNED

Expect Court Program to Go Through.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

The Illinois Constitutional convention, from all indications, is ready to get down to final agreement on the judicial and revenue articles of the proposed new constitution.

The convention reassembles in Springfield, Tuesday, prepared to work through two or three weeks of strenuous labor. As far as can be learned, the compromise that is to be worked out over the judicial article will take this general form:

All courts of Cook county will be merged into a single court, this to include the Circuit, Superior, Criminal, County, and Probate courts, the Municipal court of Chicago, and the City court of Chicago Heights. The ninety or more judges now seated within this merger would be divided into two branches, civil and criminal. Each of these divisions would be presided over by a chief justice, and the two chief justices would be designated by the Supreme court of the state, which will consist of seven justices, two of whom will be elected from Cook county.

Election Machinery Control.

Political objections that have been raised to the article as it now stands appear to be near elimination through the possible agreement that the election machinery of Cook county shall be under the control of one of the elected county officers, rather than of the chief justice of the civil division of the unified courts. As the chief justice will be named by a majority of the state judges, it is urged it would be a violation of the home rule theory to have him in control of elections.

As far as the proposal has gone, but, the constitution would leave to the legislature to choose the elective officer under whose supervision election machinery would come.

Plan Merger Clerkship.

Similar agreement is in sight concerning the combination and unification of the several court clerks into a single elective clerk, and the office will be combined the circuit clerk, probate clerk, Criminal court clerk, and Municipal court clerk.

ON CON MEETS TUESDAY; FAST WORK IS PLANNED

Expect Court Program to Go Through.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

The Illinois Constitutional convention from all indications, is ready to settle down to final agreement on the judicial and revenue articles of the proposed new constitution.

The convention reassembles at Springfield, Tuesday, prepared to sit through two or three weeks of concentrated labor. As far as can be learned, the compromise that is to be worked out over the judicial article will take this general form:

All courts of Cook county will be merged into a single court, this merger including the Circuit, Superior, Criminal, County, and Probate courts, the Municipal court of Chicago, and the City court of Chicago Heights.

The ninety or more judges combined within this merger would be divided into two branches, civil and criminal. Each of these divisions would be presided over by a chief justice, and the two chief justices would be designated by the Supreme court of the state, which will consist of seven justices, two of whom shall be elected from Cook county.

Election Machinery Control.

Political objections that have been raised to the article as it now stands appear to be near elimination through a possible agreement that the election machinery of Cook county shall be under the control of one of the elective county officers, rather than of the chief justice of the civil division of the united courts. As the chief justice will be named by a majority of downstate judges, it is urged it would be a violation of the home rule theory to leave him in control of elections.

As far as the proposal has worked out, the constitution would leave it to the legislature to choose the elective officer under whose supervision the election machinery would come.

Plan Merger Clerkship.

Similar agreement is in sight concerning the combination and unification of the several court clerkships. To a single elective clerk, and into his office will be combined the county clerk, probate clerk, Criminal court clerk, and Municipal court clerk.

The Citizens' Association of Chicago issued a statement yesterday, including a report of Frank J. Loesch as chairman of a committee that has been investigating the proposed merged courts. The Loesch report, which is approved unanimously by the directors of the Citizens' association, is a strong indorsement of the unified system with two chief justices to be appointed by the Supreme court.

HUSBAND, MOTHER, PLEAD FOR MISSING GIRL TO COME HOME

"Come home. No matter what the difficulty is, it will be smoothed over."

This plea was voiced yesterday by the husband and mother of Mrs. Hazel Spencer, 17 years old, 4161 Drexel boulevard. The girl disappeared on May 30, police were informed. She had $25 in her possession when she left her home. Her occupation is stenographer and switchboard operator.

MRS. HAZEL SPENCER.

Mrs. Spencer's husband is Fred W. Spencer Jr., who is now residing with his parents at 4845 St. Anthony court. They have been married two years. Mrs. Spencer's mother is Mrs. Edward Gliefke, 3622 North Marshfield avenue. No trace has been found of the missing girl. The reason for her disappearance has not been learned.

DR. HANLY GETS OFFICE VACATED BY DR. TAYLOR

Springfield, Ill., June 10.—[Special.]—Dr. H. H. Hanly of Peoria has been appointed a member of the medical examining committee of the state department of registration, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. L. C. Taylor of Springfield. Dr. Taylor resigned following disclosures in the department in a recent investigation.

Mrs. Turek, Confessed Slayer, Gives Up Child

Mrs. Victoria Turek, confessed murderess of her husband, who insisted on keeping her 8 month old baby, Dorothy, with her in jail despite efforts of Chaplain James Shields to have it sent to an orphanage, yesterday relinquished the child to her 19 year old son, Walter. He will take the girl to relatives, who will care for her.

HURLEY FREES 5 ELECTION JUDGES RIGHEIMER JAILED

"Liberty is not a mere shadow and no court can reach out and place persons in jail unless it specifies charges against them," declared Judge Timothy D. Hurley of the Superior court yesterday as he ordered the release of five election judges recently adjudged in contempt of court by County Judge Frank Righeimer and sentenced to varying terms in jail.

Judge Righeimer's ruling and consequent sentence followed investigation into alleged vote frauds in the Fifth ward, as a result of which indictments charging conspiracy to violate election laws were returned against the quintet. Those released yesterday at the final hearing of petitions for writs of habeas corpus, presented in their behalf by Attorney W. W. O'Brien, are Katherine Cleary, May Victor, John Maney, John Cusulik, and Bernard J. O'Neil.

Bears on Contempt Charges.

The order releases the election officials from the contempt charges only and has no bearing on the indictments, early trial of which is promised by the state's attorney's office.

During the investigation conducted by Judge Righeimer, in an effort to fix responsibility for discrepancies between poll returns and the official recount in the recent general election, the election clerks, acting on the advice of their attorney, refused to answer questions, pleading their constitutional privileges.

Release was opposed by Assistant State's Attorney James A. Scott, who announced that an appeal from Judge Hurley's ruling would be carried to the Supreme court.

Twenty More Judges Cited.

Coincident with the release of the Fifth ward election judges and clerks, totals of the official recount of the April primary election in four precincts of two wards were received by Judge Righeimer, who caused citations for appearance of twenty election judges from the first and second precincts of the Twelfth ward, and the first and fifth precincts of the Sixteenth ward to appear before him June 14.

Detectives Have Little to Do; Cells Are Empty

Rooms for rent signs might as well be displayed at the cell house in the detective bureau, according to Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes. There is a scarcity of "customers" that exceeds any record in the past two years. Only six inmates were in the strong-hold yesterday, all held on minor charges. Hot weather and police efficiency are responsible, said the chief.

$2,500 in Woman's Wear Carted Away by Burglars

Burglars with a fancy for lingerie, chemises and hosiery early yesterday morning carted away $2,500 worth of women's apparel from the store of Lanathan & Co., 4754 Sheridan road. Iron window bars were sawed to gain entrance. Captain John McCarthy of the town hall station detailed officers to investigate.

Why not, today, the pleasant experience of a family dinner in Brevoort Hotel?

Possibly, even though long resident in Chicago, you have not, as yet, had the experience of dining in the main restaurant of Brevoort Hotel.

For, although, throughout all its departments, this hotel has enjoyed most unusual fame and prestige among well informed travelers, many Chicago people, no doubt, look upon local hotel accommodation as, almost entirely, a convenience for visitors to the city.

As a matter of fact, through its restaurant service, the Brevoort has won the sincere friendship and warm support of many thousands of Chicago people. They have come to look upon the unique merit of the food and service therein provided, at fair moderation in cost, as one of the outstanding achievements of Chicago business enterprise.

And if they are right, as in all sincerity we believe they are, why should not you take advantage of the situation, to your greater satisfaction in restaurant accommodation? Why not, as occasion may offer, on business days, as well as on Sundays, take breakfast, luncheon, dinner or late supper in the Brevoort?

ENTERPRISE.

"There is no honest business," says Dr. Lyman Abbott in his Outlook Magazine, "in which a man can engage without serving his community. While serving his own interests the business man can not avoid serving his community as well; for his business prospers according to the service he gives. This age is rightly called a commercial age, and commerce is an interchange of services."

"This is simple truth. The men who have produced oil, lumber, copper, steel, coal, agricultural products and other commodities—make for all that constitutes the material wealth of the nation,—yet socialistic leaders loudly proclaim these men are exploiting natural resources and man-power. And the inference is anything one wishes to make it, that is not good.

"Is it not, in fact, a Christian service?

"We think so."

POPE RESENTS FRENCH REBUKE ON RUSSIA NOTE

BY V. DE SANTO.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
(Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.)

ROME, June 10.—Relations between the Vatican and France are dangerously approaching a breaking point according to a personage in close touch with the papal chancery. It is declared that Premier Poincare's declaration to the committee of foreign relations this week concerning France's disapproval of the Pope Pius' attitude toward Russia has produced a painful surprise to the pontiff and his entourage.

The informant said that since relations between France and the Vatican were resumed about a year ago many incidents have occurred which have deeply irritated both sides.

Spurns Political Pressure.

It seems that some weeks ago when the French ambassador to the Vatican, following M. Poincare's instructions, remonstrated against the pope for his friendly expressions toward Russia in a note which he wrote to the Genoa conference, the Vatican seriously contemplated recalling Nuncio Cerretti and requesting M. Jonnart to leave.

It is explained that the Vatican feels it has a high mission to perform, rising above political prejudices, and it will not endure pressure or influence on the part of any nation.

Nuncio to Make Report.

I am informed that Nuncio Cerretti will be recalled to Rome shortly to inform the Vatican fully as to France's sentiments toward the pope's self imposed mission of bringing about a permanent peace among the nations of the world.

BROTHERS GO TO TRIAL.

Edward Schickel will face his wife in the Court of Domestic Relations at the same time his brother Frank will confront his angry spouse at the Englewood court, Tuesday. The brothers were arraigned yesterday before Judge John F. Haas, charged with threatening their wives.

WOMEN'S TRADE UNION LEAGUE WANTS AID FOR HOUSEWIVES OF U. S.

Next year's bridegrooms will have to promise to love, honor and pay, if congress listens to the National Woman's Trade Union league which yesterday adopted a resolution asking for an investigation of the economic status of 20,000,000 women engaged in work in their own homes.

MISS ELIZABETH CHRISTMAN.

It was further recommended that the women's bureau at Washington conduct the survey for which an adequate fund would be appropriated.

Other resolutions passed concerned unemployment, child labor, nationalization of coal mines, world peace and prohibition enforcement.

The following executive board was elected: Mrs. Raymond Robbins, Miss Agnes Nestor, Miss Ethel Smith, Miss Pauline Newman, Miss Julia O'Connor, Mrs. Sarah Green, Mrs. Frank R. Halas of Chicago was elected a delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention to be held at Cincinnati. Miss Elizabeth Christman of Chicago was elected delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention in 1923, and Miss Mary Dreier to the Canadian Trades and Labor congress.

5,000 Volunteers Sign to Aid Salvation Army

Half of the 10,000 volunteers for Salvation Army work, pledged to give $1 and one day's service whenever called upon, have been obtained in the campaign, according to Mrs. Joseph Fish, chairman of the committee. The drive will continue this week.

BIG GATHERINGS OF CHURCH FOLK COME THIS WEEK

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Religious gatherings of state, national, and international interest are scheduled for this week. They are the Baptist Northern convention, the Illinois State Sunday school association, the international students' conference, and the Illinois state gathering of Presbyterians.

The Baptist Northern convention, which is the largest of the bodies to meet, will begin next Wednesday in Cadle tabernacle, seating 10,000, in Indianapolis. It represents a church membership of 1,500,000 and 4,000 delegates are expected in addition to representatives from foreign nations.

Loyalty Question Up.

The question of adopting or rejecting a creed by which Baptists may be classified as loyal or disloyal is thought to be the liveliest question to come up for settlement. The convention will be presided over by Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, the first woman ever elected at the head of a great ecclesiastical denomination.

The Illinois state Sunday school convention will meet in Galesburg, from Tuesday to Thursday. An attendance of 1,500 delegates, representing 7,298 Sunday schools and 849,000 members, is expected. Claud E. Tilton, Fairmount, is president and George N. Burnie, Chicago, is general secretary. The slogan of the convention is "Enroll, Educate, Evangelize, Enlist." Six churches and the armory will be used in the general and sectional meetings.

Students' Conference.

The international student conference, with more than 600 delegates, representing 100 colleges and universities and with students present from thirty different countries, will begin next Friday and continue to June 26, at Lake Geneva, Wis. A. J. "Dad" Elliott, executive secretary of student work, will be in charge of the conference. Among the speakers will be Bishop W. F. McDowell, Washington, D. C.; G. Sherwood Eddy, international students' work, and Glenn Frank, editor of the Century magazine. The Rev. C. W. Gilkey and the Rev. E. F. Tittle will be among the Chicago pastors who will speak.

The state gathering of Presbyterians will be held from Tuesday to Friday at Millikin university, Decatur. The Rev. Henry Seymour Brown, 16 North State street, will be in general charge. The conference is announced as solely for conference and inspiration and not for the transaction of ecclesiastical business. A woman's conference will have a place on the daily program. Denominational leaders from New York and Chicago will make addresses.

Black Plague Appear in Riga, Gateway to Russia

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, June 10.—Two cases of the black plague have been reported at Riga, the gateway to Russia, according to the Rigasche Rundchau. Two workmen were taken suddenly ill while unloading hides and horsehair from Russia. Specialists diagnosed their disease as black plague. The Russians call this the Siberian pest, which at present is appearing in the Volga and Siberian districts. It is also reported that glanders is spreading in the Ukraine, 20,000 horses being affected.

METHODISTS ARE READY FOR BIG CAMP MEETING

A committee of five members, to take charge of the general program for the 63d annual Des Plaines camp meeting, was appointed yesterday when 400 Methodist minister and trustees from various churches met at the auditorium near the camp grounds.

The five who will deliver addresses during the meeting which will open on July 5 with the annual campfire will be Bishops Thomas Nicholson, W. O. Shephard, Charles W. Burns, Prof. E. D. Soper and Prof. Leslie E. Fuller of Northwestern university. The Rev. Ernest F. Tittle, of the First Methodist church of Evanston, spoke on the "Authority of Religion" at yesterday's meeting.

9 Watermelons Per Boy Not Punitive Once, Judge!

John Perfect, 4731 Arthington street, and Edward Scott, 4711 Arthington street, both 17, led into temptation by a car of watermellons in the Baltimore & Ohio railroad yards Friday, ate eighteen of them. Judge Lawrence B. Jacobs, in the Boys' court, yesterday decided the effects of the feast would be almost sufficient punishment.

15,000 RUSH TO STAKE CLAIMS IN DIAMOND FIELD

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The biggest rush in the history of South Africa's alluvial diamond diggings occurred at Mosesberg, sixty miles from Kimberley, today, when about 15,000 diggers from all parts of the union and Rhodesia pegged out their claims.

The line of start for the peggers extended over four miles, and immediately after the proclamation was read the diggers, each carrying four pegs, rushed to the points they favored.

There were no casualties, which is regarded as remarkable, considering the number of claimants and the excitement engendered by the rush.

Fog Forces Transfer at Sea of 750 Aboard Olympic

CHERBOURG, France, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—In a thick fog out in the open sea 750 of the White Star liner Olympic's passengers for Cherbourg were transferred during the middle of the night to tenders and landed at Cherbourg without mishap this morning. This was done to obviate the necessity of the Olympic taking the hazards of entering the French port in the "pea soup" fog.

The Shingle that never curls

It's the stuff underneath the slate that makes the Shingle non-curling and lasting

Genuine Carey Asfaltslate Shingles differ from substitutes and imitations because they have a thicker, tougher, heavier felt body thoroughly waterproofed with highly refined asphalt. These materials give Asfaltslate Shingles their real base and make them noncurling under all conditions.

And now we offer a new and most desirable finish—blue-black. This blue-black crushed slate makes the surface of natural beauty which harmonizes with the landscape.

(We also supply Asfaltslate Shingles finished with Indian Red or Sage Green slate.)

QUICK, WATSON, MY RADIO! DIRTY WORK'S ON TAP!

Crystal Detector Aid to 1922 Sherlock.

BY CHARLES SLOAN.

Radio as a means of preventing crime and capturing criminals is making rapid strides, according to recent reports.

Just a few days ago four bandits walked into the First National bank of Crafton, Pa. They shot down one clerk, locked the others in the vault, and escaped with more than $25,000 in currency.

Herbert W. Haberl, a student in the Carnegie Institute of Technology, saw the bandits' subsequent flight. He hurried home to his radio transmitter, flashed the number of the bandits' automobile to a Pittsburgh amateur, who promptly turned it over to the police.

As the robbers entered the outskirts of Pittsburgh they were met by squads of detectives. A running fight ensued, in which the car was wrecked and the money recovered. The thieves made their escape, however.

Chicago police are now broadcasting reports daily. This isn't new, however. As far back as 1902 wireless word flashed from Catalina Island following the escape of two criminals with a boat load of goods was picked up in San Pedro, Cal., and the criminals captured.

In other branches of the industry satisfactory progress is also being reported. In England there has been developed a device which will automatically register a distress signal in the radio rooms of all ships within several hundred miles of the sender. The new device doesn't conflict with other radio signals. Ten ships are already equipped and twenty-five others will soon be placed in service.

Word comes from France that radio equipment ranging from 250 to 1,000 watts capacity is to be installed on more than 200 French fishing schooners.

Radio programs for today begin with church services at 3:30 p. m. and close with an entertainment by the Drake Hotel orchestra at 8 p. m. The programs follow:

3:30 p. m. [Station K-Y-W]:

Flag day sermon. Text—Psalm 60:4 "Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth." Patriotic sentiment: "Red teaches: be brave; white: be pure; blue: be true."

LONDON HOTELS BLAME HIGH COST KICK ON U. S. HICK

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright, 1922, By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, June 10.—[By TRIBUNE Wireless.]—American tourists who protest against the high prices abroad are regarded as cheap skates by Englishmen with whom they come in contact and to whom they make complaints. THE TRIBUNE'S articles about the increased cost of living and traveling abroad have been cabled back here, and the "Brighter London association," through the local press, has redoubled the campaign to prove this city the gayest, most glittering, and the most reasonably priced community in the world.

There are no discriminations against Americans in London like those in Germany, Bavaria, and other continental countries. Englishmen, Canadians, and Australians pay exactly the same for drinks, meals, hotel rooms, and taxicabs as Yankees. Only there are ten Americans living and dining in the big hotels to one person of any other nationality during the big season.

"You must remember the class of Americans visiting Europe now is very different from that of pre-war days," said a hotel manager. "There is a keener desire for Americans to do Europe cheaply. The Mauretania's concert collections amount to a third of what they did before the war.

"Want the Best; Not Use to It."

"The majority of Americans that I have seen this year are of a type that never think of staying at the expensive hotels when at home. Arriving in London they choose headquarters at a hotel similar to Sherry's and the Biltmore. The trouble begins when they compare first class hotel charges of Europe to those of the minor establishments to which they have been accustomed in America.

"We call these folks cheap skates for when they return home they are full of stories of extortion. They have an exaggerated idea of the fall in prices due to the exchange values. They are disappointed when goods and accommodations are not absurdly cheap."

Calls U. S. Prices Higher.

A representative of the Jordon hotels said: "American hotel prices are at least 100 per cent higher than the British. The latter have fixed prices for an outside room with a bath of from thirty to thirty-five shillings, about $7. American hotels of the same class as the Plaza, the Ambassador, Waldorf, Vanderbilt, St. Regis, Drake, and Blackstone charge at least $11 for such rooms. The first class hotels of London never think of charging Americans any more than any one else for accommodations and food."

A Savoy representative said: "The question of nationality never enters—the fixed charge for each room is never altered. Contrary suggestions usually are the result of propaganda across the Atlantic to keep American money in America, but more money will be brought from America this season than ever before."

Regarding the treatment of Americans a Yankee millionaire had this to say: "Of course the American gets soaked when he goes to Europe, but only when he permits it. With ordinary common sense he need only pay the same as any resident of the country in which he is staying. I don't get soaked. I know the ropes."

KILLED BY THIRD RAIL.

Scores of persons witnessed electrocution yesterday of John Shea, 60 years old, laborer for the Aurora, Elgin and Chicago railway, when he stepped on the third rail at Maywood, between 4th and 5th avenue.

LEGION NOTES

State Senator James E. MacMurray of the Illinois legislature and Admiral Fullam, retired, U. S. N., will be speakers at the noonday luncheon of Advertising Men's post Monday noon in Mandel's ivory room. The post will help in entertaining delegates to the advertising men's convention in Milwaukee, who will pass through the city Sunday morning. Breakfast will be given in the Morrison hotel.

Square Post Hikers' club will hike to Palos tomorrow. Members will meet at 10 o'clock at the elevated station, 63d and Halsted streets.

North Shore post, now the largest Legion unit in the city, will present Harry L. McClellan, commander of Tank Corps post, with an ebony and silver gavel at the post meeting Monday night, June 12, at 111 West Adams street. Several state officers of the Legion will be present and an interesting program has been planned. All legionnaire and the public are invited.

New officers of Eaton-Priddy post auxiliary will be installed at the auxiliary meeting and luncheon at the Windermere hotel this afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Lake View post will meet Monday evening at 654 Barry avenue. The regular business meeting will be followed by a smoker and athletic carnival.

PILLORY WINS RICH BELMONT STAKES

BEATS SNOB II. IN CLASSIC TEST OF SPEED, STAMINA

Wilson Horse Tops Year's Money Makers by Win.

New York, June 10.—[Special.]—Pillory, sturdy and game son of Olambala, added to the certificate of merit which he gained in the Preakness a month ago the seal of real greatness today when he carried the old gold and green racing colors of R. T. Wilson Jr. to the fore in the fifty-third renewal of the $50,000 Belmont stakes over one and three-eighth miles at Belmont park. Struggling along nearly three lengths behind the winner came J. S. Bache's soundly beaten Snob II., which from the time when he merely settled home far ahead of this same Pillory in the Withers mile until the finish today, had been acclaimed not only as a certain victor in the Belmont as the most formidable rival of the talented Morvich among the 3 year olds of 1922.

Rear Admiral Grayson's Hea finished third, with the Quincy stables' candidate, Ray Jay, a dismal last, far in the rear. The winner's time was 2:18 4-5.

Trails Field at Start.

Pillory scoffed at distance, and his stride grew smoother and longer the farther today's race progressed, although he was content to let Snob II. set the pace until the final loop into the stretch. Then, coming from the rear, four or five lengths behind Snob II., Pillory moved past Ray Jay and Snob and closed on the outside of Snob II. with a rush. Under Jockey Kummer's whip the French bred son of Ormus folded up.

Before the race the layers of odds quoted only 2 to 5 on the Cosden colt. He was next in demand at 9 to 2, with 4 to 1 against Pillory and 20 to 1 against Ray Jay.

Snob Sets Fast Early Pace.

Contrary to his other two starts this season, Snob II. took the track at the outset to show the way. When Snob dropped past the three-quarter pole he was timed in 1:15 2-5.

The value to the winner was $38,700, and Owner R. T. Wilson received, in addition, a $500 piece of plate, contributed by Maj. August Belmont. Pillory was ridden by C. H. Miller.

Pillory, which won the $51,000 Preakness at Pimlico, May 13, by virtue of today's triumph, is the top money winner of the present turf season.

GOTHAMITE WINS 12 MILE RACE IN LEGION'S MEET

Philadelphia, Pa., June 10.—Ilmar Penn of New York, running unattached, won the American Legion road race of 12½ miles from Villa Nova to the city hall plaza this afternoon. The race was part of the Legion track games. He was a mile ahead of the second man. His time was 1:11:55. August Pagay, New York, also running unattached, was second. John Gaughan of Morningside A. C., New York, was third. Summaries of feature events in connection with the meet:

One mile National Legion championship—won by Dan Read, R. E. Greeley post; second, Fred Post 35; third, Kelly of McKinley post. Time, 4:40 3-5.

100-yard dash National Legion championship—won by Harold Lever, Philadelphia; second, John K. Norton, Washington, D. C.; third, F. C. Williams, Philadelphia. Time, :10.

MISS CUMMINGS DENIES SHE WILL PLAY FROM EAST

Miss Edith Cummings of the Onwentsia club, who arrived home yesterday, stated that reports from the east concerning her play in the Metropolitan championship were incorrect. As a member of the Westbrook club, she stated, she was eligible to play in this event, and she had no intention of locating permanently in the east. She expects to compete in a number of the women's Western Golf association events this summer.

Dexter Cummings, her brother, who has just finished his first year at Yale, returned home yesterday. He is planning to take part in the western amateur championship at Kansas City.

NOVOTNY WINS U. OF I. GOLF MEET

Champaign, Ill., June 10.—[Special.] Ernest O. Novotny, a junior of La Grange, defeated Rial Rolfe, sophomore of Chicago, today for the University of Illinois golf championship. Novotny survived a field of thirty-six contestants and vanquished Rolfe, 3 and 4, in thirty-six holes. Novotny was elected captain of the university golf team for next year after the final round in the championship.

MITCHELL WINS 1,000 GUINEAS FINAL FROM RAY

BY I. RICHARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GLENEAGLES, Scotland, June 10.—In a distinctly poor game, which came as a disappointment to a large throng of spectators, Abe Mitchell beat Ted Ray in the final match of the professional golfers' annual 1,000 guineas tournament, 2 and 1, here today. The fact that the two longest hitters in the game were opposed to each other was enough to draw a record crowd, but there was little of the spectacular in any part of the match, and the standard of play was decidedly low.

The first round of the 36 hole final was somewhat better than the second. Ray was 3 up at the eleventh hole, but Mitchell managed to square the match at the eighteenth. The tide turned in Mitchell's favor early in the second round, and he was 3 up at the turn. This lead Ray pulled down to 1 at the thirteenth, but Mitchell won the fifteenth, 4 to 5, becoming 2 up again, and the sixteenth and seventeenth were halved in 4s, giving him his winning margin of 2 and 1.

Neither Attempt Slugging Game.

Neither contestant attempted the slugging game, despite their known prowess in this line. In fact, it wasn't until the first round was over that Mitchell began to hit the ball cleanly. Under these circumstances, he hardly would have been able to square it if Ray had not missed so many chances.

Ray should have maintained his lead of 3 up, after the short eleventh had been played, but at the sixteenth he was within a yard of the hole only to miss a putt for a 2, and allowed his opponent to halve. The seventeenth was the most difficult hole for Ray, and owing to awkwardness in retrieving a badly placed shot, he lost the hole, his ultimate downfall beginning here.

Mitchell's Luck Aided.

Mitchell's luck partly aided, too, as at the eighteenth his tee shot was so violently hooked that it flew eighty yards off the line. But the shot was so very crooked that it carried over trouble into another fairway.

Golf never rose above commonplace, and sometimes was actually bad. Mitchell was obviously ill at ease when the game was going against him, and at times his judgment was sadly at fault. For instance, at the sixth he smothered his drive and laid his ball behind a tree. The obvious shot was to play out on the course, but instead, he attempted to guide the ball through the branches.

Faulty Play Is Frequent.

As everyone expected, and as the player himself would have known, if he had thought out his position, he hit the tree, and the ball stopped in the rough only thirty yards ahead.

For the full round, Mitchell's score was a little under 80, and Ray's about 75.

Yankee Craft Has Sweep in International Races

Bayside, N. Y., June 10.—Polka Dot, E. A. Bull's American model yacht, gained possession of the international championship trophy for small craft today by decisively defeating its English rival, W. J. Daniels' Endeavor, for the third straight time. The victory made a clean sweep of three races for the Yankee craft.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT.

ILLINOIS' refusal to participate in the National Collegiate track meet at Stagg field June 16-17 has aroused a tempest of controversy among Wakers interested in college sport. Majority opinion disapproves the decision of Harry Gill, Illini coach. Here are a few communications typical of the many received:

Dear Harvey: It sure hits us hard that Gill has decided not to enter his (and our) team in the National meet. As an Illini, I feel that the team should have been entered.

The withdrawal—for that is what it really is—means that Illinois will be branded "yellow" and you know that the Illini are fighters. I remember when the first meet was held how Griffith urged all Illini to give the meet at least moral support. I don't doubt that the Illini relay carnival will suffer as will the Illini reputation for good sportsmanship.

Maybe Illinois would not be able to win, but surely it is more honorable to lose after trying than to slink away altogether. I am indeed surprised that "G" should have acquiesced in any such plan.

A Real Illini.

Dear Wake: In defense of Illinois, position, it should be stated that her whole athletic policy is based on wide student activity in athletics. It is seldom that Illinois has a team of stars. Most of her track and field athletes were novices, unheard of as freshmen, and developed through a system that interests large numbers of students to try to do something.

Tradition at Illinois has always given the lion's share of the honors to the plugger who through persistency and hard work makes the team. Illinois men, while disappointed, see behind Gill's decision an honorable stand for the principle for which Illinois has stood in athletics and for which the track team has always been the most successful illustration. G. M., Illinois '10.

Dear Wake: Allow me to contrast statements of two athletic coaches. Knute Rockne, athletic director at Notre Dame, made this statement last winter after the Taylorville-Carlinville football scandal, in which Illinois also was involved, became known:

"This scandal has left us without a single regular for the 1923 football team. It has wrecked our basketball team, crippled our track squad, and ruined our baseball chances. But we'll put teams in the field in every branch of athletics and we'll fight to the end. Perhaps we'll get licked, but we'll lose fighting to the final whistle."

From Harry Gill, track coach at Illinois: "I cannot enter a team in the National Intercollegiate track meet that would make a showing to uphold that which it has made in the past. Besides I don't like the system of scoring."

So Illinois, claiming to have the best track team in the country, pulls a crawfish at the last minute, apparently because not sure of winning.

D. M. R.

Friend Harve: Gill's refusal to enter his great team recalls an incident of several years ago on Stagg field. Illinois team, year after year, had been beating Stagg track men and after each dual meet, Stagg sought out Gill to offer personal congratulations. In 1915, Chicago reversed the story and won by a slight margin.

After the final event, Gill walking alone to the gymnasium across the field, passed within ten yards of the "Old Man" and did not even so much as nod his head in recognition. The writer was standing beside Stagg when this incident occurred. Chicago '15.

Dear Wake: In the days of the Hawthorne foreign book, I bet $20 even a place on Hy Dy at St. Louis. As the race was called, Hy Dy was third. Thinking the call official, I tore up my ticket. It developed that Hy Dy was second by a "face."

Told Joe Ullman my story and two days later after it had been established my story was true because the ticket had not been presented to be cashed, Joe handed me my $40. If mine was the only vote to be counted, Joe could have been elected governor that day.

IRISH HERE TO BOOST 'OLYMPIC' 2,500 YEARS OLD

The Tailltean games, which 2,500 years ago were the Irish "Olympics," will be revived and held in Dublin on Aug. 5 to 14, according to Seamus Dobbyn, the games' representative, who arrived in Chicago yesterday to organize a local committee to hold trials in the middle west on June 24. Competition in the trials is open only to athletes of Irish extraction.

The usual list of events will be held in the midwest trials and the winners will go to New York to compete in the final tests to select an American-Irish team, which cannot include more than 112 men.

The American team will make the trip to Ireland first class, according to Commissioner Dobbyn, and will be met by a reception committee, and everything done for its comfort. The Irish delegate asserted that full teams will be sent to the games from England, Scotland, Wales, South Africa, Australia, France, and Sweden.

The games will be operated under government supervision. A sum of money has been set aside and $100,000 already spent in the erection of a stadium.

CHICAGO BOY NET STAR, YALE CAPTAIN, WINS CONNECTICUT TITLE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 10.—Lucien E. Williams of Chicago, captain of the Yale tennis team, defeated J. B. Morse of New Haven in the finals for the Connecticut state singles championship at the New Haven Lawn club today, 6—2, 6—3, 6—3. In the doubles championship A. H. Chapin Sr. and A. H. Chapin Jr. of Springfield, Mass., defeated W. F. Vaughn and G. M. Wheeler of Yale, 6—2, 7—5, 7—5.

In an exhibition match William T. Tilden II., Philadelphia, and Arnold Jones of Yale defeated Carl Fischer of Philadelphia and William Bettens of San Francisco in straight sets.

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 10.—[Special.]—The Cubs and Robins put on a farce in nine acts here today. Three Cub pitchers acted as the clowns, while the thirteen Brooklyn players injected into the show were the heroes in the eyes of the home folks. the show will go down in the annals of the league as a 13 to 0 victory for the Robins.

ERNEST OSBORNE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The three Cub pitchers, Tony Kaufmann, "Kewpie" Osborne, and Alex Freeman, looked like the greenest of semi-pros, Kaufmann being routed in the first inning on four straight hits, while Osborne gave way in the fourth after being slammed for seven hits and four runs.

Freeman Faces Barrage.

Freeman was sent in to relieve Osborne, but immediately got into so much difficulty that he was left on the slab to face the music, and he danced to the tune of base hits that rattled around his feet and over his head.

Twenty-four solid swats were registered off the Cub trio while Dazzy Vance, who started for the Robins, and Decatur, one of Robbie's recruits, who relieved Vance in the sixth inning after a twelve run lead, held the Bears to seven scattered safeties.

Jimmy Johnston led the victors' swatting with five raps in five trips to the plate, one of them a triple. Bert Griffith amassed four base hits, while Ward made three.

Seven Runs in Fourth.

The Robins scored four runs in the first and routed Kaufmann with four hits and a sacrifice fly and came back with one in the third off Osborne. The locals broke out in the fourth and batted in seven runs, twelve men facing Osborne and Freeman, and clouting the ball for eight solid swats, including a double by Wheat and a triple by Ward. One more run tallied in the fifth on three hits and one in the eighth on a double by Schmandt and Taylor's single.

The Cubs didn't really have a chance, but doddered along in a half hearted way, and it seemed as if their sole hope was to get the battle over.

Manager Killefer held a consultation with President Heydler of the National league today, seeking reinstatement, but this was refused, and it is likely that Bill will decorate the stands and press box for at least a week.

HOME RUN BAKER, HIT BY PITCHED BALL, TO HOSPITAL

St. Louis, Mo., June 10.—Frank Baker, veteran third baseman of the New York Americans, was taken to a hospital here this evening suffering from an injury caused by his being hit in the right side of the back with a ball pitched by Urban Shocker in the third inning of today's game. No announcement was made at the hospital as to the extent of his injury.

An X-ray examination showed no ribs were fractured, as had been feared, and Baker was removed to a hotel. He will be out of the game a week or more.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question W. Conner, 300 North Oak Park avenue, Oak Park, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you think our colleges and high schools devote too much time to athletics?

Where Asked.

Corner of Madison and Dearborn streets.

The Answers.

Robert R. Fay, Oak Park, Ill., salesman—I do not. I was actively interested in sports when I was in college, and I realize the value of athletic work to the student. It not only broadens the mind, but it makes the boys physically fit to enter their life's work. The late war showed the value of physically fit men.

Miss Helen Jahnke, 6441 Eberhart avenue, stenographer—I never thought so; rather the reverse if anything. The high school and college period is the developing time of life and the boys and girls while studying and broadening mentally, gain the physical benefit that athletics provides.

Raymond Englert, 714 North State street, decorator—I believe high schools devote too much time to athletics, but I do not believe colleges do. College students can afford to spend a little more time in athletics because they are farther advanced, but in the high schools they have so much to learn that I believe they would be better off if they devoted their entire school time to their studies.

Miss Edythe Johnson, 7424 Rhodes avenue, cost clerk—Athletics are beneficial to the growing student. If the boys and girls gave thought, energy, and time to athletics it would prove helpful to them. Naturally I am inclined to be a booster for athletics.

Albert Lyons, 22 West Van Buren street, cook — The schoolboy or girl requires a considerable amount of exercise to keep fit, just the same as grown-ups do. If they are going to reach the goal of success minds and bodies must be well oiled and smooth working. Athletics will make that possible.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Having felt pretty fair after bowling over the Yankees the day previous, Willie Gleason's White Sox put on another celebration yesterday and ruined Boston's red hosed gents by 10 to 5. A flock of base hits, well bunched, along with a comical defense on the part of the visitors, provided the vehicle that carried the tail enders to victory.

BILL PIERCY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Four hurlers were employed by Hugh Duffy and three of them took it on the run. For a starter there was Russell. Less than an inning ended him. Then came Karr. He fell into a peck of trouble in the fourth and Pennock, the ancient southpaw, relieved him, but not until the inning had produced five runs and clinched the matinée. After that Pennock had a comparatively easy time for two innings, and Bill Piercy finished for him. The latter did not allow a hit in two frames.

JOCK, DOWNEY TO ENTER RING WITH ODDS EVEN

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Although some interesting boxing contests have been held near Chicago in recent years, it is doubtful if any has created so much talk and led to so many arguments as the contest between Jock Malone of St. Paul, and Bryan Downey of Columbus, to be held at Aurora on Tuesday night.

Both fighters have numbers of friends and the boys will enter the ring with the betting odds even. The general opinion is that Downey must start from the bell to slow up Malone. If he fails to get the St. Paul fighter early in the fray, the railbirds claim Jock will win off by himself.

All doubt as to Downey not being in shape was dispelled yesterday with the arrival of Jimmy Dunn, the fighter's manager. Dunn came to inform Matchmaker Mullen he had decided at the last moment to work Bryan another day in Cleveland. Downey will go through his paces at the Arcade today and tomorrow and leave for the battleground tomorrow night.

Downey Fit for Fray.

"Downey is in wonderful shape," Dunn said. "In his boxing bouts with John Karr, who held Malone to a draw recently, he nailed Karr with either hand whenever he wished. He has learned to time his punches with the result they generally hit their intended marks. I will send him out from the first tap of the bell and it will be a fight all the way."

As is the case when a boxer and fighter mix, a great contest generally takes place. Downey is so uncertain with his punches that he may pull one from the floor and connect. The Columbus fighter tears in all the time and never backs away.

On the other hand Malone is of the stand off type who can use a left hand effectively. He can sock with the right. If Jock cannot stop Downey's rushes with his left hand, he will mix.

The boxers are scheduled to weigh 158 pounds or less at Aurora at 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon.

Schaefer-Smith Go.

In the eight round semi-windup, Frankie Schaeffer, local 130 pounder, will meet Mattie Smith of Racine. Ross Murphy, stockyards lightweight, will make his professional debut by taking on Young Army of Chicago Heights in the six round opener. Jack Eile, local 122 pounder, and Mike Eulo of the west side will trade punches for eight rounds in the second preliminary. Dave Miller will handle the Downey-Malone bout, and Dave Barry, assisted by an Aurora referee, will officiate in the preliminaries.

Tickets are on sale at 129 N. Dearborn street, and 153 N. Clark street Special trains will leave over the Aurora and Elgin electric at 6:50, 7:05 and 7:15 daylight saving time on Tuesday evening. They will return immediately after the show.

Herbie Schaeffer, local bantamweight, will finish strenuous training today for his ten round bout with Bud Taylor of Terre Haute at Indianapolis on Tuesday night. Eddie Kane, manager of Taylor, left last night for Terre Haute to take Taylor to the battleground. Schaeffer will leave for Indianapolis tomorrow.

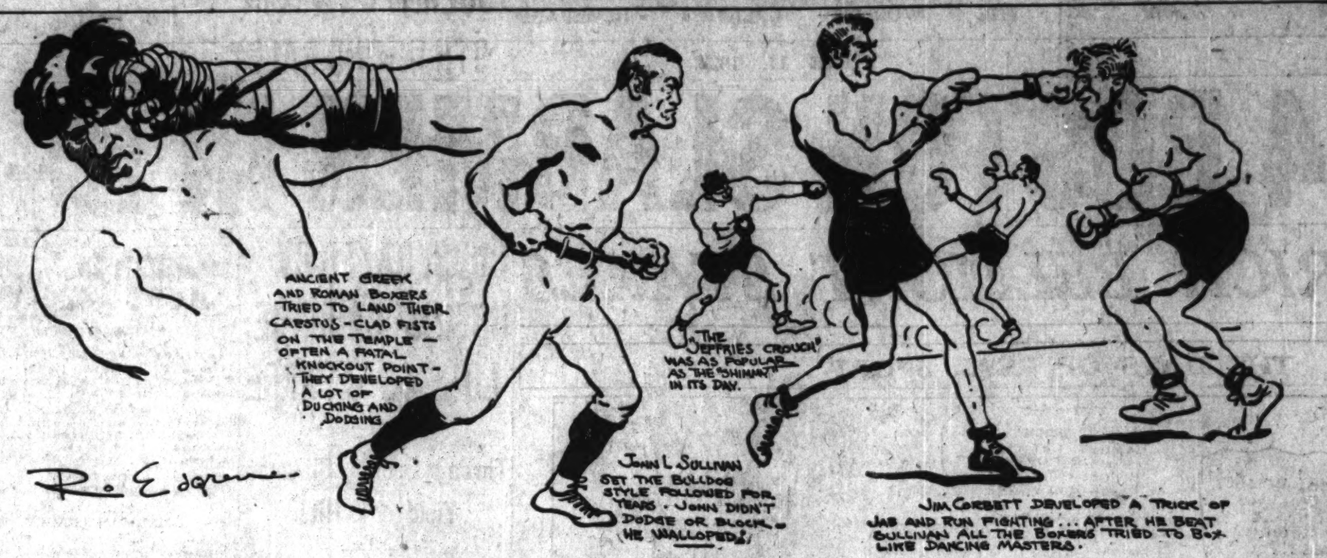
White Getting in Shape.

Charley White is getting into great condition for his ten round argument with Johnny Dundee at Rock Island on June 27. A large delegation of local fans will make the trip on a special train.

Jack Eile and Mike Dundee, who have been matched to box ten rounds in Cicero on June 19, should perform before a capacity crowd. Each has a large following and they are expected to put up a rattling good bout.

Bill Tate, colored heavyweight champion, is taking no chances with the Boston Bearcat whom he meets in the main event of the boxing show to be conducted by the American Legion posts of Hammond and Gary in the old Porter race track at Porter, Ind., on June 17. The Legion posts are erecting an arena which will seat 10,000. The main event will be supported by three other contests and popular prices of one, two and three dollars will prevail. The arena can be reached over the Michigan Central or the South Shore electric. The show will be held in the afternoon.

SETTING THE STYLES IN BOXING



BY ROBERT EDGREN.

NOBODY has traced boxing back to the Neanderthal man, but it is likely he could use his fists when the old stone ax wasn't handy.

Babylonian sculptors showed men fighting in almost the modern boxer's style. The Egyptians knew how to put their hands up. The Greeks had boxing in the Olympic games at Olympia and in the games at Athens. Starting with bare fist boxing, they "improved" the sport—which was war training in those days—by using the cestus. This was a system of wrappings on the forearms and fists, usually bull's hide strips put on wet and dried to fit the hands, sometimes with brass studs over the knuckles and brass strips over the fingers. A blow anywhere on the head was usually a knockout, and a blow on the temple was likely to be fatal. Instead of developing a rushing, slugging style of mixing, both men tried to get over the first wallop. This fighting with armed fists made the Greeks extremely skillful, wary, long-winded, and swift-footed boxers.

An Endurance Match.

In one of the last Olympic championship meets two champions fought from noon to dark, without either getting home a useful punch, and their skill was greatly praised. That sort of milling wouldn't go today in Jersey City, New Orleans, or any other American boxing center. Can you imagine what the gallery gods would say about it!

The Romans adopted the cæstus for the gladiatorial games in the Colosseum. There was quick action here, as the gladiators knew they were in it to the death. Sometimes a boxer was matched against a fighter armed with a short sword. Jack Dempsey, take notice. This must have been exciting. The winner didn't get $300,000. His reward was a good meal and a bottle of wine and a week's layoff before his next chance to be killed.

Boxing died out with the gladiatorial games, and wasn't revived until along about 1700, in England, although old time wrestlers used a lot of in-fighting stuff. In 1719 James Figg started a boxing school in London and made rules to govern "ye manley art of self-defence." Figg was a sort of a roughneck, clever with fists and quarterstaff and sword, who acted as companion and bully for roistering young gentlemen engaged in "painting the town red." They got into trouble, and he did the fighting.

London prize ring rules followed many years after Figg's time, and were supposed to be nice and humane, almost too mollycoddly. They provided for finish fights, rest after each knockdown, one minute to "come to the scratch" after a knockdown, crossbuttock throws, bare knuckles, gouging and biting and kicking were taboo, but nearly everything else that made "a fair stand up fight" went. In America great fighters like John L. Sullivan, Coburn, Dempsey, McAuliffe, Donovan, Kilrain, and Ryan were developed under London prize ring rules.

In Sullivan's time all boxing was hard slugging, Sullivan setting the style with his bull-like rushes and savage, bulldog aggressiveness.

An entire change in boxing methods originated with Jem Mace, an English Gypsy boxer, wonderfully fast and skillful. Mace was little more than a middleweight, but he met men of all weights. He was still boxing in contests at 65 years of age, and lived to pass 80. He started a boxing school in Australia, where he held tournaments to develop boxers. Larry Foley, another great boxer in Australia, taught a fast clever style of boxing combined with hard hitting. This soon displaced the slugging style of fighting. Among the wonderful boxers developed in the schools of Mace and Foley were Bob Fitzsimmons, Dan Creedon, Peter Jackson, Tom Tracey, Young Griffo, George Hall, Frank Slavin, and George Dawson, any of whom might be a world's champion today.

Corbett, the Boxer.

Out in San Francisco Jim Corbett and Joe Choyinski grew up close rivals, several fights being needed to prove Corbett the better boxer. They developed rare skill.

The whole country went crazy over clever boxing as opposed to "brute strength." Corbett was a popular hero. Every boxer from Australia to France changed all his ideas of fighting like Sullivan and began trying to skip around and keep up a rapid fire of annoying taps, as Corbett did.

This lasted until Corbett met Fitzsimmons, a great fighter, who pretended clumsiness, but really combined unparalleled skill with tremendous hitting power. The result changed the nation's style of boxing again, and every one began trying to shift and sway and drive in rib crushing socks in the most approved Fitzsimmons manner. This was Fitz's natural style. The only other men I've ever seen who approached him at all were two champions, the great Stanley Ketchel, and the present heavyweight titleholder, Jack Dempsey.

When Jess Willard outwaited Jack Johnson and then beat him American boxers took up the defensive style and the uppercut was as popular as Corbett's jab years before, and Fitzsimmons' shifts and hooks. Then along came Dempsey with a shifting style and a crashing drive into the first opening for a one round knockout whenever he could put it over. Today even the feathers and lightweights are trying to fight like Dempsey.

ILLINOIS STATE RIFLE ASSOCIATION REVIVED

The Illinois State Rifle association was revived at a meeting in the general offices of the Commonwealth Edison company last week. The association died out in 1917 when a number of the members went into the United States service. The following officers were elected:

President, N. H. Burlingame; vice presidents, Col. S. H. Vowell, Milton Moore, E. J. Reed, Fred Johnson, and E. R. Ericson; secretary, G. A. Heinrich; treasurer, Aaron E. Eppstein; executive officer, T. G. Lively; publicity officer, F. R. Rosiene.

Col. John V. Clinnin, who had been president for many years, was not a candidate for reelection. The association now has $7,000 worth of trophies, which includes THE TRIBUNE cup. Tournaments are being planned for this summer.

DOG RACING HERE IN JULY TO GIVE THRILLS OF TURF

With sport lovers bemoaning the long absence of horse racing in Chicago, a new racing sport is to be provided for lovers of speed animals. This is greyhound racing. A big meet of the fastest dogs in the country is being arranged to be held here the forepart of July.

A quarter mile dog track is being constructed at Riverview park on the site of the old motorcycle track, under the direction of Owen P. Smith, who invented the undulating electric propelled rabbit, and there is under way establishment of a dog racing circuit akin that of the horses before this sport departed from Illinois.

Pure bred greyhounds will run over a quarter mile course and are trained to chase the electric rabbits, which are geared to keep ahead of them around the course. Sight governs the chase of the greyhound, and the rabbit is given an undulating motion that imparts a realistic appearance. The makeup is perfect, as jackrabbit skin covers the mechanical bunny.

Dogs from all the best kennels in the country are entered in these meets and are expected to provide the excitement that the ponies of lamented memory supplied.

A series of several races a day will be held through the duration of the meet, and no dog is barred from competition.

E. C. BUCHAN TOPS FIELD IN LINCOLN PARK TRAP SHOOT

Breaking 49 targets in the singles and 46 in the doubles event, E. C. Buchan led a big field of shooters in the weekly tournament at Lincoln park traps yesterday. F. E. Bills and W. D. Stannard, professionals, also notched marks of 49 in the singles, and, with H. M. Rolley, placed second in the doubles with 40. Leading scores:

The Lincoln park traps will be the scene of a team tournament between the home club and the South Chicago Gun club today at 2 o'clock. A field of about eighty will compete. The trophy will be awarded on the basis of the ten highest scores of each team.

EIGHT INJURED AS AUTO RACER GOES INTO BIG CROWD

Baltimore, Md., June 10.—Bob Patterson of England, his mechanician, and six spectators were injured this afternoon when Patterson's car leaped from the track and crashed into the spectators during the automobile races at Gentlemen's Driving park. Several of the injured are in a critical condition.

To Hold Horseshoe Meet for Women at Iowa Fair

Des Moines, Ia., June 10.—The first national horseshoe pitching championship for women will be held in connection with the national tournament for men at the Iowa state fair, Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 29 to Sept. 1. Rules will be the same as for men, except that the stakes will be placed thirty feet apart, instead of forty feet. Mrs. J. R. Matthews of Minneapolis, Minn., who claims the national woman's title, will be in the competition to defend the claim.

HAMILTON GIAINTS BEAT GARY

Gary, Ind., June 10.—[Special.]—Gary lost an exciting game here this afternoon, 4 to 3, to the Hamilton Colored Giants of Chicago. Gary bunched hits in the third, scoring three runs, but another miscue and three hits in two innings gave the Giants the game.

10 FORT SHERIDAN RING ASPIRANTS CLASH JUNE 20

Existing orders prohibiting the participation of civilian boxers at Fort Sheridan, do not necessarily mean that good boxing shows have reached the decline at Fort Sheridan. An army, navy, and marine fistic carnival will be staged at the fort, June 20, and some of the participants are experienced veterans of the ring.

In the windup, Nick Carter, kingpin of the Great Lakes middleweights, who has been going like a house afire at the fort fights, will meet Eddie Wilson of the marines, eight rounds at 158 pounds. Other bouts are:

Jack Stein, popular soldier bantamweight, from Chicago vs. Tommy Gooding, marines, six rounds, 122 pounds, in the semi-windup.

Joe Silvver, gob welterweight, vs. Rolly Hinds, army, six rounds, 142 pounds.

Frankie Kulan, Radio school vs. Charley Schwab, aviation, six rounds, 128 pounds.

Toots Cummings, 54th infantry, vs. Johnny Massoth, 14th cavalry, for flyweight title of the fort, four rounds, 116 pounds.

Prices for tickets will be $2, $1, and 50c, and proceeds will go towards the Fort Sheridan athletic fund.

CARPENTIER NOT TO MAKE TRIP TO U. S. THIS YEAR

New York, June 10.—[Special.]—Georges Carpentier will not box Harry Greb nor Jack Dempsey in this country this year, it is practically certain. Francois Deschamps, Carpentier's manager, this morning sent a cable to Tex Rickard in which he declined, in behalf of Carpentier, a "handsome offer," made by Rickard, for a Carpentier-Grebb fight in Boyle's Thirty Acres this summer.

Deschamps' cable stated Georges is signed for a bout with Wills in Paris in September and for Beckett in London next October. This would practically eliminate any chance of the Frenchman appearing this year.

PLATT RETAINS TITLE.

Pine Valley, N. J., June 10.—J. Wood Platt, White Marsh, today won the amateur golf championship of Philadelphia for the second time by defeating Marcus Greer, 4 and 3, in the final round over the Pine Valley course.

Kernan, Yale Backstop, Leaves to Join Reading

New Haven, Conn., June 10.—[Special.]—Jim Kernan, Yale catcher, today left the team and will join Chief Bender's International league nine in Reading Tuesday. He is the first player to depart in mid-season in Yale history.

BOBBED HAIR BLONDES BEAT RAVEN LOCKS AS Y. W. C. A. TRACK STARS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 10.—[Special.]—Holyoke, Mass., won the young Women's Christian association track meet in the Harvard stadium this afternoon with 15 points. Newark, N. J., and Haverhill, Mass., were tied for second place with 13 points. Four new local records were registered.

Seven of the eight first place winners wore their hair bobbed and of the seven, six were blondes.

Miriam Jones of Holyoke was individual star with 10 points gained from first places in the running high and running broad jumps.

San Diego C. of C. Wants Navy Grid Team Xmas

San Diego, Cal., June 10.—Plans of the San Diego chamber of commerce for bringing the Naval academy football team from Annapolis to San Diego for a Christmas day game with University of California or some western college were divulged here today. The plans were said to have the approval of Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby.

BOATS LOSE CANVAS IN CHICAGO Y. C. RACE

The season's third club course race of the Chicago Yacht club was held yesterday afternoon over the Belmont harbor triangle. Thirteen boats started, but the judges failed to get the corrected time. This will be figured out some time this week, but in the meantime victors are in doubt. The wind was heavy but the sea was smooth. Several yachts had canvas blown out, but they made good weather of the contest. The incomplete summaries follow:

CANOEISTS HOLD 1ST 1922 PADDLE REGATTA TODAY

Representatives of the leading Chicago canoe clubs have planned several impending regattas under auspices of the American Canoe association. The first paddling meet of the season is scheduled for today at Edgewater park, on the Des Plaines river above River Forest.

The program includes single, tandem, and four-man paddling races, tilting matches, an overboard race, and a number of novelty events, such as tug-of-war in canoes and a canoe-filling contest. Thirteen clubs expect to be represented. A number of out of town A. C. A. men have also sent in entries from points as far distant as Lake City, Minn.

Camp on Island.

Entries also are being received for the annual camp and racing meet at Western Division island, in the Rock river, July 1 to 4. The paddlers will start at Rockford Saturday afternoon, camping over night at Hoysington Rocks. The canoe fleet will reach Byron about noon Sunday and make camp on the island. The remaining two days will be occupied in racing and in short trips to the Black Hawk monument and other scenic and historic points.

Owners of sailing canoes are tuning up for the first A. C. A. sailing regatta, which, by courtesy of the Chicago Yacht club, will be held in the harbor off Grant park, July 9. The C. Y. C. clubhouse at the foot of Monroe street will be headquarters.

Plan Weekly Races.

Several of the local canoe clubs have started racing programs of their own in addition to the association activities. The Lincoln Park Boat club is staging weekly races. Columbia Canoe club held a paddling meet last week and is preparing for weekly sailing races. South Shore Canoe club will have a canoe sailing race every other Sunday.

LAKE MICHIGAN SHORES INTERESTING CHARACTERS

A FEW days ago we had occasion to meet "Perch" Herman and "Herring" Jack, two of the most interesting fishermen doorsmen we have ever met. have been fishing in Lake Mi for nearly forty years, and their ences along the shore of the lake would fill a book. Of a is fast disappearing from region, these old characters fishing and lake life as few

In telling of these unique old men, Fish Berg, who has known for years, says:

"Years of undaunted allegiance bound these Chicago shoremen, a life's brotherhood. One is tall, slim, the other short and stocky, remind us of Mutt and Jeff. fore the north side of Chicago improved these market fishermen camped on the beach now known the foot of Montrose avenue. It a wild spot they chose for their wild in the stunted brush and on shore, where the big seas of the dashed over their roof and the coming ice floes winter-bound shack. Along the beach in flocks of snipe scampered. At the wild geese came in to feed, rafts of water fowl floated at the edge, feeding on small fry, and natural plankton which our politan civilization has obliterated. Back in the oaks and beeches the pigeon swarmed and the partridge drummed to its mate."

Lake Michigan fishing in those was a different story than it is a cinch compared to the work today to get a catch. As Fish describes it, "Every morning the nets laden with the catch—fish, trout, jumbo perch, herring, bass, and often small pickerel. for an occasional visitor, there was meddlers about, no beach there hordes of small boys who quite surely destroy the shoreman's tackle was an outdoorsmen's paradise. Herman and Jackie made their from the natural resources of Michigan and dwelt in peace with growing city drove them away.

Of their reputation an old shoreman says:

"Whenever them two gets into a squall, they'll both come out or none. No gull ain't never got pick the hide off'en one unless pickin' is off both. Them two netted more fish than any two hoppers on Lake Mish. And let I'll say so—all day long, mooned ice floe, bangin' scoters, while kowin' saw buck ducks, and feathered flyin' fish. Yes, sir, forty year now, them two has each other about courtin' the mermaid which got marooned tried to keep her toes warm on a floe."

The Auto & Tractor Business is looking forward to the largest year in its history. Thousands of men will be needed in the next few weeks. YOU can qualify for one of these big paying positions in ONLY 8 WEEKS' time—at one of the largest training shops in the country.

LOUIS BEIMER

Here Are Real Jobs!

Paying $2,400 to $10,000 a Year

"At the age of 20 years I was drawing $12.50 a week—laborer's pay.

"At the age of 24 I am a foreman and my salary is $2,400.00 a year.

"But it didn't take me four years to make the jump. I qualified for the advancement by only eight weeks' scientific practice with tools. Then, in two quick steps, I reached my present condition.

"Those eight weeks were spent in one of Rahe's big auto and tractor schools. I earned $50 a month before I went there. On my return home, I went to work for $150 a month and in a very short time was made foreman at $200 a month—a total salary increase of $150 a month, due entirely to Rahe training.

"If you want to get ahead QUICKLY, take the quick, easy, thorough course at a Rahe School."—Louis Beimer.

EVIDENCE

Wayne Russell, 20 years old, of Waldo, Ark., says Rahe training multiplied his pay by TEN. "I earned $1.50 a day before," he writes. "My salary is now $1.50 an hour."

W. W. Peace, another Rahe graduate, writes of getting $250 a month and expenses operating a tractor in the oil fields.

Emanuel Rushfeldt, Vulcan, Alberta, says: "Earning $10 a day. Formerly earned $50 a month; 20 years old."

Berger Nordine of 10750 Indiana Ave., Chicago, doubled his pay in less than thirty days. Now earning 90c an hour, 9 hours a day, 6 days a week, or $48.60 a week.

Big Temporary Saving

for high school men and others

For a few days I am making an amazing offer to men living in Chicago and surrounding territory. It enables them to make an actual cash saving of $55.00 and is done solely for the purpose of helping high school men and others who want to succeed during the summer months. This is such a close cut proposition for me that I cannot afford to hold it open long. Write at once—or better yet, come up and let me tell you about it personally. Bring your father or a friend if you wish. I'm just across the link bridge on the corner of Ontario and Michigan.

MY METHOD UNUSUAL

No one else teaches Motor Maintenance Engineering the way I do. That is why my students make such striking and rapid progress. The only way to be sure of climbing as rapidly as Louis Beimer is to qualify by the same method. Hundreds of others have climbed even more rapidly than he. I guarantee that any man who is ambitious can succeed by my extraordinary method.

Have You a Car —and a Boy?

If you have a boy between the age of 15 and 21 bring him and come down. In eight weeks we can fit him to take complete care of your car. He can save you this summer on your car many times the low cost of tuition. Think of the convenience to you. It will enable him to make several hundred dollars by fall.

GET FREE BOOK

My big illustrated book tells how others are succeeding; it tells many things you ought to know about the auto and tractor business. Write or come up TODAY. Remember my offer is only temporary.

Big Season Expected More Men Needed

Farmers are buying cars and tractors. City people are ordering cars far ahead. Calls are coming in daily for trained men who know auto and tractor construction. This is the biggest opportunity you ever had. NOW is the time to start. Take advantage of the big season ahead.

Scientific Tool Training

—that's the secret. You do things here according to the latest scientific engineering standards. Fine modern tools furnished free. Thousands of dollars have been spent on our shops for modern equipment and tools. No wonder auto and tractor men want my students.

RUTH HITS NO. 6 AS BROWNS DROP WILD TILT, 14-5

St. Louis, Mo., June 10.—Miller Huggins' wrecking crew of Yanks walloped the Browns, 14 to 5, today, in a game featured by Ruth's homer, a circuit drive by Pipp, and a near fist fight between Pitchers Carl Mays and Urban Shocker.

Shocker in pitching to Mays tossed three close ones to the latter's head when Mays taunted him. Mays rushed toward Shocker, with a bat and threatened to fight. Umpires stopped them. Witt followed Mays at bat and duplicated a close one, which started a scrimmage that bade fair to turn into a free-for-all. Police and umpires prevented any injuries.

OLYMPIA PLAYS OFF PULLMAN-TIE IN SOCCER TODAY

In view of their great match last Sunday, when they played a 2 to 2 tie after two hours of strenuous endeavor, a big crowd is expected this afternoon at Pullman, where the Pullman and Olympia soccer teams will settle the disposition of the Peel soccer trophy for the next twelve months.

The re-play, by order of the Peel cup commission, must be to a finish. Under present weather conditions, extra time will work quite a strain on the players.

Pullman will have the same lineup as last Sunday, but Olympia has been compelled to make a switch by reason of the absence of Kelly, inside right, who succumbed to the heat. His place will be taken by Smith, full back, and Planeta, a husky and vigorous player, will go into the rear line of defense.

The teams were so evenly matched last week that it looks as if the outcome will depend on the breaks. Both sides have great goal keepers, in Neate of Pullman and Charley Purdy of Olympia, and the defense on both sides is excellent.

A special train will leave the Illinois Central station at Randolph street at 1:30, stopping at Van Buren and Sixty-third streets. The Pullman grounds is at 103 street and Corliess avenue, one block east of the Illinois Central tracks.

LEVERETT DAY AT SOX FIELD

Gary, Ind., fans to the number of about 2,000 will visit the White Sox park this afternoon to pay homage to Gorham V. Leverett, a fellow townsman. Leverett probably will be nominated to pitch against Boston and will be the recipient of a gift from the Indiana delegation.

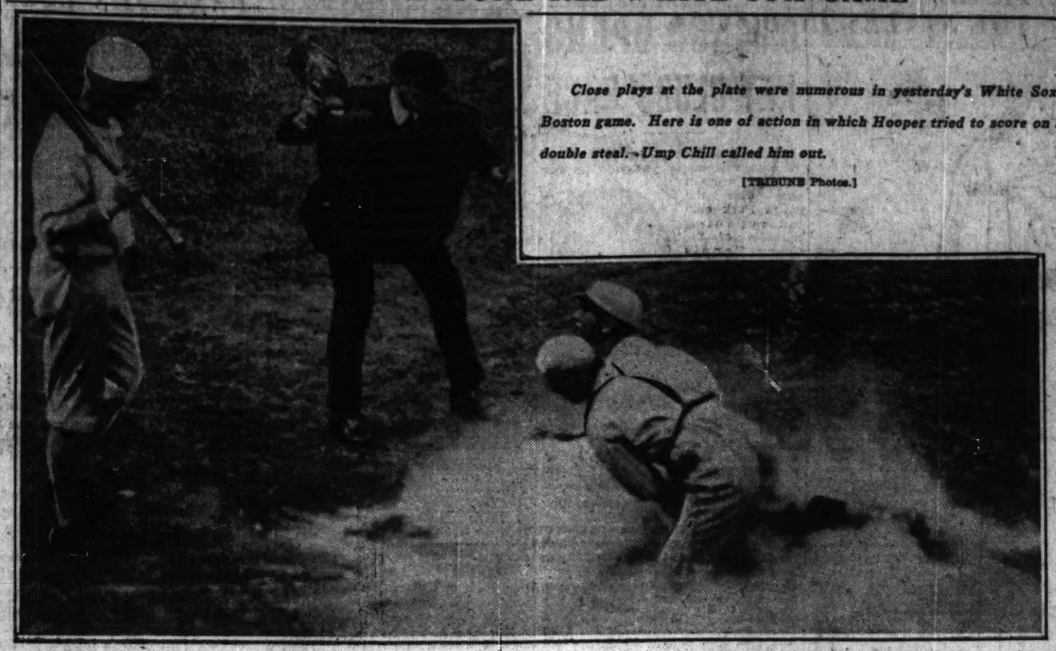
PLATE PLAYS FEATURE RED-WHITE SOX GAME



Close plays at the plate were numerous in yesterday's White Sox-Boston game. Here is one of action in which Hooper tried to score on a double steal.—Ump Chill called him out.

[TRIBUNE Photos.]

Here's another close one in which Eddie Collins showed some of his old time dash and skill by going from first to home on a batted ball that rolled through Pratt's hands. When Collins reached third on the error he noticed Pratt and Smith were loafing on the return throw, so he dashed for home and slid in safely.

GIANTS WIN IN 9TH AT FLAG HOISTING

New York, June 10.—The Giants raised their world's championship flag here today and then pulled out a sensational ninth inning victory from Cincinnati by a score of 3 to 2.

It was George Burns day on the Polo grounds, and Burns was presented a diamond studded platinum watch with a jewelled chain, a gift from the officers of the Giants, and a silver cigarette case from local sporting writers.

Judge Landis presided at both presentations and took part in the parade before the game, in which John Heydler, president of the National league, and the National league club owners marched to the center field flag pole.

Stengel walked and Snyder's double drove in Kelly with the winning run. Score:

NATIONAL MEET ATTRACTS FIELD OF GREAT STARS

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Unless all indications go astray, the second annual track and field games of the National Collegiate Athletic association, to be held on Stagg field, Chicago, next Friday and Saturday, should bring together a classy field of college performers.

WALTER ECKERSALL.

California, winner of the eastern intercollegiate at Cambridge on May 27, and Nebraska, which won premier honors in the Missouri Valley conference on the same day, will be represented by their best performers, while other institutions of athletic prominence will send one or more representatives, according to the committee in charge of the event.

In spite of the decision of Illinois not to enter the meet the competition is expected to be keen.

Records Shattered.

Records in all intercollegiates held this spring have been shattered and when these athletes clash next Saturday in the finals something is bound to happen. The field of star performers is larger than any of recent years and performances have improved with every meet.

In the 100 yard dash, two fliers who established a new national intercollegiate record of :09 7-10 for 100 yards will meet in their specialty. Bill Hayes of Notre Dame stepped the century in this record breaking time in the western conference games while J. A. Leconey of Lafayette did the same thing in the eastern intercollegiate.

Leonard Paulu of Grinnell, who won the 220 yard dash in the Big Ten meet in conference record time of :23 3-5, will hook up with Leconey in the furlong.

Two Sectional Winners Meet.

Two sectional winners will be brought together in the quarter mile and a great race should result. Arthur Wolters of Ames, who won the Big Ten race in the exceptionally fast time of :48, will meet J. W. Driscoll of Boston college, winner of the eastern race in :49 1-5. In addition to Driscoll, Hendrixson of California, who finished third in the Harvard stadium, will be a certain starter.

Wolters, who was a double first place winner in the Big Ten meet, will run against Larry Brown of Pennsylvania, winner of the half mile in the east. M. L. Shields of Penn State, who took the mile in the east in 4:18 2-5, will appear with stars from other sections of the country.

It will take some fleet running to beat Lloyd Rathbun of Ames out of first place in the two mile run.

Knollin a Contender.

A. J. Knollin of Wisconsin, who won the 120 yard high hurdles after an interesting race with K. W. Anderson of Minnesota in the western conference meet, will be a strong contender for honors next Saturday. He topped the timbers in :15 which was three-tenths of a second faster than C. R. Hauers of Harvard who won the event in the east.

C. R. Brookins of Iowa, winner of the 220 yard low hurdles at Iowa City, will be a sure starter along with Gus Desch of Notre Dame, who was practically left at the mark in the final of the event in the Big Ten games. Brookins won his final in :23 4-5, while the time made by J. C. Taylor of Princeton in the same event in the east was :25 9-10.

The field events should bring about some great performances. R. L. Legendre of Georgetown, who won the running broad jump at Cambridge with a leap of 23 feet 7⅛ inches, will be a sure starter.

Great Trio of Jumpers.

In the high jump Johnny Murphy of Notre Dame, who tied with Osborne of Illinois for first place in the Big Ten games at 6 feet 5 1-16 inches, and Muller of California compose a great pair of jumpers who are sure to be seen in action next Saturday. L. T. Brown of Dartmouth took the event in the eastern games with a successful effort of 6 feet 4⅝ inches.

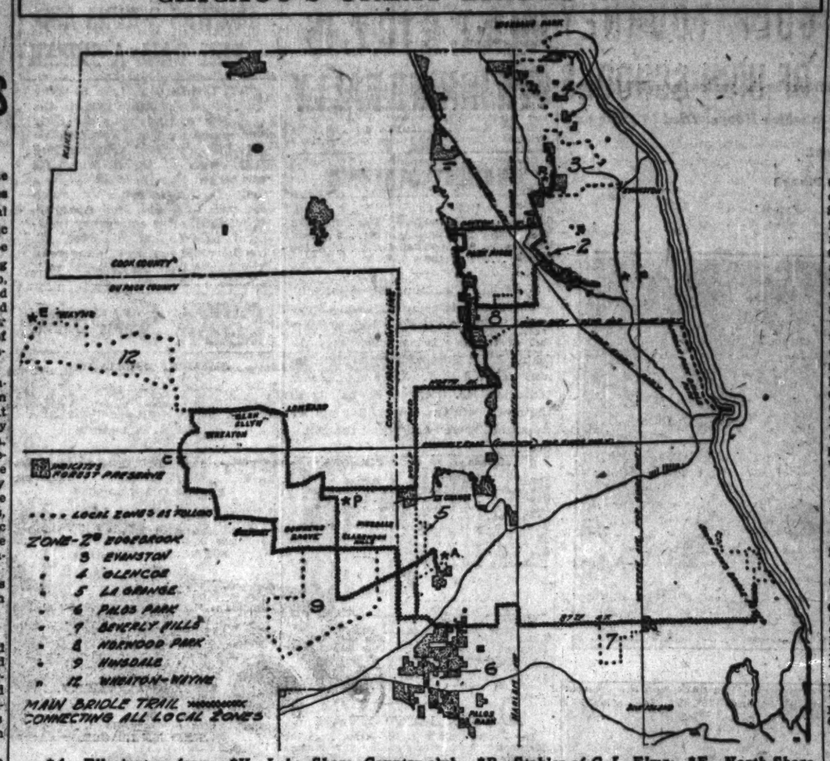
A. G. Norris of California, victor in the pole vault in the Harvard stadium with a vault of 12 feet 9 inches; J. T. Landowski of Michigan, who took the Big Ten event by clearing the bar at 12 feet 6 inches; Merrick of Wisconsin, Hawker of Minnesota, and several others of the over 12 feet variety will surely compete in their specialty.

If Glenn Hartranft of Leland Stanford does not compete in the shot put, Johnny Merchant of California should make a strong bid for the honors.

Johnny Merchant of California should take the hammer throw. His mark of 171 feet 2 inches, made in the eastern games, is much better than any other collegians have shown. Tom Lieb of Notre Dame, with a mark of 147 feet 8 inches, should win the discus, while Howard Hoffman of Michigan and George Bronder of Pennsylvania should have an interesting contest in the javelin throw.

The above mentioned athletes will be almost sure starters.

CHICAGO'S GREAT BRIDLE TRAIL



*A—Ellerington farm. *Y—Lake Shore Country club. *R—Stables of C. L. Elms. *F—North Shore Polo club. *P—Mayslake farm. *C—Polo farm. *E—Oaklawn farm.

With nearly 200 miles of riding trails, Chicago has advanced to a position not equaled by any other city in the country. In Cook and the adjacent DuPage county are city paths, country roads and woodland trails which are the pride and joy of the equestrian.

The cooperative efforts of the Horse association and the Chicago Equestrian association have resulted in the establishment of a system of bridle trails. The trail already has been marked. At each crossroad appears a 14-inch square sheet metal marker in three colors to direct riders.

The system has been divided into zones which are indicated on the accompanying map. The map shows the South Park bridle paths on the right and the line of main and local trails across Cook and DuPage counties to the point marked E, the Oaklawn Farm at Wayne. The trip out there and back the shortest way, shorn of any detours or local trails except as necessary in zone 12 is just 100 miles. It is a wonderful ride. Finger tracing enables one to follow inch by inch on the map all of the routes that may be traversed.

PURDUE'S 6 RUN RALLY IN 9TH JOLTS CHICAGO

At the close of the seventh inning in the Chicago-Purdue ball game, which was played before a large crowd of Maroon alumni at the annual homecoming yesterday, it looked as though the Midway athletes might at last win. But, coming from behind in the ninth frame, the visiting team piled up six runs and beat the long suffering Chicagoans, 9 to 5.

Dixon pitched effective baseball until the disastrous ninth, when Purdue's orgy of base running took place. The Midway hurler allowed five walks during the stanza. "Lefty" Weller was tardily sent in after Dixon's fifth base on balls. "Heinie" Schultz and Hubert Curtiss of Chicago both scored circuit clouts, as did also Kenneth Fawcett of Purdue. Score:

SWEEPING WIN BY CHICAGO OPENS NET CLUBS' RACE

A complete victory of nine matches to none was scored yesterday by the Chicago Tennis club over the South Park club in the opening matches of the Chicago Tennis association's annual team schedule. The decisiveness of the team triumph featured the day's play in division A. The matches were played on the Chicago club's courts. George Lott and Ralph Rice, two of the star junior players of the city, were among the losers. W. S. Miller defeated Lott in the leadoff match, 6—2, 6—2, and Jack Harris downed Rice, 6—4, 6—3.

GEORGE LOTT. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Pressed in Doubles.

The Chicago club was pressed harder in doubles than singles, every event in the latter class going in straight sets. Summaries:

SUZANNE DOWNS MME. GOLDING FOR FRENCH NET TITLE

PARIS, June 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen successfully defended her title as women's singles tennis champion of France today by defeating Mme. Golding, the challenger, 6—4, 6—0, in the concluding match of the French hard court championships. Cochet, France's youthful tennis wonder, wrested the men's singles championship from Jean Samazeuilh, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5.

Mlle. Lenglen will take a complete rest until she leaves for the international tournament at Wimbledon, England, Saturday. In the Wimbledon matches she will be paired with Miss Elizabeth Ryan of Santa Monica, Cal., in the women's doubles, and with O'Hara Wood in the mixed doubles, which she captured last year with Gerald Patterson, as her partner.

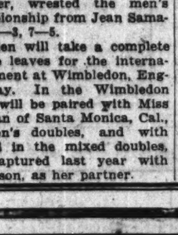
CARDS OF EXIT.

GETTING rid of winning cards, in order to avoid being forced to make an unfavorable lead, is part of the general subject of cards of exit.

Ignorance on this point will produce the sort of catastrophe which is illustrated by the deal below.

THE HANDS.



Score 0—0. East dealt and bid one diamond. South two no-trumps, West three spades, North and East passed, South doubled, and the bidding closed.

North had the original lead.

West secured nine tricks.

The bid of three spades was rather tall, but west knew that south seldom had as much as he advertised.

The double by south looked like a certain winner, and would have been with correct play.

The declarer played carefully, with the design of getting the last club out of the south hand, if possible, before revealing the heart situation. South knew that west must hold the ace of hearts, but hoped his partner might have the queen.

After the sixth trick the declarer was certain to make his contract, unless south held four hearts. It would not have mattered had south held less than the three hearts and trumped.

South should have played the ace, king, and queen of trumps at the first opportunity, in order to make it impossible for a diamond lead to be forced upon him.

ROCKFORD HIGH WINS NORTHERN ILLINOIS MEET

Rockford, Ill., June 10.—[Special.]—Rockford High school won the northern Illinois track meet here today with a total of 62 points. Heddon's Dowagiac "Vamp"

It's Almost Time

IF you haven't done it already, today is a good time to get out the old tackle and see what you need for the first trip. A new rod perhaps, or an extra one.

Jim Heddon's split bamboo casting rods with steel butt and long tip are the recognized standard in rod values. Made of the finest material, with long, unbroken spring action and just the right balance, they give years of practical service. Yet their beautiful finish and refined appearance wins the admiration of all who love expertly made fishing tackle.

4½, 5 and 5½ feet long—$6 to $30.

Heddon's Dowagiac Minnows are the original wooden minnows, long famous for their fish getting ability and for their variety, beauty and durability of finish. No other baits have the Heddon patented hook fastening which keeps the hooks clear of the body at all times. This feature insures hooking the fish securely and prevents barbs from scratching enamel.

Insist on seeing the full Heddon line of tackle at the store displaying the mammoth bass window card.

C. D. G. A. TITLE MEET AT OAK PARK CLUB THIS WEEK

BY JOE DAVIS.

The first big event of the local season will be the fifth annual amateur championship of the Chicago District Golf association, which will be staged Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at the Oak Park Country club. It is customary with golfers to be late in making their entries, and this tournament is no exception. There are, however, twenty-five players of good class already listed and it is expected this number will be doubled by tomorrow night.

RAYMOND DALY. (TRIBUNE Photo.)

Raymond Daly, the present champion, will defend the title he won last year at Flossmoor, and will have a good running mate in I. W. Lincoln.

Dewey Weber an Entrant.

Dewey Weber, who won two years ago at Skokie, when the tournament was held at medal play, will head a strong contingent from the Edgewood club of La Grange.

Chick Evans, has not yet sent in his entry, but is a prospective starter, if he can arrange his business to permit his playing. Bob Gardner, who has done a lot to promote the C. D. G. A. tournament, will be absent at a class reunion at Yale.

The qualifying round will be at thirty-six holes and there will be a special prize for low score. Sixteen players qualify, and the match play round will be at eighteen holes.

Course Open for Practice.

President Art Hook of the Oak Park club and his associates have made all arrangements to receive the players, and the course is in fine shape. Entrants will close tomorrow with J. G. Davis, at 443 South Dearborn street.

Contestants have been given the privilege of playing over the course from today until Wednesday night.

OLYMPIA FIELDS.

R. A. Ackley won the match play handicap against par over No. 1 course, 2 up. H. F. Bruell was second, 1 down. The qualifying round for the Simmons trophy was led by J. C. Wilson, who had a gross of 81. G. G. Bardman won low net, 87—14—73. The scores for the first round follow: R. C. Wilson vs. N. J. Devaney; C. M. Smalley vs. C. C. Sackens; E. T. Ryan vs. W. W. Tenney; C. B. Slaughter vs H. A. Henderson; R. H. De Bois vs. R. T. Larrabee; T. P. King vs. F. Kruse; E. F. Smith vs. F. C. Van Wormer; J. J. Daltraffs vs. G. G. Boardman.

ROB O'LINK.

Winners in the ball sweepstakes were: CLASS A and B—A. E. Peterson, 70; E. Oster, H. O. King, R. D. Gordon, 75. CLASS C—C. R. Shavino, 69; H. W. Fay, 73; J. D. Ryan, 74; C. H. Hermann, 75. CLASS D—L. E. Rutledge, 79; W. H. Robinson, F. J. Perry, 80; G. L. Friable, 81. Winners in the handicap were: C. S. Williams, 80; CLASS B—A. E. Peterson, 70; CLASS C—C. R. Shavino, 69; CLASS D—L. M. Rutledge, 79.

EXMOOR.

Two "Macs" were prominent in the handicap at Exmoor, C. A. McWhinney winning with a card of 82—6—74, while W. P. McInnis, 93—18—75, tied with Russell Mott, 91—17—75. T. H. Sheridan, 83—8—75, and Roy A. Towner, 82—7—75.

MIDLOTHIAN.

Frank Barbour enjoyed the unique experience of donating one trophy and winning another. Shooting into the wind, Frank had 39—18—71, which netted him the W. D. Hurlburt trophy. Others well up were: S. M. Nash, 95—23—72; W. R. Cubbins, 101—26—75; R. M. Newton, 90—15—75; C. R. Ross, 96—20—76; R. L. Whitten, 92—16—76. This market also constituted the winners of the sweepstakes event, E. Hoover Bankard 77—6 as low gross, which shows how strong the wind blew. The trophy offered by Mr. Barbour was given for the low net won on holes 1, 6, 8, 14, and 17. E. A. Silver won it with a low net score of 19, beating 20 for Mr. Holden.

FLOSSMOOR.

A card of 77—2—75 gave C. F. Grimes the prize in the first division of the class handicap tournament. Other winners were: Class A—W. S. Horton, 92—18—74; Class C—J. H. Long, 105—32—83; Class D—R. Polson, 101—27—74.

PURDUE GOLFERS BEAT ILLINI IN BIG 10 MATCH

Lafayette, Ind., June 10.—The Purdue university golf team defeated the University of Illinois here today in a conference match, 7 to 5, the Nassau system of scoring being used. Bixler of this city was the star of the meet, turning in a card of 76 for the eighteen holes and making the first round of the nine hole course in 35, two below par.

VON ELM STILL GOLF CHAMPION

VICTORIA, B. C., June 10.—George Von Elm of Salt Lake City retained the title of amateur golf champion of the Pacific northwest by defeating Van Stein of Seattle 1 up in their match of thirty-six holes at the Colwood links here today. Von Elm was 4 down at the end of the eighteenth hole.

H. A. CHRISTY.

THE G. A. R. boys of the local golfing brigade held their annual turnout at Glen View club yesterday, competing in the qualifying round for the Maturity cup, which has been battled for more than a dozen years by players 60 years of age and over. J. J. Charles of the home club, who has been prominent in the annual clash of the veterans, and who won the trophy in 1919 and 1920, topped the list with a gross score of 88, which, with his allowance of 6, gave him a net of 82.

J. A. Rankin, who is a freshman in the ranks, having just reached the 60 mark, had 90 gross, while Tom Noyes, who is a sophomore, had a gross of 93. The qualifiers and pairings were as follows:

J. J. Charles [88—6—82] vs. H. A. Christy [126—21—105]; J. A. Rankin [90—scr—90] vs. R. F. Pettibone [105—5—100]; A. D. Langworthy [102—11—91] vs. T. S. Noyes [93—1—92]; J. C. Bannister [98—1—97] vs. E. C. Carter [102—8—94].

FOUR TOWN GOLFERS IN CLOSE CONTESTS

HAYNES 55 TOURING CAR

Examination of the Haynes 55 Touring Car reveals with clear cut distinctness the reasons for the unprecedented success of Haynes in 1922.

Superiority of engineering and designing skill is evidenced in the fame of its Haynes-built light six engine, the grace of its lines, and the sturdiness of its chassis construction.

Remarkable completeness of equipment is displayed in such refinements as cord tires, genuine leather upholstery, individual fenders and steps, or the exterior cowl lights which match the searchlight design head lamps.

The supreme value is proved, when these factors are contrasted with the low price of Steel Discs Protect the Casting

We Actually Do This twice a day — all this week

The proof of Lee Puncture-proof Tires is this demonstration that they positively do not puncture.

It is called "the torture test."

Every day this week, beginning Monday, at 10 A. M. and 4 P. M. sharp, Lee dealers in this city, and from coast to coast, will stage this demonstration—actually run a loaded car, equipped with Lee Puncture-proof Pneumatics over the up-turned points of sharp nails driven through heavy planks.

Lee Puncture-proof Tires are covered by a cash refund guarantee against puncture.

See this demonstration. It proves that Lee Tires are actually puncture-proof.

Urge New Through Traffic Streets for North Side

To Cut Congestion by Routing Cars from Boulevard.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

OFFICIAL designation and marking of additional right of way streets leading north, northwest, west, and south from the loop, is one simple and practical solution for much of Chicago's traffic congestion problem, in the opinion of traffic experts.

Following several weeks of traffic observation on the near north side and on loop streets where the present heavy traffic arteries dump their burdens, it has been discovered that nearly 20 per cent of the automobiles which use Michigan avenue and Sheridan road in reaching the loop could take advantage of north and west short cuts to their own advantage, and would use the streets that offer themselves if they had traffic protection.

Among the important arteries suggested as the best auxiliary traffic routes are: Ohio street from Michigan avenue west to Orleans; La Salle street from Ohio north to the entrance of Lincoln park at Clark street; Addison street from Sheridan road west to its limits; Ashland avenue from its north limits south to Irving Park boulevard, and Greenview avenue from Irving Park boulevard south to Diversey parkway.

During the rush hours scores of cars bound for the west side and suburbs follow Michigan avenue north to Ohio street and turn west there, using Ohio street to either Wells or Orleans, where they turn south across the Orleans ramp and bridge and west again in Washington or Jackson boulevards, thus avoiding the loop traffic jams.

Ohio street offers fair paving, but the fast time that might be made over it is necessarily cut down because there is no protection against north and southbound cars and trucks that cross at intersections. If north and south traffic were made to stop before entering Ohio street, it is pointed out, another highly important artery to the west could be had.

La Salle street, it was found, carries nearly 20 per cent as much traffic during the rush hours as does Michigan avenue north of the bridge. Loop business men who use downtown garages and the La Salle street and Market street parking places find that they can save ten minutes to half an hour in the run north by leaving the loop over the Orleans, Wells, or Clark street bridges and running north to Lincoln park in La Salle street. The street is used as a through traffic artery, but it is very dangerous because it has no protection from east and west bound traffic.

Addison street is used almost as much as is Diversey parkway and Irving Park boulevard for crosstown traffic on the north side. It is a wide street, well paved, and prepared for through traffic. Many cars using Addison now attain a uniform speed of twenty to twenty-five miles an hour, but they are in danger of colliding with north and south bound cars at each intersection.

The Ashland-Greenview avenue short cut from north shore towns to the loop is already a popular route, followed by hundreds of cars. Here, too, there is constant danger of collision.

City engineers believe that all of the streets mentioned can be made safe by the city council without the tedious method of converting them into boulevards. They may be officially designated as through traffic streets and marked as such at each intersection. An ordinance may then be drafted compelling all drivers to come to a full stop before entering the through traffic arteries.

THRILLS AND SPILLS

Motor polo, entering Chicago in the guise of amusement park thriller entertainment, bids fair to sweep the city's sporting element by storm following its first appearance as a Riverview park attraction. Ralph A. Hankinson of Kansas City, original promotor of the dangerous sport, has entered Chicago for the season with two teams, scheduled for day and night games on the new Riverview course. The game, following closely regulation polo rules, is played in five periods of ten minutes each, opposing cars developing a speed of from thirty to forty miles an hour while following the ball.

Roby Race Track Opens Today for Auto Speed Fans

UNDER the management of the recently organized Roby Speedway association, the Roby race track at Indianapolis boulevard and 105th street will be opened this afternoon with a series of dirt track races in which Chicago and northern Indiana drivers are entered.

J. E. Leach is president of the association; Rudolph Grothe, vice president, and Fred Barnett, secretary. The association has spent $20,000 in improvements, including a new grandstand. The mile dirt track is being oiled for the Sunday races.

The association has put a ban on "circus races" between professional racing partners, and will endeavor to develop new talent in addition to the recognized dirt track leaders who will be seen during the season at Roby.

Glycerin for Radiator.

Many car owners make a practice of using a small amount of glycerin in the cooling water during the summer months, naturally not as an antifreeze agent, but to keep down scale deposits. The glycerin in the radiator has a tendency to keep down scale and has long been used in steam boiler operation for this purpose. The proportions are a half pint to each five gallons of water.

Buick cushions are comfortable on all roads because of their "double-deck" springs and resilient hair pads. The upper springs, which are light and easy-acting, yield to the slightest road irregularity. The lower springs are larger and stiffer. They come into play on rough country roads, carrying the passenger in comfort over bumps which cause the ordinary seat to "strike bottom".

Between the springs and the French-plaited leather upholstery are two thick, yielding pads of interlaced hair which positively prevent "jumping".

In Buick seat cushions, as in every other part of the car, is built the quality which has made Buick cars the standard of comparison.

PAIGE

Master of the Highway

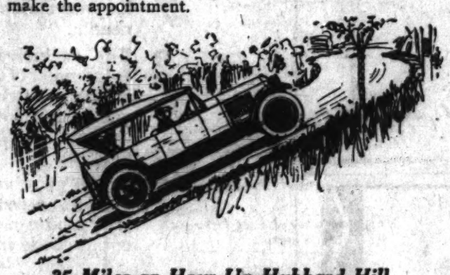
Paige Six-66 "Drive it yourself" week

Telephone Now for a "Drive It Yourself" Appointment. Calumet 6060.

Open Sundays and Evenings

Never before was there a motor car so surprising in performance to the average man as the improved Paige Six-66. You do not expect any car to be able to do the things which this Paige does. Every moment behind the wheel is a revelation to you.

So we have arranged for one week a special "Drive-it-yourself" series of demonstrations. This is a personal invitation to you—whether or not you intend to buy a car—to drive the Paige Six-66 and make these tests yourself. Telephone Calumet 6060 now and make the appointment.



35 Miles an Hour Up Hubbard Hill From a Standing Start.

Stand the car at the bottom of Hubbard Hill with the rear wheels against the cross walk bump. Slip the lever into high gear. Let in the clutch and step on the accelerator. Keep the accelerator down to the floor boards—just steer.

The Paige Six-66 fairly thrills with eager power. Faster and faster it climbs. Around the curve it goes without slackening. Glance at the speedometer—see it gain from 20 to 25 and then 30. Finally as you flash past the touring sign where the hill begins to flatten out, you will note 35 miles an hour.

If you have ever tried this with any other automobile, you may doubt that the Paige Six-66 can do it. That is the reason we want you to drive it up that hill yourself. This car has such amazing pulling power and hill climbing ability we cannot hope to make you believe it until you have proved it yourself. That is why we urge you to accept our invitation. Just telephone Calumet 6060.

Comfort on Grant Park's Roughest Road at 30 Miles an Hour.

The best demonstration road for the Paige Six-66 is right in the heart of Chicago. Along the lake in Grant Park is about as difficult a piece of road for fast driving as you will find anywhere. Come and take the Paige Six-66 over that road yourself. Drive slow or fast—there is nearly a mile of road to play with. Observe how the bumps, which experience has taught you to approach gingerly, seem to flatten out as the Paige rolls over them.

Then imagine the fun you can have with such a car bound for the country where real trees and wild flowers grow in abundance and crowds never bother you. Such are the places every man dreams of driving to—and always they have the poorest roads—nearly always the pleasure is taken out of it by a car that bumps and jolts you all day long. But in your Paige you can drive anywhere a car can go—drive so comfortably that you will arrive refreshed—drive so free from care that you can enjoy the scenery.

Why does the Paige seem to float on air instead of bumping like other cars? To begin with, few cars have as long a wheel base. 131 inches from wheel to wheel permits each wheel to absorb bumps independently. The front of the car is past the bump and is steady—before the rear strikes it. Then, too, the springs are extra long—40 inches in front—61 inches in rear. Long springs yield gradually—thus absorbing shocks. Finally the recoil is checked by Gabriel Snubbers. The car is never tossed in the air by its springs.

You have probably noticed that the Paige Six-66 is hung low. The passengers sit inches lower than in most cars. The weight of the car is closer to the ground. This reduces remarkably the distance which you move when the car strikes a bump. If you move less you feel it less, also it reduces the tendency of the car to rock or sway sideways. Everything which will give you more comfort on the road has been thought out and incorporated in the Paige Six-66. Please drive it yourself—this week. Telephone Calumet 6060 for appointment.

Following a Walking Truck Team in High Gear.

Here is a test of handling ease that few cars can pass through prettily. The most difficult problem of gasoline engine design is to produce a motor which will run smoothly at low speed. The tiniest variation of uniformity in mixture—the smallest miss at a spark plug—will produce the jerky effect all motorists know.

We know the Paige will throttle down to one mile an hour and run smoothly in high gear—if speedometer accuracy is dependable at such speed. But the test you meet in daily use is the test behind the slow walking team with a heavy load of coal or lumber. It is a rare car that does not drop into second under such conditions.

But you can follow such a team for miles with your Paige Six-66 in high gear—even requiring an occasional touch to the accelerator to keep up. And you do not need to worry about getting away in a hurry. Just a little more pressure from your foot, and the Paige Six-66 will be going 30 miles an hour in a few seconds.

These three tests tell more of motor car perfection than any which are practicable for a motorist to make. No car can be specially tuned up to do these things unless it is fully capable of them in the first place. Any current model Paige 66 will perform as we have described here. Any average driver will be able to make these tests himself.

Please telephone us now and say when you want to drive the Paige Six-66 yourself. Such a car at $2,195 is something you ought to know about.

Any car is stiff when it is first driven. It requires about 1,000 miles of travel to work itself in. After that the engine runs smoother—the car rides easier. But other developments also take place.

For instance, some parts may work a little too loose—others may tighten up. Factory tests cannot detect these developments in advance. But, if expert attention is given immediately, no harm is done—later repair bills are prevented.

We do not want to take any chances of a Jewett or Paige needing repairs because such symptoms were neglected. Therefore, thirty days after delivery of a new Paige or Jewett, we give it a two-day period of tests and adjustments. This is free, and every Paige and Jewett owner is urged to take advantage of it.

The inspection is thorough—it is made by experts. Over 70 items are checked. Nothing is missed. Everything is put in perfect condition. Twenty to twenty-five hours of labor are required. Our records show that it is worth while. The resulting long mileage without repairs is remarkable.

Our ten Sales and Service Stations in Chicago all offer this super-service. Compare it with your experience elsewhere. Isn't it fine to know that you can buy a car with the certainty of such after-sale care and attention?

Cook County Out to Break Records in Highway Work

55 Miles of Concrete Is Under Way on Year's Program.

APPROXIMATELY fifty-five miles of concrete highways, costing over $1,100,000, are under construction in Cook county at present, it was announced last week from the office of George A. Quinlan, superintendent of highways. The roads are eighteen feet wide, seven inches thick and appropriately reinforced.

The proper grading is included in the cost price as is also the culvert work and other essentials to perfect road making. The average cost per mile is a little more than $30,000. This is declared to be better than the price Gov. Small has obtained, after figuring each item in the cost of road making separately.

There are nineteen different projects under way at present, the length of the road being built varying from one-half mile to seven and three-quarters miles.

The Northwest highway, leading from Chicago to Barrington, is the scene of six different projects within the limits of the county. Ninety-sixth avenue, 145th street, Lake avenue, Arlington Heights road, Western avenue, Vermont avenue, Gross Point road, South Park avenue, Touhy avenue, Mannheim road, and other roads are among those which are being improved.

One big bridge is under construction, over the Des Plaines river on the Mannheim road, a mile north of La Grange. The road there has been straightened, two dangerous curves being removed, and a concrete deck girder bridge being erected to replace the old one. This will cost $30,262 and will be completed in thirty days.

Reserves of Gasoline.

The United States bureau of mines reports a gasoline reserve of $18,500,000 gallons, the highest on record. Opening up of new fields and improved cracking processes during the past two years have greatly increased fuel production.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

WHEN Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker and his flying companion, Steve Harnagan, dropped in on Chicago from the air Friday, midway in the transcontinental flight from Washington to San Francisco, the former ace of fighting flyers immediately sent out a radio feeler to be picked up by the radio equipped fleet of Rickenbacker cars then about 500 miles west on the Lincoln highway. The fleet, bound for the Pacific coast in the first transcontinental radio test run, was selected for the experiment because of the "vibrationless" feature of the Rickenbacker motor.

One of the biggest automotive enterprises current in Chicago is the new Chicago branch building of the White company now under construction at Archer avenue and Wallace street. The structure is said to be the last word in modern motor equipment.

Allison-Rood show rooms added a new and popular feature to the Lincoln motor car line last week following the arrival of the new Lincoln touring model, the first new model produced by the Leland factory since the Ford interests gained control. The model, featuring an all-aluminum body and a wheelbase of 136 inches, is considered one of the finest products of the Detroit factory.

Indicator for Backing.

A small notch cut on the under side of the steering wheel rim, in a position nearest the driver, will greatly aid when backing the car in a straight and narrow direction. Before making the notch simply set the wheels in a straight position. When backing, if the mark be to one side or the other, it naturally shows that the wheels are not straight.

LEHIGH Cords are built under the supervision of Mr. F. A. Seiberling—probably the greatest exponent of tire quality that the industry has ever known.

Stripped of all needless expense in manufacture, LEHIGH Cords stand—bare—a Quality Product.

Produced according to standards developed through the building of a tire which now predominates the tire field—by Experts who have acquired present-day perfection in tire construction—LEHIGH Cords are void of all costly experiments—all pretense and show are eliminated. They are Rugged, Long-Lived, Quality Tires.

CARLSTEN-WILLIAMS Company have contracted for a big proportion of the output of the LEHIGH Factory. Heavy Administration Expense—Costly Sales and Advertising Expense Has no Part in the C-W Program.

To the Actual and Unusually Low Factory Costs is added only a Lowest Possible Operating Profit to arrive at these Low Advertised Prices—The Prices You Pay.

CARLSTEN-WILLIAMS COMPANY are putting Economy Prices on a Quality Basis.

Adjusted on 10,000-Mile Basis

LEHIGH Cords are a deep, brilliant coal black, presenting a handsome, masculine, burly appearance. The Tread Design is distinctive and of Perfect Non-Skid Qualities. All Firsts—with Manufacturer's Name and Serial Number on Every Tire.

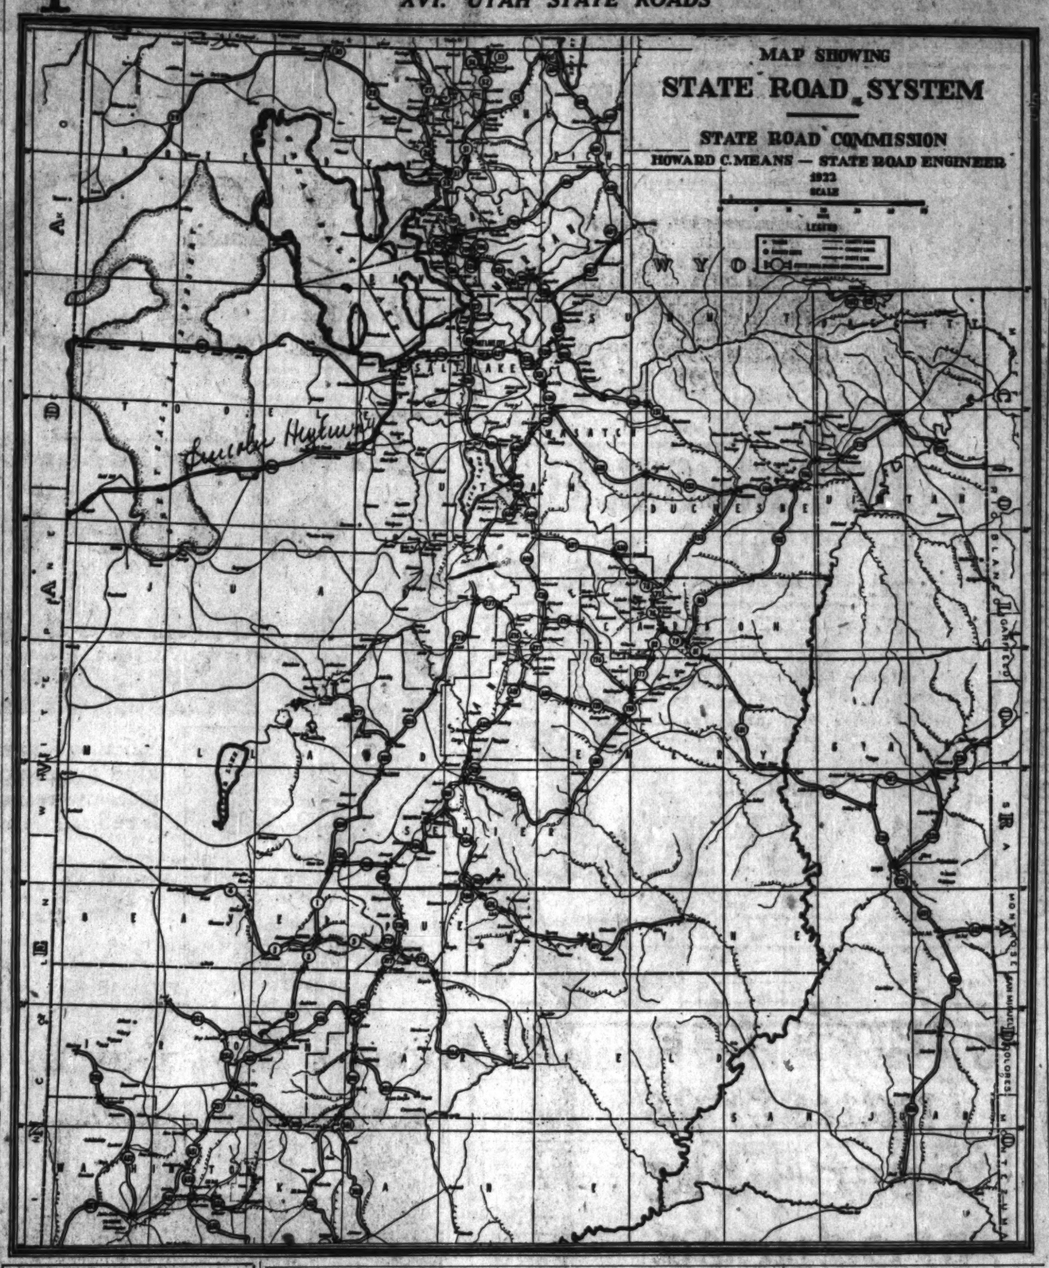
TRIBUNE TOURS

XVI. UTAH STATE ROADS



Eastern Forests Offer Charms to Summer Motorist

Atlantic Vacation Lands Rival Rockies This Year.

NEW TRIBUNE MAPS

The Tribune's 1922 highway map, showing the marked trails and main traveled highways of the five central western states and a detailed map of the roads about Chicago, is now ready for free distribution.

The maps may be had free of charge by friends of Motordom who will mail their request to Motordom, Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill." inclosing their name, address and a 1 cent stamp for return postage.

They may also be had by calling at the loop editorial office, Tribune building, Madison and Dearborn streets, or at The Chicago Tribune plant, 431 North Michigan avenue.

EASILY accessible to our massed population lie the national forests of the east. These, from a recreational standpoint, present a quite different situation than is found in the west. The western forests were carved, for the most part, out of undeveloped public domain. The eastern forests are being built up piece by piece, as a mosaic is laid, writes Thomas H. Gill in the American Forestry magazine.

Economic development coming prior to the establishment of these forests has resulted in a situation where resort and summer home sites are already in private ownership and the recreational function of the forests of the east consists in providing tributary playgrounds, picnic and camping grounds for tourist, automobilist, fisherman and hunter.

Since nearly four-fifths of the total population of the United States live in close proximity to the eastern national forests, the question of distributing the greatest good to the greatest number resolves itself into holding open to the public every available camp site, every spot of scenic beauty, and in making them accessible to all the people.

Happily, the eastern vacationist has the length of the United States from which to choose, for the mountains of the Atlantic seaboard are dotted with the forests from Maine to Florida.

Northmost of all is the White Mountain National forest, lying within New Hampshire and Maine, and embracing the rugged slopes of the Presidential range. Here is a land of unalloyed hearts' desire to the lover of the outdoors. Among its landmarks of beauty are the Lakes of the Clouds, located 5,000 feet above the sea; Snow Arch, King's Ravine, and that great natural curiosity, "The Old Man of the Mountains," Carter Notch, with its twin lakes surrounded by high cliffs and alpine vegetation, contains one of the stone huts where the mountain climber finds shelter and food.

Within the boundaries of the forest are many ponds and streams well stocked with speckled trout, where at evening white tail deer come silently to drink.

North and south of Asheville, N. C., stretches the Pisgah forest, traversed by the Pisgah auto road. Here the tourist may motor to within a mile of the summit of Mount Pisgah, leave his car on government parking ground, climb to the top, and lunch at the hotel on Pisgah ridge.

In Arkansas the Ozark forest offers its highways and byways—further west lies the Wichita forest with its buffalo herd and its scenic highway. To fishing enthusiasts or lovers of water sports the Florida National forest close to Camp Walton, affords many interesting trips. So, whether you wish to spend January on skis or in a bathing suit, whether you wish to cast a fly for speckled trout, or troll for tarpon, you can find your pet outdoor enjoyment somewhere in our eastern national forests.

SAVE THE MAPS,

RAPID improvement of the Utah state highway system in the last two years has brought the land of the great salt lake into prominence as a transcoinental tourists' objective and control. Salt Lake city is the natural center of the system. Here the Lincoln, Midland and Zion Park highways and trails to the Yellowstone district converge, and few of the thousands of middle west motorists who plan trips into the west this summer will fail to enjoy a rest in the famous Mormon city.

State highway paving has been concentrated where it is most needed, on the north and south roads. The artery leading south from Richmond through Logan and Ogden to Salt Lake City and on to Salem is now paved and connected and work has been started on the Lincoln highway pavement west of Salt Lake and near the Nevada line.

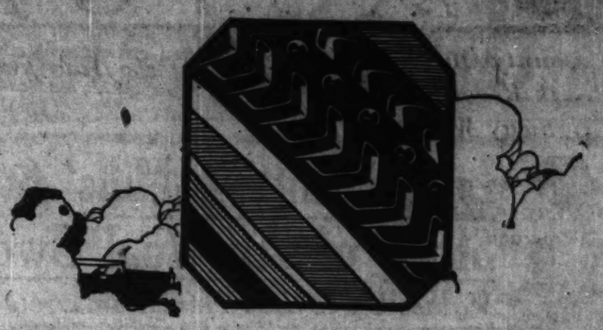
Cross state roads are still improved earth for the most part. The Lincoln enters the state from Evanston, Wyo., and drops south through Echo City and Coalville to Salt Lake City. From that point it runs west, bordering the salt lake, to Mills and there turns south and west across the lower end of the desert to the Nevada line. Much of this western stretch is unimproved earth.

Arkansas Busy.

A $2,000,000 road has just been completed in the northern road improvement district of Arkansas, near Pine Bluff, including seventy-five miles of asphalt pavement and two course gravel compaction, from Stuggart and other points to the Jefferson county line. Motor trucks will now be able to pass over this highway with heavy loads of rice from the 90,000 acres of rice lands in that vicinity, affording cheaper and quicker access to the markets. Plans are now on foot for constructing a connecting road with Pine Bluff through Jefferson county.

MOTOR SUMMARY.

There are 2,000,000 autos, 250,000 tractors, and 150,000 trucks on the 6,000,000 farms in the United States.



You might as well get both

Long mileage alone doesn't make a tire good. You should also get freedom from trouble. The tread should last for thousands of miles, giving continued traction and protection against skidding.

MILLER GEARED-TO-THE-ROAD TIRES

are built to save you both money and trouble! Every one will give uniformly high mileage at low cost. The Geared-to-the-Road Tread will last 50 per cent longer than the average non-skid tread. It is tough and resilient. It does not cut and chip as easily as other treads.

You can ride on Miller Tires with confidence. They stand up over any kind of road. The Miller Rubber Company puts its reputation as a leader in the tire industry back of every tire and tube bearing the name "Miller."

Buy a Miller Tire and watch it mile after mile. It will prove to you, as Miller Tires have proved to hundreds of thousands of other motorists, that it will

Save You Both Money and Trouble

Miller uniform Inner Tubes will help increase mileage in any tire, but in Miller Tires they give a combination that can't be beaten.

Oakland Stands Squarely Behind the New Oakland Six

The exceptional performance and dependability of the New Oakland Six are not the result of chance. They are the result of the deliberate effort of Oakland to make the best light-weight six that correct design and careful building can produce.

Oakland, a division of General Motors, stands squarely behind this new Six. It guarantees Oakland performance—not in general terms, but with a definite 15,000 mile written guarantee.

Let us show you why we have such unbounded confidence in this car.

20,000 Pairs Silk Hose In a Marvelous Sale

Leiter's—Main Floor—Center.

This is without doubt our biggest hosiery sale of the year. We secured the so-called "irregulars" from a hosiery mill that is noted for the splendid quality of its product, for their fine fitting, good looking and good wearing qualities—a make of hosiery that women know, like—and will want a season's supply of when they see them.

Made of pure Japan thread silk with the fashionable bright luster. Plain and drop stitch styles with hemmed or ribbed tops. Most of these hose have three fashion seam back and fashioned legs with seamless feet. White, black and plenty of new summer colors.

Although they are classed as irregulars in most instances the defects are unnoticeable unless we point them out to you. Now is the time to buy your summer supply and save money.

FARM AND GARDEN

Father of Farm Bureau to Preside at Its Decennial

By Frank Ridgway.

HENRY H. PARKE.

OUT behind a farm barn near Genoa, Ill., ten years ago this month the farm bureau movement of this state and in a large sense of the whole United States, came into being. It grew out of an earnest conference of farmers behind Henry H. Parke's barn.

Neighbors were helping thresh at the Parke farm. At noon while the men rested, whittled, smoked and dug holes in the ground with their knives—they sat around a grain wagon debating over the possible yield of the field they would thresh that afternoon. The debate ended when Henry Parke mounted the wagon tongue to discuss the formation of an organization which has grown into the farm bureau.

Since then his wagon-tongue speech has been modified and amplified and given many times at farm bureau meetings all over the country, and today Henry H. Parke may be rightly called the father of the farm bureau.

Saw New Ways Coming.

"Did you and your neighbors know that in this barnyard meeting you were starting a movement that would band more than a million farmers together in forty-seven states and more than 1,600 counties?" Henry Parke was asked a few days ago while in Chicago for a meeting at the Illinois Agricultural association's offices.

"No, sir," chuckled Mr. Parke. "We did not—at that time. But we did realize that the pioneer days of easy land and haphazard farming were over and that the days of scientific, businesslike agriculture had arrived."

Today Mr. Parke is chairman of the committee representing the state farm bureau, the ninety-five county farm bureaus of the state, the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, the Illinois Farmers' institute, and the American Farm Bureau federation, which is arranging the farm bureau decennial celebration to be given at De Kalb on Friday, June 30.

Pageant Chief Event.

Mr. Parke and neighbors who were with him in the early days of the first Illinois farm bureau will be the principals in the cast of the pageant, "Forward, Farm Bureau," which is to be the chief event of the celebration, to depict the history of the movement and give a glimpse of its ideals and future plans.

Nearly 2,000 farmers, men, women, and children, from thirteen northern Illinois counties are to be actors in the pageant under the tutelage of Miss Nina Lamkin, New York City. Sixty-five counties have already arranged to have floats showing their accomplishment.

J. D. Bilsborrow, University of Illinois, chairman of the pageant committee, says it will be the greatest gathering of farmers ever held in Illinois.

Henry Parke will be the leader of all ceremonies. For many years he has been a student of farmers' cooperative problems. He was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1898, receiving his master's degree there in 1900, after which he taught at the University of West Virginia. He took over the Genoa farm in 1901 and became active as an officer and leader of the Farmers' institute work in his county.

The Man with Vision.

In his wagon tongue speech Mr. Parke said to his neighbors: "These courses and meetings we are having have been valuable, but what we farmers in De Kalb county need more than any other one thing is to organize, to raise funds, and to found some sort of permanent organization for the betterment of agriculture."

The first step in that direction was a club formed at Sycamore, followed by various counties within a few months. Mr. Parke did not believe these were enough, and he worked for two years to form a county-wide organization. It came in February, 1912, when farmers, bankers, and newspaper men met at De Kalb. Frank W. Greenaway, editor of the De Kalb Chronicle, and S. E. Bradt, a banker-farmer, helped. Everybody—bankers, business men, newspapers, and farmers—aided in raising a budget for the first three years.

Assumes National Proportions.

William G. Eckhardt, until recently treasurer of the United States Grain Growers, Inc., was employed as the first adviser, and the first Illinois bureau was launched under the name of the De Kalb County Soil Improvement association. The movement spread immediately. Kankakee county organized about the same time, engaging John S. Collier as adviser, a position he holds to this day.

County bureaus then sprang up in New York, Missouri, Wisconsin, and Kansas. Illinois counties were federated, and six years ago the Illinois Agricultural association was organized at Urbana. There were then twenty bureaus. More have been organized by the state farm bureau—there are now ninety-five.

Agricultural problems continued to grow, and three years ago the states were federated into the American Farm Bureau federation, growing into unbelievable proportions until it now has approximately a million members.

Ten Years Bring Many Changes.

Working every day on his Genoa farm this month is the man who was behind it all—Henry H. Parke, modest, unassuming, but a real agricultural leader. From the meeting on the Parke farm has sprung the organization behind the agricultural bloc in congress which has succeeded in passing more constructive agricultural legislation than any since the first American congress.

This organization, which has made its influence national and international in scope, is to have its tenth birthday celebrated at De Kalb the last day of this month, when Henry Parke will be there to tell the story of its origin.

GARDEN NOTES

Flower gardeners are learning to follow the practice of trimming shrubs that bloom before the first of June as soon as the blossoms fall. This includes such shrubs as forsynthia, bridal wreath, and lilac. Shrubs that blossom after the first of June should not be pruned this summer; wait and trim them next spring. March is a good time for spring pruning.

Nico dust or nicotine sulphate dust is one of the most effective materials to use on vine crops to control the striped melon beetle.

Grape vineyards should be cultivated this week to destroy the grape root worm. As soon as adult beetles appear on the vines, spray them with arsenate of lead. Use a pound and a half of paste to twenty-five gallons of water, or use the same amount of Bordeaux mixture instead of water if fungus diseases are to be held in check.

W. P. Flint, state entomologist, says the only method of combating the seventeen year cicada, incorrectly called locust, is to screen the trees with a cheap grade of cheese cloth or mosquito bar. It is practical to screen small trees. To protect valuable trees in Chicago they must be screened for the next three or four weeks, or as long as the cicadas infest them.

June and July are ordinarily considered the time to do summer pruning. Prune lightly—just cut back the growing shoots.

It is a risk to plant peas, muskmelons, pumpkins, and peppers in Chicago gardens after the middle of June. All of these crops should be in the ground at least by the last of this week.

Start pinching back the terminal buds of raspberries, blackberries, and dewberries when they reach a height of two to two and a half feet.

Cabbage growers should begin to watch for the cabbage worms, cabbage loopers, and cutworms. An arsenate spray will kill them.

Florists Protest to Washington on Plant Quarantine

HORTICULTURISTS severely criticized and charged the federal horticultural board with exceeding its authority in administering the plant quarantine act of 1912 at a recent conference of growers, florists, nurserymen, and farmers held in Washington, D. C.

Florists have seriously objected to Quarantine 37 ever since it was passed in 1918, and the Washington conference was held for the purpose of giving those affected a chance to register criticism or praise.

Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, who presided at the meeting, said: "Shortly after I became connected with the department of agriculture I heard of Quarantine 37—and I have heard of it steadily ever since."

Inspection Proves Inadequate.

Ten years ago, when it was realized that something must be done to keep out the pests that were being brought into the United States on nursery and florist stock from foreign countries, congress passed a law creating within the department of agriculture the federal horticultural board, with power to control the importation of nursery stock from abroad. This meant inspection of nursery stock shipped into America in order to prohibit diseased or infected stock. Officials of the board said at the conference that inspection and certification had been tried out, unsuccessfully.

"After years of work by federal and state inspectors, insects kept gaining. In November, 1918, the federal board issued Quarantine 37, prohibiting further shipments of nursery stock to America, except by special permit and examination. Under this quarantine all stock except fruit tree seedlings, rose stock, and certain bulbs, like tulips and hyacinths, must be inspected before being turned over to nurserymen, explained J. A. Young, Aurora, a nurseryman, who favors Quarantine 37.

Costs Government Millions.

An example of the danger there is in allowing plants to come in unrestricted is shown by the great damage done by the San José scale, which is thought to have been brought into this country in a shipment of Japanese peaches. The control work alone on this pest costs this country $10,000,000 a year. The oriental fruit worm, Japanese beetle, the citrus canker, the potato wart, and the European corn borer are pests that are said to have come into this country during the four years that were spent in getting the plant quarantine act through congress.

At the informal hearing at Washington it was evident that in general nurserymen are for Quarantine 37, while florists are opposed to it.

"It is believed a serious mistake has been made and that Quarantine 37 is basically illegal," declared J. Horace McFarland, chairman of the committee on horticultural quarantine.

Disease Only Bar.

F. R. Pierson, in supporting the horticulturist's viewpoint, said he thought the board should be called a plant tariff board. "We are not here to barter, to say what shall come in and what cannot. Our position is that any plant should be excluded if it brings in injurious insects or diseases; if not, you have no authority to bar it."

The legal aspects of Quarantine 37 will be reviewed, Secretary Wallace agreed.

A committee representing the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, said it believed in government control of imports and in thorough inspection and certification of imported plant products when necessary; "but we protest vigorously against Quarantine 37 as administered, and which operates as a blanket economic embargo."

Committee Voices Objections.

In the committee's arguments this statement was made: "Every bit of comment favorable to Quarantine 37 which we have heard or read from trade members treats only of the economic protection it gives them from competition; not one commends it for the protection it was designed to give from pests."

This committee recommended that Quarantine 37 be withdrawn, because it is indefensible even as an economic measure. "This," says the recommendation, "will end the iniquitous system of special permits, which is unfair, un-American, and discriminatory, since the board not only decides which variety may be imported and in what quantity, but by which firms or individuals."

Seed Man Makes Protest.

Charging the board with cutting off the importation of plants, such as bleeding hearts, plants that are popular and harmless, J. C. Vaughn of Vaughn's Seed store, Chicago, said: "We are not fighting the quarantine, but the shutting out of good and desirable plants. It is known that blank forms have been taken abroad and later filled out in Washington. Why can't we all be treated alike?"

Nurserymen presented resolutions favoring existing restrictions. The information was gathered at the hearing for the benefit of the department of agriculture in taking future action. Officials of the horticultural board said the department "had no thought that the quarantine should be weakened or abolished."

POULTRY TIPS

Lack of shell material is usually the cause of soft shelled eggs. Where plenty of oyster shells are not given laying hens the eggs are often ill shaped, ridged, or the shell so soft it is easily broken and is not marketable.

Cockerels are always extremely hungry after being caponized and, contrary to general belief, they may be fed and watered immediately after the operation without any signs of discomfort.

Chickens infected with tuberculosis should be destroyed immediately. This is the only safe way to deal with tuberculosis, which is one of the most dreaded fowl diseases.

Look out for good breeding stock during the summer. Good profits always depend on healthy, vigorous birds that are kept for breeding purposes.

When the sun begins to burn down upon the watering pans in the summer is the time diseases in the poultry yards are hardest to keep down. They are easier to prevent than to cure. One dram of permanganate of potash added to each gallon of drinking water will do much to keep down diseases among fowls in hot weather.

Lake Forest Estates Open for Flower Show

Next Saturday and Sunday Lake Forest will hold its annual flower and vegetable show under the auspices of the North Shore Horticultural society and the Lake Forest Garden club. The displays will be at the Gorton school near the Chicago and Northwestern station and the Chicago and Milwaukee trolley line.

On both days the show will open at noon and continue through the afternoon and evening. There will be many interesting features in flower arrangements besides the competitive displays of the choicest flowers and vegetable specimens grown on the private estates along the north shore.

Ticket holders to the flower and vegetable show will be allowed to go on a tour through the gardens on the following estates at Lake Forest: Louis F. Swift, Green Bay road; Joseph M. Cudahy, Deer path; Walter S. Brewster, Green Bay road; T. E. Donnelley, Green Bay road, and Hugh J. McBirney, Laurel road. Banners will be at the garden gate to guide visitors from Chicago and neighboring towns.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Find the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your questions to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question R. H. Kube, 3406 Monroe street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Should automobile drivers be required to pass an examination before being allowed to drive a car?

Where Asked.

Along Michigan avenue, downtown.

The Answers.

Philip Madin, Kenilworth, Ill., chauffeur—Why, certainly. There is no question that every man or woman should first pass an examination before being allowed to operate a car over the streets. Too many people buy an auto and then, without any experience, drive into the loop, where they are sure to cause traffic jams, or possibly an accident.

Mrs. C. E. Joyce, 832 Oakdale avenue—Yes, they certainly should. There are too many accidents caused by people who don't know how to drive or how to handle the car in an emergency. The party at the wheel should be able to depend upon the other fellow being an experienced driver, too. Chauffeurs have to pass an examination, and just because some other man has enough money to buy a car is no reason he should not have to pass an examination.

Lloyd W. Johnson, Warsaw, Ind.—I think they should, by all means. It would surely eliminate a great many accidents if they did. I recently witnessed an accident on Jackson boulevard caused by an inexperienced driver being at the wheel. One wonders that a law governing this had not been adopted years ago.

Mrs. Harriet Kodiz, 4049 North Springfield avenue—Yes, they surely should. When you are at the wheel you actually have your life in your own hands. Then there are usually occupants in the other seats of your car, to say nothing of the pedestrians. And how often these pedestrians are young children. The accident list shows how often they suffer because of reckless driving.

D. L. Clinton, 815 North Oak Park avenue, salesman—It seems to me it would be well worth while. As it is there are too many people driving cars who know practically nothing about them, oftentimes are even ignorant of the local regulations governing autoists. The public ought to see to it that the driver understands his business. As it is now, we do not know that he does.

It's Time to Look for Grain Show Specimens

FARMERS who expect to exhibit in the hay and grain show of the International Live Stock exposition to be held in Chicago Dec. 2 to 9 have already begun to look over their fields for prize winning specimens and managers of the show are making preliminary plans for the big exhibit.

The premium list is being sent out to small grain and corn growers. Ten thousand dollars in prizes offered by the Chicago Board of Trade will be divided among grain growers who exhibit this year.

G. I. Christie of Purdue, who has been director of the hay and grain show since its inception, says the International show is not a money making institution. It is conducted solely in the interests of agriculture and country life and is not for the profit of any individual organization or corporation.

All plans are made with the active cooperation of state institutions, such as agricultural colleges and state agricultural associations. In this way the interests of all classes of farmers are looked after. Every farmer gets his share of the premium, whether he grows corn, wheat, or some other crop.

It is time to begin looking for the good specimens of wheat, corn, rye, barley, sweet clover, timothy, soy beans, cow peas, and field peas, because they are all given their just share of the prize money.

W. Q. Fitch of Purdue will be assistant superintendent again this year and will be in charge of the show.

Show 1923 Features

Westcott offers in the new models, introduced a month ago, scores of ideas that point the way for 1923 motor car construction. There is a California top without extra cost, the carburetion is controlled thermostatically, giving greater power, speed and economy. The chassis lubrication is by a 500 lb. oil pressure system. A new braking design gives better brakes and removes all rods and tubes from the rear axle. The upholstering is beautiful hand-buffed water-crushed leather. It has chrome vanadian steel springs.

The Standard A-44 touring pictured above is a full sized five passenger car, yet it turns completely around in a circle with a radius of 18 feet. Optional colors of maroon and dark blue can be delivered immediately.

LASKER SHOWS WHAT SUBSIDY ACT PROVIDES

BY A. D. LASKER.
[Chairman of the U. S. Shipping Board.]
ARTICLE 5.

One of the greatest problems the present administration faced at its inception was the necessity, as covered in previous articles, for liquidating the government-owned fleet so that it could pass into private hands, end the loss of government operation, cause the creation of a privately owned fleet that would be rightly balanced for war and peace time needs, and insure at the same time that the art of shipbuilding in America be kept alive in spite of the ten year naval holiday.

The difficulties under which we operate are due to our higher standards of living; who among us would have it otherwise? But, with higher cost of building, with higher cost of wages aboard the ships, with higher cost of operations on shore, with generations of established competing businesses of competing countries to meet and overcome, no private enterprise can step into the breach and sustain the losses while we are getting the volume that in turn will equalize us with the rest of the world.

Would Equal Great Britain.

So the President has proposed to the Congress the enactment of a series of laws that will put American shippers on the same basis with Great Britain. Where costs are next highest to ours; providing that if we put ourselves on a parity with Britain, the ingenuity of America will conquer all other obstacles.

The bill proposes direct aids to ships in the form of a cash subsidy, which, as estimated, if we should ultimately develop the 7,500,000 gross tons needed to carry half of the overseas trade of America, will cost the treasury approximately $30,000,000. Should we reach that point, the losses of $50,000,000 per annum now incurred in the operation of the shipping board would long before have ended, because the shipping board would have been out of business and a vaster number of our ships would be on the seas.

In addition, the bill proposes certain indirect aids, one of the chief being a deduction from income tax equal to 5 per cent of the moneys paid in freights. The purpose of this provision is to insure fuller cargoes.

Huge Loan Is Proposed.

The bill proposes a loan fund of $125,000,000 at 2 per cent minimum interest to aid those who would build the types of ships we still need. Without the passage of the proposed bill and this feature, the art of shipbuilding in America will wither and die. The latter shows the penalty we will be obliged to pay if we permit this art to be lost for war time needs.

The desirable tonnage owned by the shipping board under the proposed bill would be disposed of at world market prices to American buyers. To the extent, therefore, the board can furnish ships, the owners will escape the handicap that would otherwise inure against them on account of initial high cost.

Today it is impossible for the government to sell any of its ships. It should be emphasized that it is the administration's hope that, with the subsidy and indirect aid to ships which it proposes, it will be able to begin selling our ships, so that the ships, instead of being a dead asset, costing the government a fortune to maintain and operate, will be turned into cash that will find its way back into the treasury.

Will Offset Subsidy Cost.

The government believes that in addition to the vast sums that will come into the treasury through the sale of the ships (which it feels cannot be sold without this legislation), the curtailment of operating loss will more than offset the subsidy charge.

Thus, whether from the standpoint of decreasing taxation or from the standpoint of establishing an American merchant marine, the reasons for the need of the legislation asked are compelling.

It is proposed that 50 per cent of all immigrant traffic come in American built ships. This provision alone will insure a volume of business in the north Atlantic that should give us a large growth in our third class passenger business. If such a law had been in force when immigration was at its height a few years ago, we would have had, when we entered the world war, without cost to the treasury, a respectable passenger fleet under the American flag plying between our shores and Europe.

It is contemplated that the President will declare the Philippines coastwise, thus giving American flag ships exclusively the benefit of the commerce between the shores of our large Pacific possession and our homeland.

Studying Port Facilities.

Section 28 of the present merchant marine law provides for through preferential rates on American railroads on goods shipped abroad via American ship bottoms when adequate facilities shall exist. A committee of the shipping board is now visiting the ports of the country to ascertain whether or not these adequate facilities do exist.

The bill proposes that, when proper facilities exist, the President may end the army and navy transport, contracting for our military transportation with privately owned ships, insuring thereby a merchant marine trained for war expansion in time of emergency.

Looking forward to closer coördination between rail and water transportation—a basic essential toward the expansion of our trade—the bill proposes a scheme for bringing nearer together the interstate commerce commission and the shipping board on subjects of mutual interest.

How Help Is Figured Out.

The subsidy to be paid our ships is computed on a differential based on a combination of speed, size, and distance covered, thereby encouraging the building of a fleet that shall be balanced for peace and wartime purposes alike.

The basic subsidy provides that every vessel of the United States entitled to direct aid shall receive a sum equal to one-half a cent per gross ton for each 100 miles covered and increases with each knot, until at twenty-three knots and over the ship shall receive 2.6 cents per gross ton.

In the discretion of the shipping board, where essential lines are needed and the subsidy proposed in the bill is not sufficient, a subsidy up to double the amount provided for in the law may be allowed.

Into the subsidy fund are to be paid such tonnage dues as are collected. These dues are to be doubled.

Mails Carried Otherwise.

No ships getting the subsidy are to be paid for carrying the mails; the compensation they would customarily receive will go to the subsidy fund.

The subsidy fund is to be derived by reserving 10 per cent of the moneys collected in duties as a revolving fund.

A limitation of profits is proposed by the government, which, while on the one hand forbidding profiteering, on the other hand insures no diminution in the inspiration of initiative and the consequent attraction of the necessary capital.

This is accomplished by a proviso that after a ship has earned 10 per cent on its capital half of the earnings shall be returned to the merchant marine fund until the full amount of the subsidy shall have been repaid. After that the ship keeps all the excess earnings.

States His Conclusions.

In these articles I have undertaken to sketch briefly the history of America's rise and decline on the sea and the renewed need, for war and peace time purposes, of control of our own sea carriage; and in behalf of the administration I affirm its belief that the legislation it proposes to congress will, at a minimum of cost, accomplish these purposes and automatically end the great loss now insurred in the operation of the government owned fleet.

If any have a better program to offer, the government, with an open mind, will be glad to consider it. If no one has a better program to offer, then there are but two alternatives—either adopt the President's proposals or continue the inefficiency and loss of government operation.

No, there is still another alternative—end the government's operation and make arrangements to sell the fleet abroad or scrap it. If this later alternative were ordered by congress, there is no doubt, to my mind, that within only a few weeks all America would realize the utter necessity of its merchant marine for its needs, and a unanimous cry would go up demanding of the congress that the ships be put back into service.

A Costly Experiment.

The farmer, the manufacturer, the miner alike would find freights higher, deliveries more uncertain and business unstabilized.

In our own interest, and that our children may inherit the same measure of opportunity that we inherited, it is essential that the proposed merchant marine legislation pass congress expeditiously, that we may end the loss and inefficiency of government operation, that we may get on the road to constructing the ships needed under private ownership to balance our fleet, and that we may prove that we do not hang blindly to the fetishes of the past, but, with changed conditions, show that America is lacking neither in vision nor in real statesmanship.

[THE END.]

RAILROAD NOTES

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report an increasing volume of traffic in nearly everything except coal, the small production and shipment of the latter commodity pulling down the general average. Southern road officials report a slump in grain as well as in coal compared with a year ago, but otherwise their testimony of the state of trade is favorable.

The Cleveland Union Terminals company was granted authority by the interstate commerce commission to issue $12,000,000 of 5½ per cent first mortgage sinking fund gold bonds, series A, to be sold at not less than 92½ per cent of par and accrued interest, to be used for capital purposes. The New York Central and other railroads which will use the new union terminal station in Cleveland will assume jointly the obligation and liability as guarantors of the bonds. The bonds are to be used in construction of the projected new union terminal.

Approval is being sought from the Wisconsin railroad commission of a plan of six Wisconsin electric railway companies to reduce interurban fares on their 300 miles of roadway by the introduction of an interchangeable mileage book. The schedule of rates filed with the commission provides for a reduction of about 33 per cent. Interstate lines are not included. The fare proposed is 2 cents a mile provided a 1,000 mile interchangeable mileage book is purchased.

The Pacific Mail Steamship company has withdrawn two ships from service between San Francisco and Manila because of adverse trade conditions and failure to enact legislation extending coastwise laws to the Philippines.

SPECIAL SESSION IF SOLONS BALK ON SHIPPING BILL

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—"Now or never," is the platform of President Harding and those who support him in his determined stand that congress must stay in session this summer to legislate for the relief of the American merchant marine.

The President now is more insistent than ever that congress act on the pending ship subsidy bill to insure the establishment of a privately owned and operated world shipping service and to take the government out of the tremendously expensive heritage of the war.

Mr. Harding positively refuses to take for an answer the excuse of house leaders called into conference on the subject that the issue is too big, too complicated, and too conducive to serious political trouble for consideration now in the midst of tariff and bonus turmoils on the verge of a national congressional campaign.

Special Session If Necessary.

Congress must not adjourn this summer until it comes substantially to the government's relief in its shipping dilemma, the President declares unreservedly. His attitude is so firm as to indicate clearly that if the congress will not take action on its own initiative he will call it in special session to function on the issue just as soon as the anxious members think they are free to spend their time and talents in haranguing their constituencies on the subject of their reelection.

The matter is unquestionably one of the most serious governmental problems of the Harding administration. Developments in the situation indicate a downright tug of war between the executive and the legislative branches of the government.

The President, of course, does not care to engage in a contest with his party in the senate and the house, and if it is possible to reach an agreement which will obviate a quarrel he will do so. But there seems no doubt that any such agreement will not embrace a compromise on the basis of postponing action on the ship subsidy legislation.

U. S. Ownership a Failure.

Advocates of the ship subsidy bill contend that unless it is enacted before congress adjourns the administration of the government's shipping interests will go to pieces. There has already been a strong hint from an administration spokesman that if the measure is not passed at the present congressional session the President will call congress to relieve the executive of the management of the great post-war merchant fleet. He believes that without the ship subsidy act in operation the effort to administer the fleet will end in failure.

The experiment of government ownership and control of merchant vessels has proved to be futile, according to the administration's view. If relief is not afforded very soon, and that relief furnished by the passage of the ship subsidy measure, congress had better take over the management of the shipping board and the emergency corporation and show how much it knows about operating a merchant fleet.

For congress to ignore the recommendations of those responsible for the conduct of the government's merchant shipping organization, who have pointed out the dangers that threaten a continuance of present conditions, is regarded by the administration as a discouragement unworthy of the legislative branch.

Hard to Interest Public.

These things show the temper of the President and his advisers. There is nothing about the ship subsidy bill to grip the imagination of the country, and it is somewhat difficult to arouse public interest. The word "subsidy" has an unpleasant sound to American ears, and the administration realizes that it has a psychological problem to deal with in that connection. It prefers that the measure be called a ship "compensation" or a ship "remuneration" bill. One of the foremost advocates of the bill, a leader in agricultural movements, has said that the only thing he did not like about it was the word "subsidy," and he admitted this was mere prejudice against the word itself.

The main fear of the administration is that postponement beyond the current session will mean the death of the measure, or even if it should be assured of passage at a later time the damage will have been done and the government have been obliged to retire from the merchant shipping business at a tremendous sacrifice of valuable property.

As the President and his supporters view the situation there will be no opportunity, by reason of lack of time, to dispose of the subsidy bill in the regular session of congress which will be begun in December. That session must end, by constitutional limitation, on March 4, 1923, giving the session a life of only three months.

Walker Hotel and Three Connecting Apartment Buildings to be Erected in Washington

$4,200,000 7% Bond Issue for Housing Needs At the Nation's Capital

Our Nation's capital, steadily growing in its permanent population and crowded with visitors, with Congress in session almost continuously, and more and more government agencies and commissions centering in the capital city, Washington has long needed more great hotels and apartment buildings.

To fill this need investors have an unusual opportunity to participate in an offering by the American Bond & Mortgage Co., of $4,200,000 7% Gold Bonds on a new combination hotel and apartment building to be erected at the southeast corner of Connecticut Avenue and De Sales Street—a location so central that it can easily be seen from the White House.

This new hotel is to be known as the "Walker." It will occupy an acre and a half of ground. The Washington Star of April 18th says that this is the largest private construction enterprise ever undertaken in Washington.

Land, buildings, the first claim on the assured earnings of the two distinct types of buildings, and the elaborate furnishings, all stand back of this bond issue. The security for this $4,200,000 is appraised at $7,000,000.

This issue, with its American Bond safeguards, its ample security and 7% income offers an excellent opportunity for the investment of your July interest and principal funds.

Beef cattle advanced sharply the last week with general average price of good steers for the week at $8.85, standing highest in fifteen months. Price range was narrower than usual, best selling at $9.60, with few below $8.35. Butcher stock and feeding cattle shared in the general advance.

Closing hog values were about the lowest of the week, with top selected at $10.85, and the general average at $10.55. Week's receipts at 160,600 were third largest since February, while shipments from Chicago at 21,000 were among the smallest in a year. Estimated average weight last week 239 lbs, the same as previous week, and a pound heavier than a year ago.

Closing Sheep Trade Steady.

Receipts of sheep yesterday at 8,000 were practically all forwarded direct to packers from other markets. Values late in the week ruled generally steady with close previous week, on best offerings, while weighty and undesirable sheep and lambs slumped sharply. Native spring-ers this week reached $15.00 for a few to city butchers, while top shorn lambs sold at $13.00.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 21,000 cattle, 48,000 hogs, and 14,000 sheep, as against 20,210 cattle, 48,428 hogs, and 19,589 sheep corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 60,000 cattle, 175,000 hogs, and 75,000 sheep, as against 59,381 cattle, 171,968 hogs and 70,705 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs for Monday range from 39,000 to 46,000. B. E. Collins marked 39,000, J. Fitzgerald 45,000, E. R. Gentry 47,000, F. W. Waddell 50,000, E. S. Waterbury 52,000, Edward Morris and W. H. Overman 55,000, Geo. Brittain 58,000, and F. R. Burrows 60,000.

How Bank Employs Deposits.

Every one who deposits money in a bank is naturally interested in how the bank manages his money. If the money is wisely and conservatively handled it is safe and at the same time usefully employed. The best way of finding out what becomes of such funds is by studying the statements published by the bank from time to time. As these statements mean very little to those not familiar with the banking business, we shall endeavor to give our readers a brief and simple explanation which may assist them in analyzing and understanding these statements.

In the first place, when a bank accepts a deposit it agrees to repay the money instantly when the depositor asks for it. But deposits cannot lie idle in the vaults. They must be put to work for the good of the community in the shape of loans to merchants and manufacturers, investments in bonds, mortgages, and government loans. Business would stop if the bank refused to loan money and yet, if depositors ask for their money it must be forthcoming. How can a bank lend money and at the same time have it available to pay depositors? The answer lies in the bank's reserves of cash and of securities on which cash can immediately be raised, plus its other assets and especially its surplus of assets over what it owes depositors. In order to be always ready to pay depositors their money on demand, the bank has the following items:

CASH. A substantial amount of the money deposited, instead of being put to work, is held as a reserve. Part of this is kept in the bank and part (in the case of member banks) is deposited with the federal reserve bank, where it can be obtained on a moment's notice.

CHECKS ON OTHER BANKS. A large part of a bank's deposits consist of checks drawn on other banks, which will be converted into cash as soon as they have passed through the clearing house or been otherwise collected. This requires one day.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT SECURITIES (bonds and notes) usually form part of the investments of a bank. As these are among the safest investments possible and are readily salable, they are an additional safeguard of the depositors' money.

LOANS TO INDIVIDUALS AND CORPORATIONS are secured by marketable collateral of a value substantially in excess of the amount loaned. If the value of the collateral declines the bank demands additional collateral in order to keep the loan secure. Such loans are very liquid, as they are repayable on demand whenever the bank asks for them.

BONDS of railroads, industrial and public utility corporations, etc., constitute another form of investment for the bank's funds. These can readily be sold and converted into cash should the occasion arise.

LOANS TO CUSTOMERS to enable them to carry on their business are largely secured by collateral and payable, on the average, in ninety days or less. The notes given for these loans can usually be discounted and converted into cash at any time.

REAL ESTATE and mortgages usually represent a small percentage of a bank's investments. While such assets are not as easily and quickly converted into cash as those previously mentioned, they constitute an additional guarantee of the bank's ability to meet demands upon it.

BANK BUILDING, FURNITURE, ETC., also represent the investment usually of a small proportion of the amount owed depositors.

SURPLUS is built up out of earnings and accumulated from year to year. Capital and surplus thus become an additional guarantee to depositors that their debts will be paid.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The local unlisted securities market was slightly less active and rather irregular, with most of the interest shown in the motor and sugar stocks. Packard, after advancing to sales at 16¼, reacted to sales at 14¾, closing at 14¾ bid, offered at 15¼. The preferred was quoted 88 to 90, ex-dividend. Paige-Detroit was steady at 22¼@23. Stearns was unchanged at 24@24½, while Timken-Detroit declined to sales at 29½, closing with stock offered at this price and buyers at 28¼. McCord common was active, advancing to high sales at 9, but eased off to a close of 7½ bid, 8 asked.

Butler Brothers sold off about one point to a close of 39½ bid, 40 asked. A good demand continued for Burroughs Adding Machine at 178, with limited offerings at 183. Kellogg Toasted Corn Flakes was in favor at 42 bid, offered at 45. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply was steady at 53@55. Moline Plow preferred improved to sales at 8¾, while Avery common was steady at 24½@26½ and the preferred continued in good demand at 55, with small lots offered at 60. Goodyear Tire and Rubber common at 13½@13¾ was unchanged, while the preferred was without note at 39@40.

In the sugar group Holland-St. Louis changed hands at 7¼, closing easier at 6½@6¾. Columbia improved to 7¾, closing with stock offered at this price and 7¼ bid. Michigan was traded in at 7¼, while Godchaux preferred was wanted at 78, with stock offered at 82.

The public utility issues were quiet, with a slightly lower range of prices. American Gas and Electric preferred lost a point at 44½, while the common at 158 reflected a two point decline. American Light and Traction was two points lower at 140; American Power and Light was unchanged at 116. The preferred was slightly easier at 110@112. Commonwealth Power Railway and Light issues were both easier, the common selling at 29 and the preferred at 64½.

BUSINESS NEWS IN BRIEF

[Copyright: 1922: By Fairchild News Service.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Charges of price maintenance are made by the federal commission against Oppenheim, Oberdorf & Co., Inc., Baltimore, Md. The firm does business as the Sealpax company, and manufactures ready made clothing, underwear, and other garments. The complaint specifies only the "Sealpax" line of underwear. The firm is given thirty days to reply.

PARIS.—That an important velvet season is ahead is indicated by a showing of a prominent Paris house. Some of the velvets are of extreme delicateness and lightness. Large use of crepe and metal is also anticipated.

NEW YORK.—Extreme women's footwear style will continue for fall, head of large shoe firm says. New combinations of materials and colors will be used. Heels, he said, may be slightly higher.

AKRON, O.—H. S. Firestone, president of Firestone Tire and Rubber company, warns against "overproduction of tires. "Demand all along the line has not kept up with production," he says.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—An unconfirmable rumor persists here that Monday will see reopening of all Pawtuxet and Blackstone Valley cotton mills closed by strike.

NEW YORK.—Buyers of better grade children's wear report an increase in business during the last two weeks. The bulk of trade is in simple tub silk frocks, which are both cool and practical, they say.

MANCHESTER—The chairman of the British Cotton and Wool Dyers' association contradicts the charge made in house of parliament that German dye and color prices are exorbitant.

BERLIN—Expecting that this year will see the end of high profits and large orders placed by American and British buyers, Chemnitz textile manufacturers urge development of the Russian trade. They disapprove of extended credits, however, and suggest barter instead.

LONDON.—The small linen demand makes a flax shortage unlikely, says Robert Barbour, president of the Barbour Flax Spinning company of Paterson, N. J., who is in London. He sees no return to pre-war linen demand.

NEW YORK.—Canton flat and satin Canton second are popular forecasts in the silk market for fall business. Where style is the primary consideration, however, "flat crepe," a heavy, close, fine crepe de chine weave is placed before either.

PHILADELPHIA.—Hosiery jobbers complain that a number of manufacturers are now selling direct and at prices below those sold to jobbing trade several months ago. One line of goods previously sold to jobbing trade for $30 is now being offered to retail trade for $27.50.

Strong Position of Public Utilities

Public Utility Bonds Now Yield from 6½% to 8%

Neglected to a large degree during the war period, because fixed or begrudgingly granted increased rates did not permit of exorbitant earnings, Public Utility Corporations produced the 24-hour essential services of light, power, heat, transportation and communication, plodding along a somewhat weary way. At the end of their five years of "trial by fire" they were found to be in this position:

Their inventories were practically nil, because their non-profiteering rates had not permitted them to be extravagant in buying.

They had not over-extended plants and equipment because new money had been difficult to obtain.

They had been forced to practice every economy and in so doing had drilled their great army of employes to an understanding of the industry and the necessity of efficiency.

What a contrast with many other industries that "went mad" with the making of tremendous war profits!

When commodity prices began to break, the utilities—their shelves bare—were able to take advantage of all price reductions. As commodity prices have dropped, cost of production has been reduced, giving the companies the advantage to a large extent of larger revenues resultant from increased rates.

The favor which utility securities now find at the hands of investors, particularly the small saver, is now making possible financing on a considerable scale. This new money is enabling the industry to prepare itself for the resumption of the tremendous demand for service from industry that is coming with revival.

Our circulars, describing several issues of choice Public Utility Bonds yielding from 6½% to 8%, will be mailed upon request.

The New York Times.

New York, June 10.—[Special!]—The week ended today with another declining stock market, in which, not illogically, the lately much beamed "oil shares" were the particular point of weakness. Comparison of today's closing prices with those of the week before shows very substantial reaction. But the breakdown of an overdone speculation which the declining market reflects is altogether for the best interests of the financial situation. Prices in today's bond market again told the story. The week's movement as a whole shows as many net advances as net declines; the individual gains are for the most part larger than the losses, and the really striking declines have occurred mainly in securities of the speculative class.

Foreign Exchange Is Steady.

To the announcement of a three months' postponement of the German loan discussion by the bankers' conference, the foreign exchange market paid little attention. French exchange was somewhat weaker and the German mark went below 32-100th of a cent. Both rates have lost ground considerably during the last week; sterling is higher.

No one professed to understand just what is implied or expected from the fact of the foreign loan discussion being adjourned, but with the purpose of resuming it in September. If this reflects any deliberate purpose, it must be that the bankers expect to apply a good deal of quiet pressure in the interval, not only to France but to Germany, which may be much more in need of it.

Steel Orders Show Gain.

The monthly tonnage report of the United States Steel corporation, made public today, showed 5,254,828 tons of unfilled orders on hand May 31. This is an increase of 157,311 tons from April's unfilled orders, which totaled 5,096,917. This gain brings the total orders on the books of the company to the largest figures since May 31, 1921, when bookings were 5,482,487 tons. Shipments during May are estimated at 1,150,000 tons, and incoming business at 1,300,000 tons. With this gain in new business the increase for the three months since Feb. 28 is more than 1,100,000 tons, an amount not equaled for any similar period in many years.

New York Bank Report Good.

Another favorable statement was issued today by the New York clearing house. Surplus reserves increased $4,-27,000 and there was a gain of $37,000,-00 in loans. A gain of $28,987,000 in time deposits and of $48,829,000 in demand deposits, deducting $79,093,000 government deposits, was also recorded. Aggregate reserves totaled $697,000,000 and the excess reserve was $31,508,000.

GRAINS MOVE IN NARROW LIMITS; CORN VALUES UP

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain prices held within narrow limits with the bulk of the trade of an evening up character. Wheat finished ¼c lower to ½c higher, while corn was up ⅛@⅜c and oats ⅛@¼c. Rye was unchanged to ¼c lower.

Liquidation was on in wheat early in the week, and a change in sentiment came later and with general short covering the greater part of the loss was recovered the finish being ⅛@1c lower. Corn showed independent strength and gained 1⅛@1⅜c, while oats were ⅜@⅝c lower, and rye was off 4⅛@5c. Provisions while reacting toward the last closed with a gain of 15@35c on lard and 35@40c on short ribs.

Commission houses were fair buyers of wheat on the minor breaks but turned sellers on the bulge and the day's range was only about 1c with the September somewhat stronger than the July. The local element were well evened up at the last. Crop reports from the winter wheat belt were mixed but not sufficiently radical either way to have much effect on the market.

Weather conditions northwest were favorable for the crop and the forecast indicated showers in the west, and southwest. Harvesting is making rapid progress in Kansas and offerings to arrive are increasing. Export demand was slow.

Corn and Oats Higher.*

Corn and oats averaged slightly higher, although buying was mainly of a local character. Sentiment in corn remains rather bullish and there is little opposition when the pit element start to buy at all freely. Crop reports on both grains were rather favorable, while the cash demand was slow and prices in the sample market were slightly lower as compared with the July.

Hedging pressure is increasing in rye as harvesting approaches. The northwest was a fair seller and local sentiment was bearish while the seaboard was a moderate buyer.

Lard and Ribs Down.

Provisions were under pressure due to prospects for a larger run of hogs, but the trade was not large and net losses small. Lard closed with a net decline of 5@7½c and ribs 10@20c. Cash trade was only fair. Prices follow:

NEWS OF THE CROPS

P. S. Goodman, the Clement, Curtis & Co. crop expert, calls attention to the heavy decline in condition of winter wheat in the states that have reached the harvest period. The declines were all in the states of slow growth last fall, on account of drought conditions, and confirms the inherent trait of winter wheat under such conditions to mature in a weak condition, spring growth never being sufficient. This condition will spread northward.

A trained observer in Sumner county, Kas., reports that fields that look very promising from the roadside on inspection show two-thirds of the heads are empty.

"From Newton here wheat is very promising," wired George M. Le Count to Stein, Alstrin & Co., from Concordia, Kas. "Much is above average and is in early dough as far north as Salina. Wheat being forced to maturity. All lodged fields choked with red rust and these fields will yield poorly. Oats spotted, but Kansas oat crop will yield about average per acre. Corn coming fine."

While the Monsoon in India broke rather early this year, the result is said to have been fairly good. Local rains reported in the United Kingdom with the forecast for generally fair.

Burton Hungerford wired Logan & Bryan from Lodi, Ill.: "From east central Missouri through south central Illinois wheat generally very good. A few lodged places in rank growth and some thin stand fields, but prospects good with many fields ripening. Corn looks good. Most fields clean. Oats look fairly good considering lateness of seeding. Will have to make fast growth to make a good crop. Good general rain needed."

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of 300,000 to 400,000 bu wheat and a little business in corn, oats and rye were indicated by messages from the seaboard. Foreign demand on the whole was slow. Charters were made at Chicago for 60,000 bu wheat and 200,000 bu corn to eastern lake ports.

Domestic shipping sales at Chicago aggregated 15,000 bu wheat, 75,000 bu corn and 90,000 bu oats. Deliveries on May contracts were 106,000 bu wheat and 80,000 bu corn.

Business in cash wheat at Chicago was restricted by lack of offerings and sales in the sample market in the main represented part cars. No. 2 red was nominally 3⅛@4c and No. 2 hard 2⅛@3c over July for full cars. Receipts 16 cars. Outside markets unchanged with a slow demand.

Low grade cash corn at Chicago was ⅛@1c lower, the offerings being liberal with a number of cars carried over from the previous day. Basis on the No. 2 and No. 3 grades was easy, with No. 2 mixed 1⅛@1½c and yellow and white ⅜@1c under July. Receipts, 222 cars. Outside markets ½c lower to ¼c higher.

Demand for oats was slow and the basis slightly easier at ⅛@¼c over July for No. 2 white, and 1c under to 1c over for the No. 3. Sample values showed little change. Receipts, 107 cars.

Put Yourself in the Banker's Place

IT will help you, when you buy a real estate bond, to put yourself in the place of the bankers who issued the bonds.

The same factors that they had to consider are the ones that you should consider.

They, like you, have many investments to choose from, many building projects that want financing.

Some of these investments offer to pay 6%—others 7% or even more. Obviously, those that can secure favorable action at the lower rate must be stronger, safer and more secure than the others.

So when this bank, with a wide choice open to it, selects the safe 6% loan, we are getting the best.

And when we offer these 6% First Mortgage Gold Bonds to you, we are offering you the choice of the entire investment field.

The detailed facts about our newest issues will prove most interesting to any careful investor.

Write for the latest list of offerings—also our pointed booklet "Sixes or Sevens".

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Sentiment of the wheat trade at the close yesterday was about evenly divided. The trade is largely professional and inclines to the bear side, but is not pressing it to any extent. Cutting of new wheat at Mascoutah, Ill., and at a number of points in southern Indiana with prospects for its cutting becoming general had a tendency to make traders go slow on the buying side. There was buying of September and selling of July by the leading cash interests, while one of the largest cash handlers bought July freely.

Export bids on wheat were 7⅛c over Chicago July c. i. f. Buffalo for No. 2 hard, but only 400,000 bu of all wheat were reported sold for export. Millers were said to be after round lots. Shipments of wheat for the week were 2,232,000 bu, while receipts were only 498,000 bu. The tracks are cleaning up and it is said that the bulk of the wheat has been unloaded, which will in a measure offset the heavy shipments from store. A decrease in stocks is expected from now on.

There is an impression in certain quarters that the bear market in corn is about over. A number of the leading corn traders advance this opinion. They base their belief on a continued heavy consumption through feeding operations which have been profitable to the farmers. Hog values continue to hold at good levels and cattle has advanced about $1.00 per 100 lbs of late in the face of heavy marketing. A few are strong believers in a lighter crop this year. Absorption of corn on breaks has been liberal.

There were only 1,905 cars of all grain on track in Chicago yesterday morning, compared with 3,577 cars on June 5. There were 698 cars on track awaiting inspection and orders and 1,207 cars at elevators. There were 747 cars unloaded Friday, making a daily average of 735 cars for the week.

J. K. Mason, a vice president of the United States Grain Growers, Inc., in a statement before the senate investigating committee yesterday said that a Chicago millionaire had offered to loan the Grain Growers $50,000 with which to buy memberships on exchanges and loan the corporation $1,000,000. The gossip of the trade is that one of the Hales of Hales & Hunter has made the offer. There was no confirmation of it early yesterday.

A Wichita (Kas.) message said there were 52 cars of wheat carried over there yesterday and that farmers were rushing old wheat to market. They predict heavy receipts next week.

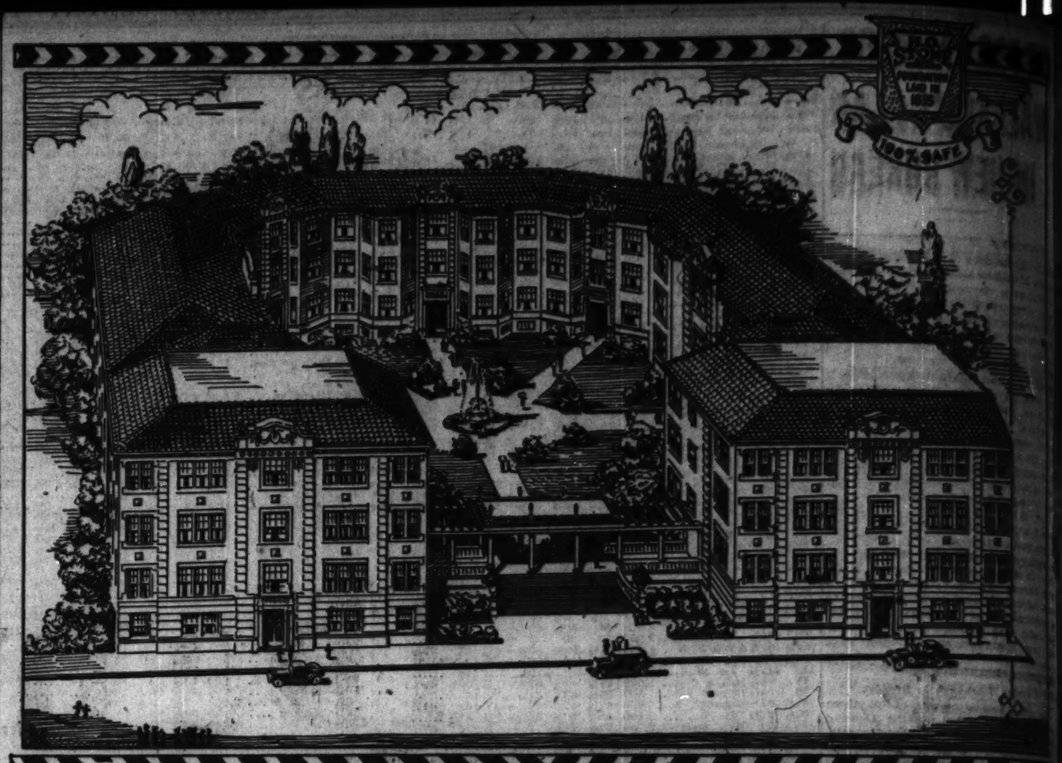
Supplies of wheat on ocean passage increased 1,600,000 bu the last week and are 52,080,000 bu, as estimated by the London Seed and Oil Reporter. Corn increased 890,000 bu, to 20,820,000 bu, and oats increased 50,000 bu and aggregates 4,400,000 bu.

Australian exports of wheat for the week of 1,676,000 bu, compared with 2,816,000 bu the previous week, and since Jan. 1 are 67,980,000 bu.

"Receipts are commencing to reflect an increased movement in the country," said a Hutchinson, Kas., message to the J. Rosenbaum Grain company. "Forty cars of wheat here today and no demand. Weather ideal for the crop."

Weekly weather forecast was for considerable cloudiness and temperatures above normal over the entire grain belt.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover is quoted in Washington messages as saying that the world faces a wheat shortage, which will begin to be felt at the end of this month. World's stocks will be lower than for several years by July 1, as Argentina and Australia have less wheat than last year. The United States carry over will be small and Canada will have considerable stock.



The Fountain Plaza
~Evanston~Illinois
$300,000 First Mortgage 7% Gold Bonds

4% Federal Income Tax Paid for the Bondholders by the Mortgagor

WHEN INVESTING YOUR SAVINGS why not choose the very choicest 7% bonds you can get. Your money will buy just as many bonds like these as it will of those less well secured or of lower interest rate. Quality is vital. It means conscientious investigation of security, superior safeguards, expert supervision, generous yield, permanent service—in a word, super-safety!

A WONDERFUL BUILDING and its ground secure these bonds. It fronts 155 feet on Hinman Avenue and is part of the great Evanston Main Street Improvement so widely commented upon and approved by the press of Chicago and Evanston. It will contain 42 apartments, each comprising three, four or five rooms of generous size, surrounding a court of extraordinary dimensions, strikingly beautiful and imposing. With "L" express service and Northwestern railroad non-stop trains to the Loop (22 minutes downtown), transportation is literally the best on the North Side and entire North shore.

A MORE DEPENDABLE INCOME does not exist than that from such a high-class, well-located apartment building. People must have homes and the great class able to rent apartments like the Fountain Plaza create an absolutely reliable demand that results in an ample and never-failing income. We estimate the income of this building at $70,000—over three times the bond interest in the years of largest payments. This means that the bondholders will get their money promptly—as they always do from every issue sold by this House.

FOR JULY INVESTMENT you will find nothing more select than these bonds and the others in our July Investment Guide. We would like very much to mail this to you. And don't wait until the July rush to invest. Our special June service enables you to invest your savings NOW and still get every cent of the interest coming to you on the first day of July.

AID FOR FARMERS, WALLACE'S PLAN IN NEW BUREAU

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—In the face of recommendations that President by the government reclamation committee, that the bureau of markets be transferred from the department of agriculture to the department of commerce, a recommendation which Secretary Wallace did not indorse, the secretary has undertaken some reorganization within his own jurisdiction which affects the markets bureau.

Several weeks ago it was reported by close associates of Secretary Wallace that he would resign should the President send to congress the reorganization proposals of commission relating to the department of agriculture.

But Secretary Wallace is going ahead anyway by consolidating in a single bureau all work in the economies of agricultural production and marketing. It will be complete July 1. The new bureau will be known as the bureau of agricultural economies, and is a combination of the bureau of markets and crop estimates and the office of farm management and farm economics.

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Cotton goods markets dull and active. Yarns firm at irregular gains. Silks showed some improvement. Woolens steadier; linens irregular; advances in some are being resisted.

Wanted—Brokers of Good Standing

A prosperous old-line business, established nearly half a century, is extending its chain of offices by offering directly to the investing public an issue of 7% Notes (coupons attached), payable quarterly through any banker in the United States with a generous bonus of common stock. This is the first time that this corporation has ever sought outside capital for expansion purposes. This is one of the best-rated concerns in which advertising securities is a good market, and these Gold Notes constitute an attractive and easily salable issue to the conservative investor. Highest bank and mercantile references. Responsible brokers with selling organizations are wanted in principal cities to handle allotments during good margin of profit. Correspondence will be opened in cities where satisfactory connections are made. Communicate.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The sharp break Friday afternoon, due in large part to the catching of stop loss orders in speculative securities, has again brought to the fore discussion as to the stop loss order, and as to whether or not, for the average stock holder, it is a good thing to use. The greatest trouble with the stop loss order is that when it is reached it becomes a market order. In other words, if Steel sells at 100, and there are 1,000 shares to be stopped at that price, that order must be immediately dumped into the market, for the stock to fetch what it will. It was this accumulation of orders, reached in rapid fashion Wednesday afternoon, that caused the sharp break. Friday afternoon there was a good sized stop loss order in Republic at 72, and almost everybody in Wall street who listens to brokerage office gossip knew exactly whose stock it was, and when the order was reached.

Quite a large number of people who dabble in stocks on margin have discovered in the last day or so that the equipment of a modern brokerage office includes slips on which the customer may be notified, formally, that he must deposit more margin. These slips have not been used much since last summer, for the long upswing has found few but the professionals on the down side, but they went out to the financial district in rather copious volume Friday night and again this afternoon. Margin requirements are much more stringent at the moment, it may be remarked, than they ever have been before.

The Copper Export association, Inc., will redeem $3,000,000 of its 8 per cent secured notes Aug. 1. The association is understood to have sold 225,000,000 pounds of copper, leaving about 175,000,000 pounds of the original 400,000,000 pounds made subject to the $40,000,000 bonds issued Feb. 15, 1921, of which $13,000,000 had been retired up to Feb. 15. The issue was of various maturities, and the $3,000,000 to be called is the balance of $10,000,000 due on Feb. 1 next. On Feb. 15, 1922, $7,000,000 of this maturity was called for payment at 101. The bonds are redeemable at par plus 1 per cent for each year or portion of year remaining to maturity.

Representatives of Henry Ford have just closed a deal for the purchase of a large tract of land near Chalmette, on the outskirts of New Orleans, where, according to an announcement, the largest automobile assembling and distributing plant in the south will be constructed. The new plant will turn out 150 automobiles a day for the territory of Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi, Edsel B. Ford, president of the company, announced. It will employ 400 men.

Swiss bankers are requesting the government to ask that they be represented in the United States in the negotiations concerning a Mexican loan. The bankers set forth that Switzerland is interested to the extent of 200,000,000 francs owed in Switzerland by Mexican interests.

The Consolidated Cigars company will offer to shareholders 41,400 shares of common stock at $25 on the basis of two shares for each five held. The American Sumatra Tobacco company will not exercise its rights, but will arrange for their sale.

There were 440 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., compared with 407 in the preceding week, and 300 during the corresponding week last year. Bank clearings throughout the country for May totaled $32,362,504,474, a decline of 2.70 per cent, compared with April, but a gain of 17.3 per cent, compared with the corresponding month last year.

The Kroeschell Brothers Ice Machine company of Chicago has been merged with the Brunswick Refrigerating company of New Brunswick, N. J., in a new concern to be known as the Brunswick-Kroeschell company with main offices in New Brunswick. The new concern is incorporated with $1,250,000 of preferred stock and 30,000 shares of common stock with no par value. A 7 per cent dividend must be paid on the preferred stock before any is paid on the common and in the event of dissolution the preferred stockholders are to receive $125 per share before anything goes to the common.

An issue of $7,000,000 Public Service of Northern Illinois forty year first lien and refunding mortgage 5½ per cent bonds, series A, will be offered tomorrow morning by Halsey, Stuart & Co. at 92½, yielding 6 per cent. The bonds are dated June 1 and mature June 1, 1962. A New York-Chicago banking syndicate will offer $15,000,000 fifteen year 5 per cent debentures of the Atlantic Refining company.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending June 7, by 190 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,078,443,000, compared with $700,611,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $1,078,443,000, compared with $802,352,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

RICH CHICAGOAN IS BACK OF GRAIN SELLING BUREAU

Washington, D. C., June 10.—Organization by the United States Grain Growers, Inc., with the assistance of a Chicago millionaire, of a subsidiary for the cooperative marketing of grain was detailed by James K. Mason of Milton, Ind., vice president of the grain growers' association, in testifying today before the special senate committee investigating the alleged activities of the United States Grain Dealers' association to prevent cooperative marketing legislation.

Mr. Mason, who with other officers of the grain growers appeared at the committee's request with books and records in connection with charges that the organization had marketed no grain for its members, said the new subsidiary was known as the United States Grain Growers' Sales department.

The Chicago millionaire, whose name he did not disclose, was engaged in the sale of grain upon the Chicago Board of Trade, he said.

The Secret of Want Ad Success

The Secret of Want Ad Success

The Secret of Want Ad Success

Remember, the wording of Want Ads is a determining factor

MR. P. wanted to sell a leasehold which he possessed and ran the following Want Ad in The Tribune:

TO RENT — VERY DESIRABLE SPACE IN mill sprinkled brick building, near loop; occupancy now or May 1.  Cutlery Co., 000 N. Sheldon-st.

This did not dispose of the leasehold, so he wrote another, keeping in mind The Tribune's admonition to make it interesting by giving more in detail the vital factors of the offer. He ran the following:

TO RENT—IN NEW MILL, SPRINKLED bldg., 1st, 2d, 3d, or 4th floor, all or part; light on four sides; hardwood floors; 10 minutes from loop, half block from surface and elevated lines.  CUTLERY CO., 000 N. Sheldon-st.

Mr. P. rented the space and is "sold" on the policy of "the more you tell, the quicker you sell."

—slogan rents her furnished apartment

MRS. Z., anxious to rent her nicely furnished apartment, had been running the following Want Ad for several days without tangible result:

TO RENT—8 ROOM MODERN APT.; STM. elec.; $75. Call Kenwood 0000.

A Tribune Adtaker told her that the trouble was that the Ad was too small—it was too meager an account of her "proposition." Mrs. Z. asserted that she could not afford to run a very much larger Ad, but would include a few more details in the following one:

TO RENT—LARGE AIRY 8 RM. APT., ALL outside rms.; steam, elec.; best trans.; near Wash. Pk.; reduced rent. Kenwood 0000.

Mrs. Z. soon rented the apartment with this Ad and thanked The Tribune Adtaker for her suggestions.

—in which the prof. enlarges his studio

MANY and divers kinds of businesses use Tribune Want Ads to secure them prospects or customers. Prof. L. conducted a little "studio" on the south side where, under his able tutelage, folks with backward feet were encouraged to "step." This Ad he ran;

PROF.  STUDIOS—
0000 Michigan-av., at —th-st.
Private lessons daily and Sunday, 10 a. m. to 11 p. m.; 1 hour lessons, $1.50; 4 for $5. Social classes Wed., Sat. and Sun., 7:30 p. m.; Sun. matinee, 2:30 p. m. Wab. 0000.

without overcrowding the studio. Prof. L. admitted that he was a savant in the terpsichorean art, but a mere novice in the art of Want Advertising. He was encouraged to dilate more fully on the manifold benefits of his instruction, which he did as follows:

Prof. —— Dance Studios,
0000 S. Michigan, at —th.
Private lessons, daily and Sun. 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. Hour lesson, $1.50; 4 for $5, or 6 for $7; private studios; large ballrooms; social class with orchestra, Wed., Sat., Sun. at 7:30 p. m.; adms. 50c; this includes 6 dances with instructor. Send for free booklet on dancing. Phone Wabash 0000.

Prof. L. now reports that he is about to open a new and more spacious "studio," as the old one is wholly inadequate!

—thus, real estate is quickly sold

IN an effort to dispose of his high grade flat building, Mr. W. ran the following Ad without avail:

FOR SALE—BRICK 3 APT., CLAREMONT pr. Pull; oak trim, hardwd. floors, electric light; mtg. $6,000. Price, $9,500, which is $3,000 below cost of building; terms easy.  000 W. La Salle. Main 0000.

Knowing that there was a market for such fine properties as he was trying to sell, he heeded The Tribune Want Ad admonition and revised his Ad to read as follows:

$1,000 BUYS BRICK 8 APT.
Entire balance paid out of rents. Claremont, nr. Western-av., sta. Garf. Pk. L. 5-6-6 rooms, uncommonly large bedrooms. Modern electric li., hardwood throughout. Well constructed and practically new. Sacrifice at 25% below cost to build.  000 N. La Salle. Main 0000.

The new and revised Want Ad produced several live inquiries and within a week the property was sold.

—can help hire a maid also

MRS. H. was very much discouraged with the proposition of securing a maid. She had been running this Ad in another Chicago paper with no results whatever:

WOMAN—WHITE, ASSIST WITH HSWK.; no cooking; small apt. South Shore 0000.

A Tribune Adtaker recited to her the Tell More credo, with the result that Mrs. H. was immediately converted and agreed to run the following Ad in The Tribune:

GIRL OR WOMAN — WHITE, ASSIST WITH hswk. in small family; no cooking; small apt.; good home; nr. I. C. and 79th-st. car line. Phone South Shore 0000.

The next day The Tribune Adtaker called Mrs. H., who reported that she had secured a maid from many desirable applicants who responded. She added that she would be very glad in the future to give all her advertising to The Tribune.

—it's easy to rent your summer cottage

MR. B. owned a summer cottage which he was desirous of renting for the month of September. He wrote the following Ad, which he submitted for publication in The Tribune:

TO RENT—LUDINGTON, MICH., 7 RM. COTtage, Hamlin lake; September, $40. Ma. , Wabash 0000.

A Tribune representative strongly advised him to give his Ad a better chance to make good by telling more about the cottage. Mr. B. heeded the words of wisdom and ran the following Ad, which immediately rented the cottage:

TO RENT—LUDINGTON, MICH., 7 RM. COMpletely furnished cottage; sleeping porch; Hamlin lake; good bathing; September, $40; 4 nights' ride on the boat. MR. . Phone Wabash 0000.

"The more you tell, the quicker you sell," agrees Mr. B.

—slogan aids storage business

THE R. Storage Co. had been in the habit of using 8 or 10 line Ads run in the form of a single paragraph in which many diverse items of sale were crowded together in a manner that made reading difficult.

Unclaimed Storage Sale.
75 rugs, assorted; 90 odd dressers, 150 beds, parlor sets and household goods of all kinds. Special attention to hotel, rooming house and out of town buyers. Free delivery.  Storage Co., 0000 Cottage Grove. Branch, 000 E. 35th-st., Drexel 0000.

The Tribune representative who received the Want Ad suggested that the items be listed separately so as to make reading easier.

Unclaimed Storage Sale.
Furnishings of 4 rms. for charges.....$95
3,000 government chairs.....85c each
125 odd dressers, oak, mah., walnut.....$5 up
240 beds, brass, v. s., wood.....$4 up
45 vanity cases and desks.....$5 up
60 cane and overstuffed par. sets.....$25 up
75 library tables, oak, mah., walnut.....$4 up
Blankets, linens and household goods of all kinds. Special prices to hotels, rooming houses and out of town buyers.  Storage and Furniture Co., 0000 Cottage Grove. Branch, 000 E. 35th-st.

Above is the revised Want Ad. Not only was the appearance of the Want Ad greatly improved, but as a result it received better position in the column.

"My results were very good," reported Mr. R. The moral is, no matter what story you have to tell, "the more you tell, the quicker you sell."

—slogan helps her to retire

MRS. M., wishing to retire, decided to sell her grocery and delicatessen business, so she submitted the following for insertion in The Tribune:

GROCERY AND DELICATESSEN, WITH living rooms, for sale. Phone Irving 0000.

A Tribune representative advised her that the Ad was much too small to do the work she expected of it, and suggested that she revise it to include more necessary information about the business which was for sale. Following is the revised Ad which was inserted:

HERE'S YOUR CHANCE.
Grocery and delicatessen with living rms. for sale; fine location; no competition; owner wishes to retire. Phone Irving 0000.

When The Tribune representative called Mrs. M. two days later she found that not only had the business been sold but that twenty additional inquiries had been received. "The more you tell, the quicker you sell."

The secret of success in writing Want Ads is "The more you tell, the quicker you sell." People interested in your offer want to know its points of difference from similar offers, so that they will know whether it is the offer for which they have been looking. You have read above how other people have taken advantage of this well-known sales principle — "the more you tell the quicker you sell."

REAL ESTATE NEWS

ANDY AND MIN TO HAVE SOME MORE NEIGHBORS

Subdivision Planned at Pistakee Lake.

Andy Gump and Min, to say nothing of little Chester and Sid Smith are going to have neighbors. When No. 348 goes clattering over Chapel hill, it soon will be likely to meet travelers headed for Pistaqua Heights, a new summer resort subdivision now being opened up at Pistakee Lake, Ill.

The managing trustee of the Pistaqua Heights trustees, owners of the new subdivision, is Harry E. Hoff, chief deputy recorder of Cook county. All those interested in the trust live in Chicago.

123 Acres to Be Subdivided.

One hundred and twenty-three acres will be subdivided and laid out in lots ranging in price from $500 to $5,000. The name of the subdivision is taken from the fact that it lies over 200 feet above the level of Chicago.

It is on the main road between McHenry and Ingleside, being five miles from McHenry and four and one-half miles from Ingleside. It is the nearest point to Chicago of the entire chain of lakes consisting of Pistakee lake, Nippersink lake, Fox lake, Grass lake, Lake Marie, Bluff lake, Channel lake, and Lake Catherine. In connection with the Fox river, this chain of lakes gives the longest continuous inland water route in northern Illinois.

An unusual feature of the new subdivision will be the creation of a perpetual maintenance fund for keeping up all improvements and adding thereto from time to time. Every lot will be highly restricted so that a lot owner can't be injured by actions of his neighbor—at least, that's what the men back of the project believe.

Must Give References.

Another feature of the subdivision will be the fact that every purchaser will be required to give satisfactory references and these will be thoroughly checked up before acceptance. The trustees declare they realize that the character and standing of the purchasers is just as important as the location of the property.

The distance from Chicago is from forty-five to fifty-five miles, according to the route taken, and the roads are concrete practically all of the way, says Mr. Hoff. Sidney Smith, TRIBUNE artist, has an attractive summer home in the neighborhood.

Brokers' Notes

Samuel Boyle, recently with J. R. Williams & Co. and Edward Eggert & Co., has opened an office for himself in Albany Park at 4755 North Whipple street, southeast corner of Lawrence avenue, to be known as the Boyle Realty company.

Joseph P. Kane, who has specialized in north shore property for eight years, and his brother, John F. Kane, have formed the real estate firm of Kane & Kane, with offices in the Woods Theater building. Their phones are State 8577 and 8578.

The E. E. Stults Realty company, whose main office is at 1901 Montrose avenue, announces the opening of a north shore office at 1915 Central street, Evanston, with H. Wesley Betts in charge of sales. The phone is Evanston 8080.

James B. Waller announces the removal of his office yesterday to 3933 Broadway, second floor. His new phone is Lake View 5163.

F. H. Thomas & Co. have moved into new offices at 4424 Broadway, at the intersection of Sheridan road, Montrose, and Broadway.

Stanley M. Blasyk, for some time in the Logan Square Theater building, has moved his office to his own building at 5019 South Kedzie avenue, Marquette Manor.

ALFRED H. GRANGER TO BE NEW PRESIDENT OF ARCHITECTS' BODY

ALFRED H. GRANGER.

On next Tuesday the American Institute of Architects, Illinois chapter, has its annual election. D. H. Perkins, chairman of the nominating committee, recently reported the following names for officers for the ensuing year, and as there is no possibility of any opposition ticket, it's safe to say that Alfred H. Granger will be the next president. Francis W. Puckey will be first vice president; Edwin H. Clark, second vice president; John Archibald Armstrong, secretary; John E. Youngberg, treasurer. J. C. Bollenbacher and Albert Moore Saxe, retiring president, will be made directors.

FRANCIS W. PUCKEY.

JOHN ARCHIBALD ARMSTRONG.

Albert M. Ruttenberg is another addition to the Garrick Theater building architectural colony. He has moved from the Reaper block to suite 920 in the Garrick. His new phone is Dearborn 3236.

Some Leases

John J. McCormick, president of the Corona Typewriter Sales company, has leased from Kolb & Horwitz the store and basement at 72 East Randolph for thirteen years at a term rental of $170,000, and will open Corona shop No. 2. Ross & Co. represented the lessors and Chutkow & Botham the lessees.

Mark Levy & Bro. report closing a lease for C. L. and G. W. Davidson for the second and third floors at 234 South Wabash for five years at an annual rental of $5,000 to the Hartman Furniture and Carpet company.

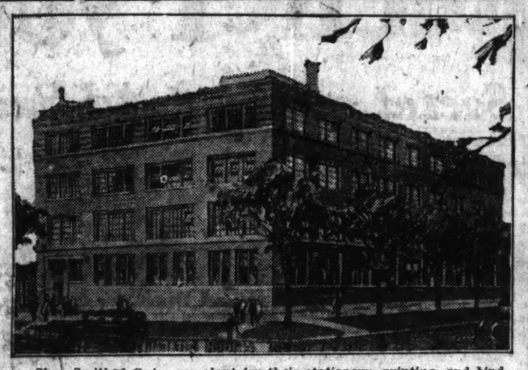
New Logan Square Synagogue

Architect David Saul Klafter designed the new Logan Square Congregation Shaare Zedek synagogue, now under construction at 3133 Fullerton avenue. It will cost $250,000, and in addition to seating 1,800 in the main auditorium will have a large assembly hall in the community center adjoining. H. B. Rubenstein is president of the organization and chairman of the building committee.

Ashland Blvd. Printing Plant



Shea Smith & Co.'s new plant for their stationery, printing, and binding business, now under construction at the northeast corner of Ashland boulevard and Congress street, 86x150, was designed by George C. Nimmons & Co. The ground and building represent an investment reported to be $300,000. Harry Goldstine & Co. were brokers in the purchase of the site. Shea Smith & Co. are now at 322 Federal street. They were founded in 1871.

Turns Down $4,500 Offer in 1908; Sells for $20,000 Now

Mrs. Mary Peirce was offered $4,500 for her 50x115 on West 75th street, 140 feet west of Cottage Grove, south front, in 1908. George W. Lawton, a real estate man and personal friend, advised her not to sell. Yesterday she sold it, through Mr. Lawton, to Henry J. Disel and Nick Pantaz for $20,000, or $400 a front foot, which is said to be a record price for the neighborhood. The Peirce family have lived there for thirty-five years.

STANDARD OIL BUYS ORLEANS CORNER.

The Standard Oil company has bought the southwest corner of Grand avenue and Orleans street, 100x100, from Frederick H. Winston, for an indicated $65,000, for a service station. Winston & Co. were brokers.

Plan New Building for Marshfield and Lincoln

Kurt Rosenthal has bought the northeast corner of Lincoln and Marshfield avenues, 50x125, improved with a two-story frame building and a three story brick structure, from John Roger for a reported $85,000, subject to $50,000. Le Roy Hirsch, of Kurt Rosenthal & Co., represented both parties. Mr. Rosenthal intends to improve with a three-story store and office building next May. Victor and Ernest Freeman have sold the fifty feet with improvements at 5308 North Clark to Theresa Wolffs for a reported $45,000 subject to $20,000. Le Roy Hirsch and Kurt Rosenthal were brokers.

ALADDIN CUTS PRICES 20% ON ALL ITS HOUSES

News drifts in from the genial G. E. Waugh, assistant general sales manager of the Aladdin company, Bay City, Mich., which we believe will interest a lot of prospective home builders. A 20 per cent cut in the gross price of all Aladdin ready cut houses is announced, this bargain sale to continue until July 3.

MISS ELSIE LEMPKE.

Of especial interest in this announcement is the reduction of the five room house called the Columbia, which was cut from $498 to $398. This is a little home designed by Miss Elsie Lempke, general manager of the Aladdin mill at Wilmington, N. C., which created considerable comment when it was first placed on the market at $498.

Miss Lempke started work as an $18 a week stenographer in the main offices of the Aladdin at Bay City. She shinned up the success ladder in a hurry, being first sent to Florida, where she was so successful she was given her present positions.

SOUTH SIDE MERCHANTS ACTIVE.

A provisional committee of twelve South State street merchants, with Christian G. Gallin as chairman, named at the recent dinner by Philetus W. Gates to business men along State, south of Van Buren, is now taking steps toward a permanent South State Street Business Men's association.

STARTS ON 24 TWO-FLATTERS.

Victor G. Williams has bought 800 feet of vacant on Warren and Park avenues, between Kedzie and Garfield park, and has started work on twenty-four two flat buildings to be completed Sept. 1.

CITY HALL O. K.'S 53D ST. PROJECT

The project to make 53d street one of the south side's important thoroughfares was given impetus when the board of local improvements last week voted unanimously to extend the roadway through the Lehmann estate property, between Drexel and Cottage Grove avenue, opening the street from the lake to Washington park.

This action followed an active campaign on the part of the Fifty-third Street Property Owners' association in getting up the petition. At present 53d street makes a jog to the south at Drexel avenue. The decision will probably cause the property owners to push more energetically than ever their plan to make the street a boulevard.

Newlander Apartments

First Mortgage 7½% Gold Bonds

The Newlander Apartments are located on the Northwest corner of Granville and Ravenswood Avenues, in a most substantial residential section of the North Side. The vicinity is one of attractive homes and apartment buildings, with large lawns, shrubbery and beautifully shaded streets. It is convenient to elevated and street railway transportation and within easy walking distance to the business section of Devon Avenue and North Clark Street.

The bonds are secured by a closed first mortgage on land owned in fee simple which has a frontage of 125 feet on Ravenswood Ave., and a modern three-story and basement red-brick building containing twelve five-room apartments. The apartments are all exceptionally light, attractive and well arranged.

The building is conservatively valued at $50,000, the bond issue, $27,500, and the income is estimated at $9,200 or nearly five times maximum annual interest charges.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

WILL CLUBDOM BE NEXT TO GO TO NORTH SIDE?

'Ayes' Point to New Home of I. W. A. Club.

BY AL CHASE.

Is Chicago clubdom going to move across the river and settle along Upper Michigan avenue between the river and the Drake? Certain well posted folk say it is, and point to certain other northward movements which at first were ridiculed, and then accepted by the very persons who laughed at them. The architects' north side colony is a big one, and still growing. The insurance concerns flocked across the river, and are still flocking.

MRS. D. F. FESLER.

And now clubs? Well, one big organization is already on the ground and is planning a sixteen story skyscraper clubhouse to take the place of its present somewhat cramped quarters. So evidently the Illinois Women's Athletic club finds the north side a satisfactory place for a permanent home.

Site Unusually Attractive.

Details of the magnificent new clubhouse are now made public for the first time, following on the heels of the closing of the purchase of the last bit of real estate for the site on Pearson street, extending from Tower court to Rush street.

This site is unusually attractive for a club of this character. Fronting on Tower court, it's practically on Boul Mich without the boulevard motor traffic roar. Across the street at the northeast corner of Rush and Pearson is the beautiful Quigley memorial, and diagonally across Rush is the big new American Fore office building going up. As the building on the south, the offices of Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton, architects, is only four stories, the view in that direction will be almost equal to that on the north.

Practically everything in the new club is planned primarily for the use of women. For instance, there'll be shops, studios, and offices on the first four floors—all for women. At least all the shops will cater exclusively to women. There'll be separate elevators for the club and business portions of the building.

Shops and reception rooms will be on the second floor, with studios and offices on the third and fourth. The fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth will be devoted to residential quarters for the use of club members, each floor having thirty-three rooms of various sizes, most of them with private baths.

Gym and Beauty Parlor.

The special club features and activities will be housed in the five upper floors and will include large club and private dining rooms, kitchen service, lounge, library assembly, and ballroom floor with large and small ballrooms, committee rooms, etc., a gymnasium, lockers, hairdressing parlors, etc.

The swimming pool will be of regulation size and equipped under the rules of the American Athletic association in order to permit its use for championship contest. It will be on the top floor under a movable skylight, so summer swimming may be had in the open air.

The Illinois Women's Athletic club was founded by Mrs. William Severin in August, 1918. It first met in the Century building, moving later to the Stevens building, and as it grew it moved from the fifteenth floor to larger quarters on the seventeenth.

Then the old Parmalee Prentice residence at the southwest corner of Pearson street and Tower court was bought. This was once the home of Robert Lincoln. Negotiations were at once begun for the property adjoining to the west and now a site fronting 124 feet on Pearson, 62 feet on Tower court, and 59 feet on Rush street is owned by the club.

Work to Start in Spring.

Work on the new club is expected to start some time next spring with the hope of having it completed in the fall of 1923. The club now has 865 members, but with its new quarters it will be able to accommodate 3,000, which will be the membership limit.

Mrs. D. F. Fesler is president; Mrs. William Westerlund is vice president; Mrs. Emma Buckingham, treasurer; Mrs. Gertrude M. Garland, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Adaline H. Schall, secretary.

Proposed Home of Illinois Women's Athletic Club

The new home of the Illinois Women's Athletic club at Tower court and Pearson and Rush streets, designed by Architects Schmidt, Garden & Martin in the Italian renaissance, will be of rough faced brick trimmed with Indiana limestone. It will cost approximately $1,250,000. The same materials will be used on all four exterior walls. The attractive office building of Architects Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton, architectural pioneers in the north side district, is seen on the left of the new clubhouse, to the south.

Building Items

Minchin, Spitz & Co. report having completed drawings for a forty-two apartment building to be at the southwest corner of Wilson and Central Park avenues, with a lagoon in the courtyard. Louis Siegel is owner and the cost is placed at $200,000. Work will start this week. They also are taking bids for a club house at Cicero, 75x100, to cost $55,000, for the Circolo Fil Etruria club.

Architects Koenigsberg & Weisfeld report having under construction an eighteen apartment building at the northwest corner of Leland and Central Park avenues to cost $98,000; also a three store and twelve apartment building at the northwest corner of Ridgeway and Lawrence avenues to cost $100,000. They are taking figures on three stores, 50x125, on Western avenue between 58th and 59th.

John R. Thompson has bought the 100x110 at the southeast corner of Wells and Erie from the Newberry library for an indicated $55,500 and will start work at once on a $30,000 one story garage, designed by Architect W. C. Bennett, to care for the sixty-eight cars of the Thompson interests.

New Firm Leases 8 Story Building on the West Side

James A. Clinton and John S. Perry, associated for thirty years with Janeway & Carpenter, wall paper manufacturers for fifty years, have organized Clinton & Perry, Inc., and will handle Janeway & Carpenter products. They have leased the eight story building at 520 South Canal street, formerly occupied by Janeway & Carpenter, containing 62,000 square feet of floor space, for six years from June 1 from the James McCorkle estate.

$100,000 RAISED BY ILLINOIS EASTERN STAR FOR NEW HOME

More than $100,000 of the needed $200,000 fund to pay for the new two story Eastern Star and Masonic home, now under construction at Rockford, has been raised, according to Mrs. Effie R. Redman, worthy grand matron for Illinois. This will be a home for dependent Eastern Star old ladies and relatives of Masons throughout the state. The corner stone was laid May 23, and it will be completed in August. It was designed by Architect Charles W. Bradley of Rockford, and will have an unusually beautiful site, being on the banks of the Rock river, opposite Blackhawk park.

MRS. EFFIE R. REDMAN.

Motor Accessory Company to Build Boulevard Plant

E. Edelmann & Co., manufacturers of automobile accessories, have bought a site at the southwest corner of Logan boulevard and Holly avenue, for a new $250,000 concrete two story plant. It will front 150 feet on the boulevard and 150 feet on Schubert avenue and will not have a stick of wood in its construction, even the window frames, doors, etc., being of metal. David Saul Klafter is architect.

CASTBERG AGAIN TO MOVE NORTH ON BOUL MICH

Interesting changes developed during the week in the business of Castberg's, specialists in millinery and gowns. Miss Mary L. Teehan, who has been with William F. Castberg for many years, has leased the store and basement at 934 Upper Michigan avenue, in the Michigan-Walton building, together with upper floor space, and will continue to operate under the name of Castberg.

Miss Teehan will own a controlling interest in the firm, and although Mr. Castberg will retain an interest, he will give up Chicago as his home, moving to Paris in July. He will go into business there and at the same time buy and send Paris creations to the Boul Mich shop. Castberg's is now at 615 Upper Michigan and will move farther north about July 15.

The lease on the new quarters is for five years at a reported rental of $35,000 for the term and was negotiated by Willis & Frankenstein in connection with the Bowes Realty company.

TELLS STUDENTS OF COAST ABOUT CHAIN STORES

Mark Levy Speaks Before U. of S. C.

When Mark Levy was recently in California he was invited by the University of Southern California, which is said to be the only university in the country having a real estate class, to talk before that group of future realtors. He discussed "Chain Store Leasing and How to Pick Locations." There are 200 enrolled in the realty course. The week before that he had spoken to the Californians on "Exclusive Agency in Handling Property," and had so interested Prof. H. J. Stonier and his students that he was asked to come back and tell them some more facts.

"There can be no question but that the chain store is beneficial to any city," said Mr. Levy. "They increase real estate values through rent, and through the increased taxable values that follow, some revenue is produced. Bank deposits are increased, higher wages are paid, more money is circulated and most far-reaching is the lower price for the better article to the consumer. The only crime committed is the perking up of the old type of stick-in-the-mud merchants, his wares and his prices and brightening up the corner all around.

"The chain store as the brokers' field is limitless. The conscientious effort and intimate knowledge which increase with experience makes the chain store real estate man invaluable to the merchant. To illustrate the value of the chain store man, about three years ago a long term net lease was negotiated in Detroit by C. C. Nicholls, vice president of the Schulte Cigar company, for possession two years from now.

"I'm told that the lessee has refused over $200,000 for this lease. Think how this illustrates and justifies the competent chain store man's services.

"This same Mr. Nicholls leased for his company thirty-eight stores in the south, only one of which is costing them any rent. By way of explanation, he leased for these thirty-eight stores holdings much larger in area than the piece required for his business.

Mr. Pinkie Izenstark to Open Loop Radio Shop

Not trying to scoop Charley Sloan, TRIBUNE radio editor, but we have to broadcast the news that Pinkie Izenstark, sporting goods merchant, has leased the store and basement at 42 South Clark street from the Ridgecroft Real Estate trust, for ten years at a term rental reported to be $130,000, and will install a radio supply shop. This store formerly was occupied by the Thomas Hardware company. Chutkow & Botham represented the lessees and Ross & Co. the lessors.

PLAN WEST SIDE FACTORY.

The Ideal Sheet Metal Works, now at Fulton and Morgan streets, have bought a 72x125 lot at 2039 West Jackson from William Brower for $18,000 through Marks & Co. and are having plans drawn by M. O. Nathan for a three story factory.

PHI KAPPA SIGMA ALUMNI CHAPTER BUYS RESIDENCE

The Chicago alumni chapter of the Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity has bought the residence at 30 East Cedar street, originally designed by Marshall & Fox for Horace L. Brand, for a reported $70,000, and after spending $25,000 in remodeling after plans by Architect Robert S. DeGolyer, will use it for a club house. When completed it will house thirty men and provide all the usual club luxuries, with elaborate dining facilities.

The national convention of the fraternity will be held in Chicago in December, 1922, and will have headquarters at the club house, which will also contain the offices of the employment bureau for Phi Kaps. The "Mid West Phi Kap," a monthly publication, will be issued from these headquarters.

The property was bought through Arthur S. Carruthers & Co. from the Roberts-Pettijohn-Wood corporation, who purchased it through the same brokers in January. It adjoins the site of the contemplated studio building by Marshall & Fox, told about recently.

Beg Your Pardon

In reporting the sale on Thursday of the property at 1251 South Halsted, purchased by Martin Maremont from Frank Loeffler, it was incorrectly given as No. 1250. This property is owned and occupied by Jacob Cohn, Inc., and has not been sold.

In last Sunday's real estate department we gave a picture of a one story building at 6107-13 South Halsted street, designed by Levy & Klein. We said it was for John S. Rydell & Co. We understand B. Rosenthal of Greenebaum Sons Bank & Trust Co. is the owner, and Rydell & Co. have leased it for ten years.

Guaranteed 10,000 Miles Against Stone Bruise Rim Cut and Blow Out

HYDRO-TORON TIRES Have Stood the Test

Big as Cords Better than Cords, Cost Less than Cords

Hundreds—thousands of Hydro-Toron users are now in position, as a result of actual experience with these tires covering a long period, to substantiate every word that we have written about Hydro-Toron processes, materials, quality, and service.

There's no mere theory about the results these users have enjoyed in the way of greater mileage and freedom from trouble.

Hydro-Toron tires have won their way, and have definitely established their market among those who know them.

All that we believed about the Internal Hydraulic Expansion process, and the Toron Chemical process of fabric treatment has been proved by that increased mileage which is the one measurement of tire service.

Users of Hydro-Torons are enthusiasts about these big, sturdy, different, better tires. If you have not joined their ranks, do so now. Ask for Hydro-Torons next time. Know first-hand that an unusual tire has been developed at last, and that the guarantee of 10,000 miles against stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out is our justifiable expression of confidence in this product.

OUTDOOR GIRLS

BUILDING A PYRAMID may have been a lot of work for a band of ancient Egyptians, but to these girls it is a mere trifle, as anybody can see. They are seniors and juniors from a New York school and athletic feats like the one pictured won field day honors and prizes for them. (Photograph from Fotograms.)

THESE PERFECT THIRTY-SIXES HELPED TO MAKE A PERFECT-RIFLE SCORE of 1,000 in Washington recently when they entered the competition for the Astor cup. They are Margaret Umbaugh and Sylvia Carrigan of the Central High school, and the man is Walter Stokes, a famous marksman. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

OVER THE TOP WE GO! Miss Eliott-Lynn clearing 4 feet 7 inches in the high jump for women at the athletic meet of the King's College university of London. The meet was held on the college's war memorial athletic grounds at Mitcham. (Photograph from Wide World.)

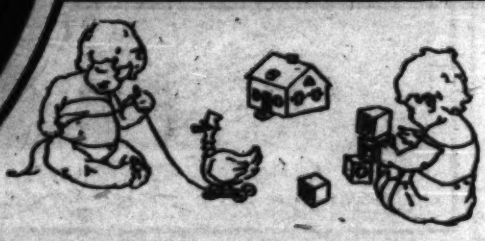
JUST LIKE MINNEHAHA! These are the junior girls of a Boston seminary who defeated their senior sisters in an exciting canoe race on the Charles river (Photograph copyright by Keystone.)

Keeping Your Child's Hair Beautiful

What a Mother Can Do To Keep Her Child's Hair Healthy—Fine, Soft and Silky—Bright, Fresh-Looking and Luxuriant

A Clean Scalp Means a Healthy Scalp and a Fine, Thick, Heavy Head of Hair.

Good Habits of Hair Hygiene Are Established by Teaching Children How To Care for Their Hair.



Every child should have beautiful hair. Has yours? If not, read how you can help bring it about. In later life your child will thank you, if you teach it now, habits that secure and preserve beautiful hair from childhood.

THE beauty of your child's hair depends upon the care you give it. Shampooing it properly is always the most important thing.

It is the shampooing which brings out the real life and lustre, natural wave and color, and makes the hair soft, fresh and luxuriant.

When your child's hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because the hair has not been shampooed properly.

When the hair has been shampooed properly, and is thoroughly clean, it will be glossy, smooth and bright, delightfully fresh-looking, soft and silky.

While children's hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating mothers, everywhere, now use Muslified cocoanut oil shampoo. This clear, pure, and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and it does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your child's hair look, just follow this simple method:

A Simple, Easy Method

FIRST, put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water. Then wet the hair and scalp with clear warm water. Pour the Mulsified evenly over the hair and rub it thoroughly all over the scalp and throughout the entire length, down to the ends of the hair.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

After rubbing in the rich, creamy Mulsified lather, rinse the hair and scalp thoroughly—always using clear, fresh, warm water.

Then use another application of Mulsified, again working up a lather and rubbing it in briskly as before.

Two waters are usually sufficient for washing the hair, but sometimes the third is necessary.

You can easily tell, for when the hair is perfectly clean, it will be soft and silky in the water, the strands will fall apart easily, each separate hair floating alone in the water, and the entire mass, even while wet, will feel loose, fluffy and light to the touch and be so clean it will fairly squeak when you pull it through your fingers.

Rinse the Hair Thoroughly

THIS is very important. After the final washing, the hair and scalp should be rinsed in at least two changes of good warm water and followed with a rinsing in cold water.

When you have rinsed the hair thoroughly, wring it as dry as you can; finish by rubbing it with a towel, shaking it and fluffing it until it is dry. Then give it a good brushing.

After a Mulsified shampoo you will find the hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being thicker and heavier than it is.

If you want your child to always be remembered for its beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage—and it will be noticed and admired by everyone.

You can get Mulsified at any drug store or toilet goods counter, anywhere in the world. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

Teach Your Boy to Shampoo His Hair Regularly

IT may be hard to get a boy to shampoo his hair regularly, but it's mighty important that he does so.

His hair and scalp should be kept perfectly clean to insure a healthy, vigorous scalp and a fine, thick, heavy head of hair.

Get your boy in the habit of shampooing his hair regularly once each week. A boy's hair being short, it will only take a few minutes' time. Put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water. Then wet the hair and scalp with clear warm water. Pour the Mulsified over the hair and rub it in vigorously with the tips of the fingers. This will stimulate the scalp, make an abundance of rich, creamy lather and cleanse the hair thoroughly. It takes only a few seconds to rinse it all out when through.

You will be surprised how this regular weekly shampooing with Mulsified will improve the appearance of his hair, and you will be teaching your boy a habit he will appreciate in after-life, for a luxuriant head of hair is something every man feels mighty proud of.

"Since taking those Yeast Foam Tablets you recommended I've certainly 'come back'; I eat heartily, sleep fine and never seem to tire out any more"

What Yeast Foam Tablets are for loss of appetite indigestion lack of physical strength and energy under weight malnutrition pimples · boils run-down conditions

Yeast Foam Tablets, rich in the energizing element that many foods lack, are a most remarkable strength and health builder. They stimulate the appetite, improve digestion and help the system convert your food into energy and firm, healthy tissues.

If you are under weight; if you tire out easily and seldom feel quite right, get a bottle of these pure whole yeast tablets. Take them regularly along with your usual food and observe their splendid toning-up effect. Thousands of women and men are now asking for Yeast Foam Tablets in preference to other forms of yeast or yeast preparations, because these tablets are made entirely of pure whole yeast—the richest source of that essential food element, vitamin B.

Beautiful Actress Attributes Her Wonderful Success to Her Famous Complexion

Tells How You May Also Have One

WHEN Dorothy Dalton, the beautiful actress, was questioned as to the secret of her phenomenal success, she said: "My friends have always raved about the texture and coloring of my skin and I have no doubt but that my first engagement was made possible through the reputation I had acquired for having an attractive complexion.

"I think the best asset any girl or woman can have is a beautiful skin and complexion. They may have irregular features, but if they possess a beautiful complexion they will attract attention anywhere.

"Cleanliness is one of the first essentials. At night before retiring I always cleanse my skin with a good cold cream. (Liska cold cream I have found to be the best.) Before going out during the day or evening I apply Derwillo, a simple toilet preparation. I find it excellent for my complexion, as it protects my skin in all kinds of weather. That's why I prefer it to all other toilet preparations and am never without it. Many of my professional friends to whom I have recommended Derwillo use it in preference to all other beautifiers."

The first application of Derwillo will astonish you. It imparts instant beauty to the skin and makes a rosy-white complexion everyone will admire. Use it before going to the theatre, dance or afternoon call, and note the favorable comments of your friends.

It puts a life-like tint on your cheeks which defies detection; takes the place of face powder and stays on until you wash it off. Perspiration does not affect it nor will it rub off on clothing. It also prevents the nose and face from shining and is wonderful for a dark, sallow, rough skin, blackheads, coarse pores, oily skin, tan and for the instant beauty it imparts.

Over one million are using it. It is absolutely harmless to the most sensitive skin. Just try it once and you will need no further argument to convince you that there is nothing "just as good," "better," or "just like it." Insist on Derwillo, then you will not be disappointed. It comes in three shades—flesh, white, and brunette.

Dorothy Dalton

NOTE—Druggists and department stores everywhere sell Derwillo and Liska cold cream with the guarantee that if you don't like them you get your money back. Derwillo is the one beautifier that gives satisfaction at all seasons of the year. You can secure it at all toilet counters.

They are not Keds unless the name Keds is on the shoe

A universal favorite with men and boys. Heavy reinforcements and ankle patch. Smooth, corrugated, or suction sole.

The world's standard summer shoe. For tennis, canoeing, sailing, and general outdoor wear. High and low models for men, women, and children.

Boys' Keds—Girls' Keds—Keds for all the family

EASY fitting, cool, comfortable, Keds let feet cramped by ordinary shoes return to their natural form and breathe.

All the family will want to be supplied with America's most popular footwear.

Look over the Keds styles at your dealer's—pumps, oxfords, high shoes and low, from heavy reinforced Keds for rough and tumble boys, to light, trim models for girls and women and little children.

Keds have uppers of fine canvas. The soles are of tough springy rubber. In fit, in appearance, in wear, you will find Keds very different from ordinary canvas rubber-soled shoes. Years of experience have taught us how to make these shoes better. Insist on Keds.

If your dealer hasn't the kind you wish, he can easily get them for you.

But remember—not all canvas rubber-soled shoes are Keds. If the name Keds isn't on the shoes, they aren't real Keds.

HERE'S GENTLE MAGIC
for your fingertips

With Glazo Liquid Nail Polish you will receive a liberal supply of Glazo Remover. It is as indispensable to the proper care of the nails as the Polish itself. No Liquid Polish is complete without remover.

For cuticle uneven and tender as a result of painful cutting or harsh acids; for nails which constant buffing has made dull and brittle, there's a gentle magic in the smart, new Glazo Manicure.

Glazo Cuticle Massage, used with your orange stick to soften and perfect the cuticle and remove stain from under the nail; Glazo Liquid Nail Polish, lightly brushed on (no buffing), and in five minutes you have a fashionable manicure that will last a week.

Your nails and your cuticle will look better, feel better, from the very first moment—and always your fingertips will be daintily dressed, immaculate and charming.

Try this simple new manicure tonight—it is so smart, so convenient, so time-saving.

Java will make you look younger!

IF the texture of your skin has been affected by constant exposure, and begins to show tiny unobtrusive lines, suggestions of what may one day be wrinkles, use Bourjois' [pronounced Bourge-wah] Java* Face Powder. When Java is used your skin becomes smooth and soft. Your face has a new, and added beauty, because of the softer, deeper tone in your complexion. Java has made you look younger, naturally, by enhancing the beauty of your face.

MORE THAN 2,500 UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS MEN, members of the university's famous R. O. T. C. brigade, recently were reviewed by Maj. Gen. George Bell Jr. The brigade, considered one of the largest in the world, with equipment valued at more than $2,000,000, is ranked by the government in class A, the highest honor that can be earned. The annual review attracted a large crowd of spectators.

TEN SETS OF TWINS ALL IN A ROW AND ALL FROM ONE PUBLIC SCHOOL is the record set by school No. 77, Brooklyn. Three sets are in one class room and five nations are represented. Beginning at the left meet Dorothy and Ethel Bremen, Antoinette and Marianne Calandriello, Catherine and Isabel Hill, Arthur and Richard Rees, Anna and Sam Inagliata, Florence and Helen Frier, Elene and Elvira Dante, Michael and Raffael Elardo, Helen and Dorothea Neuhauser, and Margaret and Josephine Basso. Will Life Be as Good to You?

Home from college, aglow with youth's ambition, ready to go to work.

But what does the future hold?

Will he have his father's firm, quick tread, his priceless health when he is as old as dad?

Shrewd business man, the father knows the cash value of a healthy mouth. All his life he has cared well for his teeth.

Pyorrhea, which strikes four out of five past the age of forty and thousands younger, has not touched him with its poisoned fangs.

If you would pass the noon of life and go down the sunset trail vigorous and strong, watch your gums!

At the first sign of tenderness or bleeding, take heed. That is Pyorrhea's warning.

If this disease gets beyond control your teeth are doomed.

As Pyorrhea gains headway the teeth loosen at the roots, drop out or must be pulled; pus pockets form; deadly germs seep, seep, seep throughout the system.

If you would prevent Pyorrhea consult your dentist regularly and brush your teeth with Forhan's For the Gums.

Forhan's will prevent Pyorrhea, or check it in its course, if used consistently and used in time.

But don't wait! Start using Forhan's now.

Forhan's For the Gums is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S. It is an excellent dentifrice, keeping the teeth white and clean and the gums firm and healthy.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's — How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment. 35c and 60c, in the U. S. and Canada. At all druggists.

New! Angelus Lemon Vanishing Cream

Adding a Third Triumph to the Famous Angelus Lemon Creams

MULTITUDES of women who have greatly improved their complexions with Angelus Lemon Cleansing Cream and Angelus Lemon Tissue Cream, will welcome this announcement of a third Angelus triumph.

The new Angelus Lemon Vanishing Cream has been perfected after six years of patient, painstaking experiment on the part of Louis Philippe, the creator of the other two Angelus Lemon Creams—beyond doubt the most talked of creams in America.

Angelus Lemon Vanishing Cream is a daytime cream. Massage a little—very little—into the skin before going out. It instantly whitens the skin—harmlessly, too—and protects your complexion against the sun, dust and heat of outdoors. It makes a wonderful base for powder. Far less powder will be required—and that which you do use will stay on with gratifying effect.

Angelus Lemon Vanishing Cream is absolutely greaseless, and instantly and completely vanishes. It both beautifies and protects.

You will find the new Angelus Lemon Vanishing Cream at your druggist or department store. Try it today. It is one dollar the jar.

For soaking—but not just for soaking

Soaking clothes in big, lasting Rinso suds does almost all the washing. Where dirt is actually ground-in rub lightly with dry Rinso. Boiling isn't necessary, but if you like to boil your white cottons, use enough Rinso solution to give you the suds you like. If you use a washing machine follow the advice of the leading washing machine manufacturers and use Rinso in it.

Rinso takes the place of bar soap. It comes in the regular size and the big new package. Get it today—at grocery or department stores everywhere. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

NOTE—In hard water it takes from ¼ to 1 package (regular size) of Rinso to a tub to make good suds. In very hard water you will need from 1½ to 2 packages to a tub to get the big lasting suds that loosen all the dirt.

Satins retain their suppleness washed this way, says Skinner

They are so smart—these undergarments of graceful, shimmering satin. For its lustrous softness makes satin so appropriate for the chemise, the costume-slip, or camisole that you wear under your sheerest blouses and dresses.

And you can keep them soft and lustrous so easily, if you wash them the gentle Lux way. There is no rubbing to roughen or coarsen the texture. Your grocer, druggist or department store has Lux. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

LUX

William Skinner & Sons
NEW YORK

Lever Bros. Co.,
Cambridge, Mass.

Gentlemen: We had samples of Peau de Cygnes, Charmeuse, all silk satins, laundered in Lux. Each sample was given the average number of washings.

The Peau de Cygnes did not "pull" or become wiry, and the satins retained their suppleness.

All the silks showed so few signs of wear that it was hard to believe they had been washed so often. This we think is undoubtedly due to the fact that it is not only unnecessary to rub with Lux, but that the Lux lather is absolutely mild and pure. We are glad to give Lux an unqualified endorsement.

Very truly yours,

William Skinner Sons

PINKERTON GOLF COATS

Will Not Pull or Slice Your Stroke

Most early golfers bundle up in sweaters or coats and utterly spoil their game before the season begins. A man's muscles must be free from any tug or strain if he hopes to develop a good game. It is hard to realize that a variance of as little as half an inch on a ten-foot swing will throw a man's drive a hundred yards out of his course.

That is why the Pinkerton Golf Coat has become such a favorite with early golfers. It has warmth without weight. It has the most remarkable elasticity of any fabric and it has a specially designed, non-binding coat sleeve for golf, as well as the regular jersey wrist for other sports.

The Pinkerton cannot bind your muscles and therefore your stroke will not be deflected by a hair's breadth.

Build All the Words You Can from the letters in the phrase, "Use Elam's Irish Lawn When You Write."

THE person who submits the largest number of English words formed in accordance with the simple rules will be paid $500.00 in cash; the next largest list will win $200.00 and so on down to $2.50 as shown by Prize List No. 1, if the words are written on Elam's Irish Lawn. You may, however, use any other paper and be eligible for the cash awards in Prize List No. 2. All lists, on whatever paper submitted, will be given the same unbiased consideration by impartial judges. Anyone may compete except persons connected with our organization. Buy Elam's Irish Lawn from your druggist, stationer or department store or send us 50 cents for full sized box containing 24 sheets of paper and 24 envelopes to match. Specify color: White, Gray, Buff, Blue, Pink or Lavender.

Made only from clippings of the finer fabrics, Elam's Irish Lawn immediately proves its finer qualities.

Contest Rules:

1. Only words found in Webster's dictionary to be counted. Don't send foreign, hyphenated or compound words. Words of the same spelling can be used only once, even though they express different meanings
2. Letters may be used in one word only so often as they appear in the contest phrase. For example, S may be used three times, but M only once.
3. Contest closes July 31, 1922.
4. Use singular or plural, but where singular is used, plural cannot be counted also, and vice versa.
5. The list showing the largest number of correct words will be awarded first prize; the next largest, second prize, etc.
6. All answers must be written on one side of the paper only and words numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, etc. Write your name and address on each sheet.
7. In event of ties, full amount of the prize tied for will be paid to each tying contestant.
8. The decision of the judges will be final and awards made and checks mailed to winners as soon as possible after close of contest.
9. So called "master lists" sometimes offered for sale are barred.

W-WHAT M-MAKES THE WILD W-WAVES W-WILD!

BETTY COMPSON has a brand new bathing (?) outfit that any honest wave would recede from before touching. Mae Tinee.

MAY McAVOY in blue radium with American beauty butterflies—banding at top of bodice and frills in blue taffeta, bathing cap and bloomers to match, gray silk stockings and gray suede shoes—may feel like getting wet, but it's a cinch she'll restrain herself. Mae Tinee.

LILA LEE in a beach dress consisting of purple brocaded velvet skirt, bodice of plain purple satin to match, and drape of same, is not designed to take a fatal plunge. So she'd better look on the bright side of life and stay dry! Mae Tinee.

LEATRICE JOY in two panels of black satin lined with jade green over a foundation of gold striped black net has even this goose (if it isn't a goose, what IS it?) buffaloed. Mae Tinee.

A cream that really holds the powder

Powder will stay on for hours with the right vanishing cream as a base

HOW many times, especially in summer, you have wished your nose would not get shiny and that the powder would stay on.

You need never permit this shine. The way to make powder stay on is to provide a base for it to cling to. Powder put directly on the skin will not stay. It catches on little rough places and then flecks off, leaving your face as shiny as if it had never been powdered. These little rough places may not be apparent to you, but just the same they prevent the powder from going on smoothly.

The ideal powder base is absorbed instantly, giving your skin a soft, velvety surface to which the powder will hold. Try Pond's Vanishing Cream for this. Smooth on a little. Now powder. You will find the powder goes on smoothly and evenly, giving your skin a lovely transparent tone. You need not worry about your face getting shiny—the cream cannot reappear in a shine because it contains not a drop of oil. And the powder will stay on for hours.

More than that, Pond's Vanishing Cream is the best possible protection against exposure to sun and wind. Always smooth it on before you go out. It is made of ingredients famous for their soothing effect. You will notice, the moment you apply it to your cheeks, what a freshened feeling it gives you. It is truly a vanishing cream, and it will always make your skin look its best at a moment's notice.

A very different cream just as necessary

No one cream can contain all the ingredients necessary to take perfect care of your skin. You cannot have in a vanishing cream the oils that you must have for cleansing and stimulating the skin.

For cleansing, a different cream—Pond's Cold Cream—must be used. This cream contains just enough oil to penetrate the pores and remove every particle of dirt, and to lubricate the skin. All its uses are described in detail in the column to the right.

Use both these creams every day. Each has its own purposes and both together meet all the needs of the skin in face creams. They make steadily for a lovelier complexion. Both are too delicate to clog the pores. They cannot promote the growth of hair. You will find them in convenient sizes of jars and tubes at all drug and department stores. The Pond's Extract Co., New York.

For cleansing you need an entirely different cream

FOR thoroughly cleansing your skin you need a good cream with an oil base. Dust and fine particles of dirt bore too deep for ordinary washing to remove.

Unless there is enough oil in a cream to penetrate the pores and remove every particle of dirt, the skin is not entirely cleansed. It becomes dull looking. Blackheads may form.

This is the reason for Pond's Cold Cream. This cream is very soft and delicate. It is most pleasing to use, not only because it is light to the touch but because there is not a bit more oil than you need for a thorough cleansing. It was only after long experiment that we found just the right amount of oil to thoroughly cleanse the skin and not overload the pores as creams with too much oil do.

Every night and whenever you come in from a dusty railroad or automobile trip, smooth this delicate oil cream into your face. Then wipe it off again with a soft cloth. You will be astonished at the amount of grime on the cloth even after you have had just an ordinary day.

Send for samples of these two creams today. Each tube contains a generous amount. The trial will convince you that the two creams will take perfect care of your skin.

GENEROUS TUBES—MAIL COUPON TODAY

Vanishing Cream to hold the powder

At the AVE MARIA BREEZE by Douglas Newton

It Came with the Evening Clanging of Church Bells, Stealing Up the River from the Distant Sea to Temper the Hot and Luscious Air of the Tropical City.

WE were sitting in the Cafe del Pas even then discussing the end of Claude Legh when the unbelievable thing happened.

You can, perhaps, see us sitting there glad of the Ave Marie breeze. We always called it that, for it came with the evening clanging of the church bells, stealing up the river from the distant sea to temper the hot and luscious air of Cachimbo.

There must have been five of us there, sitting at a marble table on the pavement, drinking coffee or bok and talking little and languidly. Even with the breeze the river air seemed to touch one with a sense of thick, slightly damp heat—as though one were cased in moist velvet. Exertion was a labor. And we were nearly all old of the river, seasoned men with much of the stoic placidity born of the heat and of the amanhã (tomorrow) atmosphere in which we dwelt.

So we sat quietly looking across the broad sandy street to where modern electric lights gleamed in thick, white walled, flat roofed structures that had not altered since the far off days when the Conquerors settled in this rempte place after pushing up river for gold.

I remember as we sat we could see through the softening breeze mist and beyond a scroll iron gate the vaguely lit corner of a patio across the street. It was just a glimpse of palms, with the red riot of bougainvillaea and orange bignonias set about a fountain that would play if the householder only cleared the vents and repaired his tank. And behind the mass of color just a segment of arabesque pillar and gallery that might have come from Toledo or Fez. To have seen a figure in haik and burnoose walking amid the shrubs would not have seemed startling. It was all as old as hundreds of years, save that its lighting came from electric filament lamps.

And beyond the houses with their mist softened and mysteriously glowing lights were the whispering palms blocked delicately against a rich sky scattered with the jewels of stars. The magsing of the squared houses against the tremulous cobalt of the sky, the whispering poetry of the palms, the velvety hot quiet that steeped the world, the soft shuffling of mules passing in the sandy carriage way; the slow, mothlike flitting of people in and out of the lights along the sidewalk, the soft mule bells, the quiet laughter of some girls, and in a distant street a lover's guitar and a lover's voice lifting faintly, faintly before a barred window in a habit of love as ancient as the air of this town—all this gave to the happening a remoteness, a romance, a sense almost of fantasy that makes it appear incredible as I think of it in this colder, brisker, more material latitude. But——

But there it is; it happened. It happened to the five of us sitting languidly in the Cafe del Pax of Cachimbo.

WE were discussing the end of Claude Legh—that is, the man who was known to practically everybody else in Cachimbo as Vaughan Vaughan; curious how blackguards have a passion for high sounding aliases. We were speaking of the fellow with a sort of rueful and irritated comment—it was too hot to be actively bitter.

Anscombe said: "And yet, in spite of the Vaughan Vaughans, these people here still clinch matters with 'the word of an Englishman.'"

Anscombe was an American, but he knew that "the word of an Englishman" embraced all Anglo-Saxondom.

"Quaint, trusting beggars," was Slater's comment.

"I don't know," I put in. "After all, if there are Vaughan Vaughans they are exceptional. There are Edmund Stricklands, too, and—and, well—people like us. We're in the majority, and we're straight."

"Sure, that's sound," said Duncan Jeffery, and he slipped off into the sort of side channel usual to this kind of talk. "Poor old Strickland, he must be feeling pretty sick over the whole business."

"Yes, how's Eddie Strickland taking it, Sleath?" put in Waller. "You saw him today before he went off up river to his estate, didn't you?"

"O, he's pretty sick," I agreed.

"Who wouldn't be?" put in Slater. "The way that swine treated Eddie. What will it cost him, Sleath—I mean in pounds sterling? Something working beyond five thousand, I bet."

"All that," I said. "But it isn't merely what he's lost; it's the slur that hurts. You know what a stickler Eddie is with regard to his name. Straight dealing, honorable treatment, fairness to generosity, and—and all that sort of thing are his fetishes."

"Sure, he has the real hidalgo manner, has Eddie," said Anscombe. "A nobleman."

"'El Cavalheiro,' the people here call him, don't they?" This from Waller, who was the newest of us.

"With reason," said Duncan. "He is. One of the finest, straightest fellows that ever walked is Eddie Strickland. And—and this jail bird Vaughan Vaughan did the dirty on him—and his name, made it a byword for crooked dealing and worse—for a whole district. Ten years of the hardest, whitest work by one of the whitest men living gone phutt because of one blackguard. All that apart from the sheer beastliness of Vaughan, and that alone will mean that a few generations up there in Bacaba will spit at the mere mention of the name of Strickland."

"But won't all those years of straight dealing count?" protested Waller.

"'Evil runs like the fire through the dry bush; good is a man trying to quench it with a gourd,'" said Anscombe, quoting a local saying that dealt with scandal. "Waller, my lad, you'll be one to suffer, too. After this when you go up to the Bacaba country to trade, carry patience and a .44 automatic with you—and don't even think the name of Strickland. They believe in blood feuds up there—and some of the relatives of those two dead caboclos (half breeds) will strike to kill."

"But justice has be——" began Waller.

"Aw, you'll learn in time, Waller," jerked Slater. "And, anyhow, why argue what might be with regard to Eddie Strickland. He's at the end of his time; he's leaving the river for good anyhow, isn't he?"

"When does he go, Sleath?" put in Duncan lazily.

"Any time. He was ready when the Vaughan business held him up."

"Poor devil! Poor devil!" mused Anscombe—you understand, in that mood none of us was particularly relevant. "To have the whole fabric he built up come crashing down at the last moment. The last moment, when he could not build it up again. What an end to a man's work! No wonder he feels bad."

WE had talked just as things came to us, lazily and with pauses, and we drifted out of the talk as languidly. A boy came and pestered us to buy lottery tickets, and we repulsed him with shaken heads. We sat quietly in the silken night, and faintly the lover sang to the distant bars and faintly a monkey howled in the bush outside the town.

We all thought of Strickland, no doubt. I did. A rare figure, Strickland. A trader, of course, and a rich and important one as the river counts them—but such a trader. There was almost a mediæval air about him. Nothing inhuman, you understand; there was never the time when he was not the best of fellows and the most companionable of men in his quiet way—but there was always, too, that sense of austerity, nobility.

That manner must have been in his soul, for he had it when he came, though he started pretty low down, as I, of all those present, knew, and he was extraordinarily young at his starting. It is hard to describe what he stood for—what he was. A lean man, slim, hard, but not really tall, jaw long, face thin but not really æsthetic, a fine, sweet mouth under the little dark mustache, and a tightness in the build of that mouth and jaw that forbade liberties. Nose thin and sensitive, with just a little kink of breeding at the bridge, eyes blue, composed, candid, and yet unswerving—they gave you a curiously level glance that was always frank and could be disturbing, and having over the eyes a magnificent forehead, high and broad—one felt the fine, generous force of that forehead.

Even all this fails to give the man. How can I give you him? Well, he came to a country where courtesy, the grand manner, was the native habit of an old race, and he had nothing to add to his own manner in meeting it. He was a cavalheiro among cavalheiros. He had the same grand gesture, his word was his bond, his hand was something more than mere commerce. He traded with the people of the province of Cachimbo as a friend; they could rely upon him; they trusted him; they came to him for help. It was a truism that nobody could suspect him of an act, though all knew that he had done many a noble one. He was a sort of Bayard, a sort of Lancelot, a law giver; one of those wise, grave, sympathetic, indubitably upright and able men who, we like to think, have made the name of the Anglo-Saxon pioneer the rather splendid thing it is.

I hope I haven't overdrawn him in my attempt to put his character down. He was human. He wasn't a little plaster saint, by any means. He could take his fun on the polo ground, in the cardroom, anywhere, as well as other men. He was human and he was a big man whose reputation was a fine and sacred thing. And that rat Vaughan——

Yes, the others had been thinking of Strickland, too.

Waller said: "Let me see, what did he do—Vaughan, I mean? He impersonated Strickland, didn't he?"

"He did," I began. "Strickland sent him up——" Slater broke in with a vague inconsequence.

"Did you ever catch 'em together, Duncan?" he asked. "By jove, it was a little startling. Take off Eddie Strickland's mustache, or give Vaughan one, and at first shock you'd be puzzling which was which. Pray, Sleath, there was no relationship, was there?"

"Not the slightest. It was rather a queer resemblance, though one saw the difference pretty quickly when one talked to them both together. Vaughan was a coarse edition of Strickland; then the shape of the mouth, the build of the chin—O, plenty of things marked 'em apart. Once one saw all this one never saw a resemblance."

"I never saw it at any time myself," cried Anscombe decidedly.

"Well, but wasn't it the thing that helped Vaughan carry off the thing at Bacaba?" cried Waller.

"It was at the bottom of it. Vaughan went upstream in one of Strickland's launches. He was, in fact, on a job for Strickland—buying Sernamby rubber, I think it was. The headman at Bacaba had never seen Strickland; only knew his reputation. The fact that Vaughan was in Strickland's launch and that a wretched half breed who had seen the real Strickland once, and, picking up Vaughan's resemblance, called him Strickland, was enough for the headman. The headman's magnificent attitude toward the supposed Strickland was enough for Vaughan. He not only allowed himself to be treated as Strickland—he became Strickland. And there you are."

I thought that was all that was wanted by Waller. I lapsed into silence.

Waller said: "Well, well! And Vaughan did——"

"O, don't you know the story?"

"Not enough, only the outline," Waller smiled.

"Since you may, for your sins, have to go up to Bacaba—an infernal and primitive place—you'd better know. Vaughan, who was really rotten — rotten all through, though we never knew—couldn't resist what he thought was the chance of a lifetime. Also, because he had been living a life of unnatural honesty, he was ripe to break out. He broke out. As Strickland he had everything in the palm of his hand. First he lived like a fighting cock, worming his way into the good graces of the headman—and his family.

"You understand what that means. The old headman, a half breed named Alvarada, thought he was talking to Strickland—the honorable man. He was quite candid and intimate with him, as these simple people are. Among other things they discussed hard times, and what could be done to meet them if they came. The old man wanted advice. He disclosed the hoard—conto upon conto of milreis—which he had put by against the evil day.

"The sight of that cash decided Vaughan. But he meant to make a big coup. He sent the launch up stream on a wild goose errand so he shouldn't be given away; then he had the rubber taken down stream to a shady half breed and sold cheap—fortunately Strickland was buying on credit, so there was little of his money involved directly. With the cash of that in hand Vaughan went back to Bacaba and—and began making love to the headman's daughter."

"Good Lord!" gasped Waller.

"O, he was the complete scoundrel, Vaughan," I went on. "This, and his own natural manner—by now he had decided to drop the Strickland pose—made him confoundedly unpopular. There was bad blood. He played cards with some local bucks—and cheated 'em to a heavy tune. Things became too hot for him. The name of Strickland became something to raise anger and send hands to knife hafts. Things came to a climax with the business of girl. He was ordered to clear out—he did. He took with him the girl and the headman's contos of milreis, gathering both at the pistol point.

"Row—yes, there was the devil of a row, but Vaughan—whom they thought Strickland—shot up several of them, killing two, and so held them back till he got away. The two men were the headman's sons, brothers of the girl. Vaughan got away up river and then into the bush."

"But they got him—how?"

"The girl gave him away. But not until he had caused Strickland a great deal of hurt. You see, the police here actually came along to arrest Strickland. They'd had a message from Bacaba telling them what 'Strickland' had done. You know how infernal the law is here—well, if you don't you soon will—but the law gave Strickland a hell of a time and made a mess of his name before he could prove that he had never been up to Bacaba. On top of that his launch came flying down stream with something of the real story—not everything, because on returning from their wild goose journey they were fired upon when approaching Bacaba and had a hairy time getting

The HEEL OF ACHILLES

I had at that time just succeeded in getting my handicap down into single figures, and I welcomed the opportunity of dashing on the noblest of pastimes. But I had barely begun my outing when he stopped me.

"It's a game, is it?"

"I suppose you would call it that," I said, "but it is an oblique way of describing the holiest——"

SANDY MCHOOTS arrived in due course and was shown into the private office.

"Mr. McHoots?" said Vincent Jopp.

"Mphm," said the open champion.

"That a good place?"

"Very good."

"Arrange today for my becoming a member."

every line it bore out the conception I had made of the girl. I put it down quietly.

"I couldn't possibly let her know the ugly truth," said Strickland.

"No," I agreed. "But I already knew that, Eddie. It's exactly how we all felt. We couldn't tell her the truth about Legh. And yet what are we to do?"

"We must get over it some way."

"How? If she stays at Cachimbo, or even on the river, rumor must reach her in time. I'm terrified, even now, of a chance word putting her on the truth. And then you have to see her. She means to see you when you get down to Cachimbo. What can you tell her?"

"We must think something out," agreed Strickland.

WE did think something out. It was a slightly heroic story of a man (that is, Legh) who went up to a distant post to help a man with fever and who died of fever himself. Strickland was to be the only man who could give the clew, as he happened to have a photograph of the fever slain man. When this photo was compared with Mary Lucas' the whole story would come out. Our mythical hero's name was to be Seabrook, and directly his identity was established the whole of the white colony was to come forward with corroborative evidence—I was to coach them up. All would have heard of Seabrook, though Claude Legh meant nothing to them.

It was a fair story, and if we had been able to carry it through I think we could have made it convincing. But fate ruled otherwise. I knew that things were not going to be as planned when our launch approached Cachimbo, and I cried out: "Good God, she's on the jetty. She's come down to meet the launch."

Yes, there she was, standing slim, erect, fine, on the crazy little pier (she had got out of one of the wharfmen the time of Strickland's arrival, we heard later), and she was waiting for us. Even then all might have gone as planned if I could have got to her first. I did not. Strickland mounted the jetty steps, walked toward her, faced her. And then suddenly she moved toward him and called out in a low, tremulous voice:

"Claude! Claude!"

And it was only then that I remembered that strange resemblance of the two men.

And I was in an agony, too. I wondered what would happen. I wondered what Strickland would do. What could he do? How could he straighten things out? I jumped forward. Then Strickland, who had been standing still, staring at her in a strange, fascinated way, moved forward a little with a sort of hesitancy, and he said in a sort of whisper, as though not sure of himself:

"Miriam! Isn't it Miriam?"

I gasped. I could hardly believe my ears. He had called her not by her name, Mary Lucas, but by the name she used in the letters, the name unknown to others. I stared at Strickland aghast. What was he doing? What unpleasant folly was he attempting? But I had no time to do more than look. The girl with a low cry stepped forward. Her hand went out, catching at Strickland's arm, and she stared into his face. Then she swayed and sank against him—heat, excitement, shock had been too much for her.

No, she didn't exactly faint. For a moment or two only she swooned. Strickland had her in his arms, helpless, for that moment or two. But it was enough for him to say swiftly and quietly to me in Portuguese.

"Play up, Sleath; I lost my memory years ago—accident and fever." He saw the amazement on my face. "For God's sake play up; it's the way out." And I saw a light in his eyes which told me it was something more than a way out. He had admired her already—now he loved her.

She drew out of his arms a few seconds after, not fully out, but enough to let her look into his face. "It is you?" she said. "You've changed—older—and that mustache, but you are the same, too."

"You haven't changed, Miriam," he said. "I remember you now. I remember you at least."

"You remember me—at least?" she was smiling, but she was puzzled. I was all on tenterhooks, but I couldn't help thinking that Strickland was carrying it through magnificently. I had to pinch myself to know I was awake, and that Strickland was really acting. Well, perhaps it wasn't all acting—he had already let me know how much he admired Mary Lucas in spirit. "You remember me—at least," she said again. "Why—what do you mean?"

"It's hard to remember," he said. "There are so many things I forget. I can't remember the things that—that happened before I came here."

"But—but you do remember me?"

"Yes, you're Miriam. I didn't remember you, but now I see you and you're Miriam."

"Don't you remember I'm—I'm Mary Lucas?"

"No," Strickland's quiet, reserved manner helped him, but for all that he was superb. "No. I don't remember that. There was—they tell me there was some sort of accident, and then I had fever. And the things that went before that have gone."

"That's why you didn't write," she breathed, and she seemed so glad to explain that that she had no thought for anything else, and then, "Do you know you're Claude Legh?" He smiled and shook his head. "The only name I know is Edmund Strickland. Isn't that so, Pat?"

"That's so," I said feverishly, and thank heaven for the Irish in me, for it helped me to invent. "Why, I know more about him than he does himself, Miss Lucas. You see—you see, it's like this. I—I got word that a man was ill in the bush—years ago, it was. He'd—yes, he'd slipped and hit his head badly, and he was lying ill. One of his guides brought in the news, and when I got to him the other guides vamoosed with all his kit—just left him there to die, you know. That crack on the head and the fever made him bad—he was unconscious when I brought him in. I thought he would die. But he didn't. He woke up sane enough—just like he is now, only he didn't remember a single thing about himself. No, not even his name. He seemed to think we ought to tell him what his name was, but we couldn't, for nothing was found on him to tell us. And then gradually he got to call himself Strickland. How, I don't know, but there it is. And he's gone on quite normal since. As you see. Well, you can see how it is."

I had shot my bolt. My story hadn't altogether been ex tempore, but the fellow I had actually fetched sick from the bush wasn't Strickland. But, whatever my story was, it seemed pretty thin, and I stood staring at the girl with my heart in my mouth, waiting for her to pull me to pieces. And she looked up at Strickland and smiled, and then she looked at me, and then she said:

"And that's why none of you knew of Claude Legh last night; I understand now. . . ."

I SUPPOSE that's all that need be said. She was saved from the real truth about Claude Legh; she really did accept Strickland as Claude Legh. Unbelievable though it looks in cold blood, it all went smoothly. It was like Strickland all over to step into the breach like that, to save the day with that fine, magnificent gesture. And yet I don't think it was so hard for him. He admired her, he thought her fine already, and she was beautiful—I think he more than half acted as his heart dictated.

Well, he stepped right into the scoundrel Legh's shoes, became without a visible hesitation her fiancé. And it wasn't perhaps as hard as it looks. That loss of memory of his helped a great deal. It wasn't only that it did not matter if he forgot details (what the real Legh had told him, and the letters helped him a little, gave him little "spurts of memory"), but his condition made them start their courtship from a fresh beginning. I heard Mary Lucas herself say that it was like being in love with a stranger.

Well, they began again—and it was real to both of them. There was no doubt that in Mary Lucas Strickland had found his perfect woman. And, I rather fancy, Mary Lucas found her new Claude Legh something finer than the old. And then Strickland was wise. He was leaving Cachimbo and the river, even leaving Brazil, and he now left before a rumor of the truth could get to her ears. It was not likely that it would, but there was always a risk.

And we helped, of course. We planned the thing out. We not only covered up all traces of Vaughan, but we helped the plot along by our attitude of gladness at Legh's recovered memory. Also we elaborated that story of the fever and accident; we made it ring true. Perhaps in the end we made it ring a little bit more than true, and it was also a good thing that Strickland and Mary Lucas left before our beautifully embroidered versions began to clash. When a man begins to romance the horrible joy of it grows upon him until there comes a time when not even a well placed kick under a table will prevent him putting forward as an absolute rockbottom truth something which utterly destroys all the facts already told.

But they escaped that. They went down river, and Strickland wisely schemed it so that they had only time to catch a boat to New York. They had, therefore, time to get to know each other properly before being married in New York. And the last I heard from Strickland (he retains that name, says he feels awkward in the other—and they have no relations) was that they had fallen in love with the States and intended settling down there for good. In that I read Strickland's wisdom. He is not going to risk going back to England.

"Don't! Keep your gallantry for some one else! You don't love me a bit better than I love you. You are secretive, you three Dunbarton-Kents, and I'm brutally outspoken. You get on my nerves, every one of you, and I on yours. By nature we're antagonistic—you none of you have the quality that made your uncle and me one." Her deep voice deepened. "I will say though that of the three my dear husband left in my charge, you have shown the best sense and the most consideration for the family name. Doubtless you've had your escapades, but you've never let them loose on the public like the sons of many of my friends. I appreciate it, West. I'm glad to do anything I can to help you win a sweet and honest girl. I like that child—she suits me. I think she'll make you a deal more satisfactory wife than any of the girls who have tried to get you. I can help you to a certain extent, but, West, it's she who'll do the deciding. You know best whether she cares for you or not. I don't think she does—so far—and I think you'll have to walk pretty carefully if you mean to win out. Too much urging won't do—there's an independent streak in that child. She's not a whit dazzled or elated—she's more troubled and conscientious over her change of fortune than anything else. Remember, I've warned you."

WEST smiled at her, and his smile was a pleasant one. "Thank you, Aunt Bulah. There is a great deal of truth in what you say about us—we're not exactly a congenial family. Nevertheless, I'm fonder of you than you think—one may be born secretive and yet have a big respect for the outspoken sort."

"A respectful amusement would describe it better," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said bluntly. "A half respectful, half irritated amusement. Breck's secretive to the point of perversion—I don't want to talk about him—but you and Bella, the things you think about are the things you don't talk about. It's always been so. You have a frank manner and Bella's an oyster, yet, fundamentally, you're both the same—the thing you think is the thing you don't say. Bella spends half her time in town and I hear that she's with this friend and that, but not a word about what her interests are, never a detail. She goes and comes and knits. I detest knitting in silence. What I'm meaning to say, West, is that I'm determined Marie shall have her chance to know you, not just the surface of you, but the inner man. I wouldn't want you for a husband—you'd drive me mad—but perhaps a mysterious reserve is the thing which would make Marie happy. Anyway, she's going to have the chance to discover what you are under the surface."

West eyed her for a moment and his expression might be accurately described as half irritated and half amused. Then he looked down at the fire thoughtfully. "Marie said to me yesterday, 'I'm most unsudden, monsieur.' I told her I liked the quality, and I do. I'm fastidious—I'd feel a distaste for a girl who'd be flustered over what you've done for her or be elated over my subjection. She was exquisite tonight. I'm willing enough to have her discover all there is in me to be discovered—but it's going to be hard for me to control myself—I want her." He hesitated, frowning. "I wish I had as much mysterious reserve in my inner man as you think I have, for that's the thing which has captured her imagination."

"What are you talking about?" Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent demanded.

West turned and looked at her, distress in every line of his face. "What's the good of keeping it from you? You're observant, it'll be plain to you in a day or two—if she's not in love with Breck, it's something near it."

"What!" It lifted Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent from her chair.

"I think so, Aunt Bulah."

"Think! You're jealous! Most men in love are fools!"

"I'll grant it," he said quietly, "but I think I'm not mistaken. She pities him—he's taken hold on her imagination. Can't you see how it would be? She doesn't know, and to one who doesn't he would appear pitiful—I can't help pitying him myself sometimes. And he's dangerously handsome."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said something under her breath; she had grown white. "Yes, more trouble," West said wearily. "I wish I had told you before, but, as you said, I'm likely to keep things to myself. I didn't feel certain of it until I talked to her yesterday. I had begged you not to send her away, but since yesterday I've hoped you would. I'd have folllowed her—nothing will make me give her up—but even your turning your back on her would be better for her than staying where he is. I haven't had a happy twenty-four hours—then the surprise tonight!"

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent stood massive and motionless. "And he?" she asked.

West flung up his hands. "Set me another riddle! I think he's tied to Mrs. Smith in more ways than one, yet he has designs of some sort against Marie. I can't make it out exactly, only I know that it's since I've been devoted to her that he has looked as if he'd like to knife me. You saw how he looked and spoke this evening."

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent whirled about. "We'll see!" she said with grim determination, and made for the hall.

West sprang after her and caught her arm. "Aunt Bulah! You're not going to make her unhappy?" he begged passionately. "Don't do it! I couldn't bear it! You can't tell her the truth about him; we none of us dare do that—let things be!"

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent shook him off. "I'm not likely to haul out the family skeleton, but I'll get at the bottom of this, or I'll know the reason why!" and she mounted the stairs with forcible decision.

"Poor devil! Poor devil!" mused Anscombe—you understand, in that mood none of us was particularly relevant. "To have the whole fabric he built up come crashing down at the last moment. The last moment, when he could not build it up again. What an end to a man's work! No wonder he feels bad."

WE had talked just as things came to us lazily and with pauses, and we

In Which the Only Golfer Who Ever Approached the Game in a Spirit of Pure Reason Makes Some Startling Discoveries.

"Those legs!" she cried. "Those legs!"

ON the young man's face, as he sat sipping his ginger ale in the clubhouse smoking room, there was a look of disillusionment.

"Never again!" he said.

The Oldest Member glanced up from his paper. "You are proposing to give up golf once more?" he queried.

"Not golf. Betting on golf." The young man frowned. "I've just been let down badly. Wouldn't you have thought I had a good thing, laying seven to two on McTavish against Robinson?"

"Undoubtedly," said the Sage. "The odds, indeed, generous as they are, scarcely indicate the former's superiority. Do you mean to tell me that the thing came unstitched?"

"Robinson won in a walk, after being three down at the turn."

"Strange! What happened?"

"Why, they looked in at the bar to have a refresher before starting for the tenth," said the young man, his voice quivering, "and McTavish suddenly discovered that there was a hole in his trouser pocket and a quarter had dropped out. He worried so frightfully about it that on the second nine he couldn't do a thing right. Went completely off his game and didn't win a hole."

The Sage shook his head gravely.

"If this is really going to be a lesson to you, my boy, never to bet on the result of a golf match, it will be a blessing in disguise. There is no such thing as a certainty in golf. I wonder if I ever told you a rather curious episode in the career of Vincent Jopp?"

"The Vincent Jopp? The multi-millionaire?"

"The same. You never knew he once came within an ace of winning the amateur championship, did you?"

"I never heard of his playing golf."

"He played for one season. After that he gave it up and has not touched a club since. Ring the bell and get me a small lime-juice, and I will tell you all."

IT was long before your time (said the Oldest Member) that the events which I am about to relate took place. I had just completed my college education, and was feeling particularly pleased with myself, because I had secured the job of private and confidential secretary to Vincent Jopp, then a man in the early thirties, busy laying the foundations of his present remarkable fortune.

Jopp was, I think, the most extraordinary personality I have encountered in a long and many sided life. He was admirably equipped for success in finance, having the steely eye and square jaw without which it is hopeless for a man to enter that line of business. He possessed also an overwhelming confidence in himself, and the ability to switch a cigar from one corner of his mouth to the other without wiggling his ears, which, as you know, is the stamp of the genuine Monarch of the Money Market.

He was the nearest approach to the financier on the films, the fellow who makes his jaw muscles jump when he is telephoning, that I have ever seen.

Like all successful men, he was a man of method. He kept a pad on his desk on which he would scribble down his appointments, and it was my duty on entering the office each morning to take this pad and type its contents neatly in a loose leaved ledger. Usually, of course, these entries referred to business appointments and deals which he was contemplating, but one day I was interested to note, against the date May 3, the entry, "Propose to Amelia."

I was interested, as I say, but not surprised. Though a man of steel and iron, there was nothing of the celibate about Vincent Jopp. He was one of those men who marry early and often. On three separate occasions before I joined his service he had jumped off the dock, to scramble back to shore again later by means of the divorce court lifebelt. Scattered here and there about the country there were three ex-Mrs. Jopps drawing their monthly envelope, and now, it seemed, he contemplated the addition of a fourth to the platoon.

I was not surprised, I say, at this resolve of his. What did seem a little remarkable to me was the thorough way in which he had thought the thing out. This iron willed man recked nothing of possible obstacles. Under the date of June 1 was the entry, "Marry Amelia," while in the March of the following year he had arranged to have his firstborn christened Thomas Reginald. Later on, the shortcoating of Thomas Reginald was arranged for, and there was a note about sending him to school. Many hard things have been said of Vincent Jopp, but nobody has ever accused him of not being a man who looked ahead.

ON the morning of May the fourth Jopp came into the office, looking, I fancied, a little thoughtful. He sat for some moments staring before him with his brow a trifle furrowed; then he seemed to come to himself. He rapped his desk.

"Hi! You!" he said. It was thus that he habitually addressed me.

"Mr. Jopp?" I replied.

"What's golf?"

I had at that time just succeeded in getting my handicap down into single figures, and I welcomed the opportunity of dilating on the noblest of pastimes. But I had barely begun my eulogy when he stopped me.

"It's a game, is it?"

"I suppose you would call it that," I said, "but it is an offhand way of describing the holiest——"

"How do you play it?"

"Pretty well," I said. "At the beginning of the season I didn't seem able to keep 'em straight at all, but lately I've been doing fine. Getting better every day. Whether it was that I was moving my head or gripping too tightly with the right hand——"

"Keep the reminiscences for your grandchildren during the long winter evenings," he interrupted abruptly, as was his habit. "What I want to know is what a fellow does when he plays golf. Tell me in as few words as you can just what it's all about."

"You hit a ball with a stick till it falls into a hole."

"Easy!" he snapped. "Take dictation."

I produced my pad.

"May the fifth, take up golf. What's an amateur championship?"

"It is the annual competition to decide which is the best player among the amateurs. There is also a professional championship and an open event."

"O, there are golf professionals, are there? What do they do?"

"They teach golf."

"Which is the best of them?"

"Sandy McHoots won both British and American open events last year."

"Wire him to come here at once."

"But McHoots is in Inverlochty, in Scotland."

"Never mind. Get him; tell him to name his own terms. When is the amateur championship?"

"I think it is on September the twelfth this year."

"All right, take dictation. September twelve, win amateur championship."

I stared at him in amazement, but he was not looking at me.

"Got that?" he said. "September thir—O, I was forgetting. Add September twelve, corner wheat. September thirteen, marry Amelia."

"Marry Amelia," I echoed, moistening my pencil.

"Where do you play this—what's its name—golf?"

"There are clubs all over the country. I belong to the Wissahicky Glen."

"That a good place?"

"Very good."

"Arrange today for my becoming a member."

SANDY McHOOTS arrived in due course and was shown into the private office.

"Mr. McHoots?" said Vincent Jopp.

"Mphm," said the open champion.

"I have sent for you, Mr. McHoots, because I hear that you are the greatest living exponent of this game of golf."

"Aye," said the champion, cordially. "I am that."

"I wish you to teach me the game. I am already a few days behind schedule, owing to the delay incident upon your crossing the Atlantic, so let us start at once. Name a few of the most important points in connection with the game. My secretary will make notes of them, and I will memorize them. In this way we shall save time. Now, what is the most important thing to remember when playing golf?"

"Keep your heid still."

"A simple task."

"Na sae simple as it soonds."

"Nonsense!" said Vincent Jopp, curtly. "If I decide to keep my head still, I shall keep it still. What next?"

"Keep yer ee on the ba'."

"It shall be attended to. And the next."

"Dinna press."

"I won't. And to resume."

Mr. McHoots ran through a dozen of the basic rules, and I took them down in shorthand. Vincent Jopp studied the list.

"Very good. Easier than I had supposed. On the first tee at Wissahicky Glen at eleven sharp tomorrow, Mr. McHoots. Hi! You!"

"Sir?" I said.

"Go out and buy me a set of clubs, a red jacket, a cloth cap, a pair of spiked shoes, and a ball."

"One ball?"

"Certainly. What need is there of more?"

"It sometimes happens," I explained, "that a player who is learning the game fails to hit his ball straight and then he often loses it in the rough at the side of the fairway."

"Absurd!" said Vincent Jopp. "If I set out to drive my ball straight, I shall drive it straight. Good morning, Mr. McHoots. You will excuse me now. I am busy cornering Woven Textiles."

to expect to find him in such an out of the way place as Cachimbo?"

Anscombe was thinking—we all were thinking—that if the girl had had news of Claude Legh as Vaughan Vaughan it would be easier for us.

"I went to Manaos," said the girl. "The last I heard of Claude—Claude Legh—was from Manaos. I saw Mr. Savage at Manaos. (Savage is the name I give the respected consul.) He did not know of Claude either; his manner was indefinite. Then, after I had shown him Claude's photograph and he had made inquiries—well, he said that he was almost certain that a man answering to Claude Legh's description had been heard of here—at Cachimbo. So I came up."

Very furtively we caught each other's eye. We all felt the same thing. We all felt that Savage had shirked, that Savage had funked telling her just the sort of bad hat Claude Legh was—and had passed her on to us. Looking at her, fine, upstanding, wondrously courageous, and yet shy and retiring, we could understand why Savage had felt unable to tell her the truth about Legh—but that didn't make us bless him.

WE all stared at her, embarrassed, entirely at loss. We couldn't tell her. We simply could not tell her. We felt we hadn't the tact, we hadn't the finesse; we hadn't the pluck. We simply couldn't face her out, and we didn't know what to do. We sat there pretending to try and remember if we'd heard even the rumor of a rumor concerning this Legh.

Then she slipped a photograph from her bag across the table, and one by one, with gigantic efforts to be calm, we gazed with determined unrecognition at the face of the photo; we dared not look into each other's eyes. Walter said, idiotically:

"Seems a face I know. Oh-ah!" Duncan's toe had caught his shin. "But I can't place it. Certainly not among people who have come up here."

"Certainly not," said Duncan, trying not to scowl. "Why, hang it, one can number off on one hand the fellows who have come up in the last four years. And—and Legh was not the name of any of them. Are you sure Savage was right, Miss Lucas? I mean, your friend might have gone off on one of the side rivers."

"Yes, he might have done that," said the girl, with an appalling calm. "But I tried here first."

We were struck dumb by that. In that sentence we sensed an incredible determination. It said plainly, "And I will try those side rivers next. And I will try the side rivers of the Tapajos and the Madeira and all the wide levels of Brazil from the Venezuela border down to Rio Grande do Sul. I will search and search and search until I find him—or until I die."

Yes, we were appalled. We sat and looked at her. We saw in her sweet, brave, and yet shy face the golden light of an inflexible resolve. We knew she would go on seeking this man always until she heard definite news. And we knew that the man was killed and how.

We knew there was no more need for her to search—and yet how could we tell her?

So we sat groping in our minds, helpless before her and yet pretending to give the matter all our keenest consideration. It was an abominable situation. It was, if you like, an incredible situation. But it was there. No good telling ourselves that things did not happen like this in real life, even with the long arm of coincidence stretched to crack; it had and was happening to us.*

THEN Waller, the blurter, tried to rid himself of his embarrassment by crying: "Perhaps Strickland might—might be able to help."

We glared at him. As well as we could we glared at him. It seemed at first to be nothing short of an outrage to settle this on Strickland after all he had gone through from this Legh. And, then, on second thoughts, I fancied that out of the mouth of a babe had come wisdom. Strickland, after all—who could carry this thing off so well as Strickland? Who of us had his manner in meeting such situations?

"Yes," I said, slowly, "perhaps you're right, Waller. Strickland might do something."

That seemed to take the tension off at once, and we began to talk in generalities. But I noticed the others made sure of being outside this as soon as they could. One after the other they pleaded work—the liars—and slid off, and I was left with Mary Lucas.

Perhaps that was right, for, after all, I am the consul, and, also, it was helpful. She could tell me things that she could not tell to a crowd—that she would never, indeed, tell to anybody, or to me, outside my official capacity. So by this means I had her whole story ready for Strickland. She wanted to arrange, as we went back to her hotel, that she should travel up to Strickland with me. I stopped that. I put her off with excuses. I don't think she believed them. It was her perception of the fact that I did not want her to come that stopped her—that and the knowledge that Strickland must come back to Cachimbo in a day or two.

So I left her, fully aware of the unpleasantness before us. For I knew her to be something fine. There was something delicate and noble about her. There was a tenderness, a bravery, and a high resolve that put her on a plane above ordinary women. Yes, I was glad that Strickland was still here to handle this matter. He alone, I thought, could meet her on an equality.

Strickland was his quiet, sure self when I saw him next day; a little tired, I thought, a little graver, but it is difficult to say with men of his sort; they present an unchangeable face to the world through all things. He was in the process of packing the few things he was to take away from the estate, and, indeed broke off to sit on the veranda with me and share a long drink.

"Eddie," I said, "I'm afraid I've some further beastliness for you."

"Connected with Vaughan?" he said, and I thought his mouth tightened a little.

"Afraid so. Last night a young woman arrived in Cachimbo. She startled us all by being there for one thing. Then she destroyed all our wits by telling us that she had come up river to look for Claude Legh. We didn't know what on earth to do. Then your name came up, and somehow that seemed to slide the whole business on to your shoulders. I know what this means. I——"

"All right, Pat; let me have the facts," he said quietly.

"It appears they—she and Claude Legh—were engaged years back at home. She feels not merely bound to him, but beholden. Her father wasn't keen on the match, and set Legh the task of making a certain sum before the marriage could take place. Legh seems to have got into some scrape in trying to take a short cut to fortune—the natural man coming out, maybe; but she takes the blame. Legh, she says, was a high spirited boy with no parents to direct him, and he simply thought of marrying her and did not think of the consequences of what he did.

"Well, things being unpleasant, and the old country seeming too slow, he resolved to go abroad to win his fortune and hers. He came to Brazil. She feels responsible for that, quite apart from the fact that she genuinely loves the fellow, you understand—I saw that, though she isn't the sort to talk about it. The first year or so she heard from him. He was in Para then. Then he stopped writing. His last letter told her he was going up river to Manaos."

"He did, you know," said Strickland. "He came up to Manaos first, made things too hot for him, then doubled back to the coast again, to Rio, and so on. He used some other name, not Legh or Vaughan."

"That's how I hadn't heard," I said. "I couldn't quite see how her story connected up. I see it now. Well, his letters stopped when he came up river. She was anxious—I think she would have come out then, but her father was ill and the war was under way. Then her father died and she was her own mistress; no important relatives, you know. She also happened to be well off, though perhaps not really wealthy. She felt she could help Legh and repay him for his exile, too. She would have come out then but for the war. Now that she has come out, she struck straight for Manaos, on the word of those old letters. She felt, and feels, confident that the fellow survived all this time. At Manaos Savage picked up Legh from his photo, and tried to turn her back—if you see her you'll understand why he hated to hurt her—and then put her off by saying vaguely that he thought that a man answering to Legh's description came up here. So she came up here."

"What did you say to her, Pat?"

"O, we lied. Well, you'll understand why when you see her. We said we'd never heard of any such man as Legh. And then—then you were brought in as the greatest authority in the district."

"Her name is Mary Lucas, isn't it?"

"That's the name. You knew?"

"Vaughan spoke of her. Then there were her letters among his papers." He went into the room he used as a study, and came back with a bundle of papers in his hand. He picked out a photograph and handed it to me.

"Yes," I said, "this is the girl. The photo's younger—but she's finer than that." It was a sweet face I looked down upon, tremulous yet brave, reticent yet high souled.

"A beautiful woman," said Strickland in a quiet voice. It gave me a cue.

"You see that," I cried. "It's not easy to tell her the truth. She's rather fine——"

"She's a noble woman," said Strickland softly, as though musing. Then he caught my stare. "I had to go through his papers," he explained. "I couldn't bear reading her letters, but I had to do it to try and pick up the threads. They are fine letters, Pat. There is something in them, a candor, a generosity—one can't read them without appreciating what a splendid woman she is. And you can see what she is in the photo."

"You can see it even more in the woman herself," I said. Strickland turned to me impulsively for him; he, too, was acting as though he were breaking down a reserve.

"Vaughan, or rather Legh, spoke to me about her, too," he said with great feeling. "Whatever else Legh was he had that good in him. That girl was his ideal. He couldn't live up to it; he had that bad strain in him, but what good was left in his life was centered on her. If the truth be known he probably stopped writing to her because he realized where his life and habits were leading. He didn't tell me this, naturally, but now I can see that he sometimes hinted at it. He was pretty open with me, you know, Pat. We became intimate—and this girl was part of that intimacy. He used to say that I reminded him of her. Absurd—but I believe I did help him—quite unknowingly—to run straight longer than any one of his nature could run straight."

He paused for a moment, then he said: "It was because I knew so much about her and then learned so much about her in her letters that I could not write to her. She was the only one to write to, you know. I thought Legh's way was the best—he would just go off into the unknown, and there'd be nothing ugly. It seemed—well, read that letter, Pat; you'll see what I mean."

I read through a letter, a noble letter, and, of course, I understood. The letter was signed "Miriam," not Mary Lucas, but in every line it bore out the conception I had made of the girl. I put it down quietly:

*The story is, indeed, founded upon an actual situation.—Authors' Note.

"I couldn't possibly let her know the ugly truth," said Strickland.

"No," I agreed. "But I already knew that, Eddie. It's exactly how we all felt. We couldn't tell her the truth about Legh. And yet what are we to do?"

"We must get over it some way."

"Yes, you're Miriam. I didn't remember you, but now I see you and you're Miriam."

"Don't you remember I'm—I'm Mary Lucas?"

"No." Strickland's quiet, reserved manner helped him, but for all that he was superb. "No. I don't remember that. There was—they tell me there was some sort of accident, and then I had fever. And the things that went before that have gone."

Strickland would do. What could be do? How could he straighten things out? I jumped forward. Then Strickland, who had been standing still, staring at her in a strange, fascinated way, moved forward a little with a sort of hesitancy, and he said in a sort of whisper, as though not sure of himself:

"Miriam! Isn't it Miriam?"

I gasped. I could hardly believe my ears.

Well, he stepped right into the scoundrel Legh's shoes, became without a visible hesitation her lover. And it looks in cold blood, it all went smoothly. It was like Strickland all over to step into the breach like that, to save the day with that fine, magnificent gesture. And yet I don't think it was so hard for him. He admired her, he thought her fine already, and she was beautiful—I think he more than half acted as his heart dictated.

raged her feelings by wearing a white waistcoat with a dinner jacket. She continued to look at him dumbly, and then uttered a sort of strangled, hysterical laugh.

"Those legs!" she cried. "Those legs!"

Vincent Jopp flushed darkly. Even the strongest and most silent of us have our weaknesses, and my employer's was the rooted idea that he looked well in knickerbockers, and my employer's was the rooted idea that he looked well in knicker-

It was Jopp's opponent who spoke. There was a strange, set look on his face, the look of a man whose back is against the wall. Ten down on the morning's round, he had drawn on his reserves of courage and was determined to meet the inevitable bravely.

Vincent Jopp nodded absently, then turned to me.

He moved to the second tee.

"Now, that young man," said Mrs. Jane Jukes Jopp, indicating her late husband's blushing antagonist, "is quite right to wear knickerbockers. He can carry them off. But a glance in the mirror must have shown you that you——"

"I'm sure you're feverish, Vincent," said Mrs. Agnes Parsons Jopp solicitously.

"Pshaw!" cried Mrs. June Jukes Jopp, triumphantly. "I've been trying to remember what I say this, but, nevertheless, it is true. Where the average man goes wrong is in making the game difficult for himself. Observe the nonplayer, the man who walks round with you for the sake of the fresh air.

He will hole out with a single carefree flick of his umbrella the twenty foot putt over which you would ponder and hesitate for a full minute before sending it right off the line. Put a driver in his hands, and he pastes the ball into the next county without a thought. It is only when he takes to the game in earnest that he becomes self-conscious and anxious and tops his shots, even as you and I. A man who could retain through his golfing career the almost scornful confidence of the nonplayer would be unbeatable. Fortunately, such an attitude of mind is beyond the scope of human nature.

It was not, however, beyond the scope of Vincent Jopp, the superman. Vincent Jopp was, I am inclined to think, the only golfer who ever approached the game in a spirit of Pure Reason. I have read of men who, never having swum in their lives, studied a text-book on their way down to the swimming bath, mastered its contents, and dived in and won the big race.

In just such a spirit did Vincent Jopp start to play golf. He committed McHoots' hints to memory, and then went out on the links and put them into practice. He came to the tee with a clear picture in his mind of what he had to do, and he did it. He was not intimidated, like the average novice, by the thought that if he pulled in his hands he would slice, or, if he gripped too tightly with the right, he would pull. Pulling in the hands was an error, so he did not pull in his hands. Gripping too tightly was a defect, so he did not grip too tightly. With that weird concentration which had served him so well in business he did precisely what he had set out to do—no less and no more. Golf with Vincent Jopp was an exact science.

THE annals of the game are studded with the names of those who have made rapid progress in their first season. Colonel Quill, we read in our Vardon, took up golf at the age of 56, and by devising an ingenious machine consisting of a fishing line and a sawn down bedpost was enabled to keep his head so still that he became a scratch player before the end of the year. But no one, I imagine, except Vincent Jopp, has ever achieved scratch on his first morning on the links.

The main difference, we are told, between the amateur and the professional golfer is the fact that the latter is always aiming at the pin, while the former has in his mind a vague picture of getting somewhere reasonably near it. Vincent Jopp invariably went for the pin. He tried to hole out from anywhere inside two hundred and twenty yards. The only occasion on which I ever heard him express any chagrin or disappointment was during the afternoon round of his first day out, when from the tee on the two hundred and eighty yard seventh he laid his ball within six inches of the hole.

"A marvelous shot!" I cried, genuinely stirred.

"Too much to the right," said Vincent Jopp, frowning.

He went from triumph to triumph. He won the monthly medal in May, June, July, August, and September. Toward the end of May he was heard to complain that Wissahicky Glen was not a sporting course. The greens committee sat up night after night trying to adjust his handicap so as to give other members an outside chance against him. The golf experts of the daily papers wrote columns about his play. And it was pretty generally considered throughout the country that it would be a pure formality for any one else to enter against him in the amateur championship, an opinion which was borne out when he got through into the final without losing a hole. A safe man to have betted on, you would have said. But mark the sequel.

The amateur championship was held that year at Detroit. I had accompanied my employer there; for, though engaged on this nerve wearing contest, he refused to allow his business to be interfered with. As he had indicated in his schedule, he was busy at the time cornering wheat; and it was my task to combine the duties of caddy and secretary. Each day I accompanied him round the links with my notebook and his bag of clubs, and the progress of his various matches was somewhat complicated by the arrival of a stream of telegraph boys bearing important messages.

He would read these between the strokes and dictate replies to me, never, however, taking more than the five minutes allowed by the rules for an interval between strokes. I am inclined to think that it was this that put the finishing touch on his opponents' discomfiture. It is not soothing for a nervous man to have the game hung up on the green while his adversary dictates to his caddy a letter beginning, "Yours of the 11th inst. received and contents noted. In reply would state——" This sort of thing puts a man off his game.

I WAS resting in the lobby of the hotel after a strenuous day's work, when I found that I was being paged. I answered the summons, and was informed that a lady wished to see me. Her card bore the name "Miss Amelia Merridew." Amelia. The name seemed familiar. Then I remembered. Amelia was the name of the girl Vincent Jopp intended to marry, the fourth of the long line of Mrs. Jopps. I hurried to present myself and found a tall, slim girl, who was plainly laboring under a considerable agitation.

"Miss Merridew?" I said.

"Yes," she murmured. "My name will be strange to you."

"Am I right," I queried, "in supposing that you are the lady to whom Mr. Jopp——"

"I am! I am!" she replied. "And, O, what shall I do?"

"Kindly give me particulars," I said, taking out my pad from force of habit.

She hesitated a moment, as if afraid to speak.

"You are caddying for Mr. Jopp in the final tomorrow?"

"I am."

"Then could you—would you mind—would it be giving you too much trouble if I asked you to shout 'Boo' at him when he is making his stroke, if he looks like winning?"

I was perplexed.

"I don't understand."

"I see that I must tell you all. I am sure you will treat what I say as absolutely confidential."

"Certainly."

"I am provisionally engaged to Mr. Jopp."

"Provisionally?"

She gulped.

"Let me tell you my story. Mr. Jopp asked me to marry him, and I would rather do anything on earth than marry him. But how could I say 'No!' with those awful eyes of his boring me through? I knew that if I said 'No!' he would argue me out of it in two minutes. I had an idea. I gathered that he had never played golf, so I told him that I would marry him if he won the amateur championship this year. And now I find that he has been a secret golfer all along, and, what is more, a plus man! It isn't fair."

"He was not a golfer when you made that condition," I said. "He took up the game on the following day."

"Impossible! How could he have become as good as he is in this short time?"

"Because he is Vincent Jopp! In his lexicon there is no such word as impossible."

She shuddered.

"What a man! But I can't marry him," she cried. "I want to marry somebody else. O, won't you help me? Do shout 'Boo!' at him when he is starting his down swing!"

I shook my head.

"It would take more than a single boo to put Vincent Jopp off his stroke."

"But won't you try it?"

"I cannot. My duty is to my employer."

"O, do!"

"No, no. Duty is duty, and paramount with me. Besides, I have a bet of a hundred dollars down on him to cop."

The stricken girl uttered a faint moan and tottered away.

I was in our suite shortly after dinner that night, going over some of the notes I had made that day, when the telephone rang. Jopp was out at the time, taking a short stroll with his after dinner cigar. I unhooked the receiver, and a female voice spoke.

"Is that Mr. Jopp?"

"Mr. Jopp's secretary speaking. Mr. Jopp is out."

"O, it's nothing important. Will you say that Mrs. Luella Mainprice Jopp called up to wish him luck. I shall be on the course tomorrow to see him win the final."

He possessed an overwhelming confidence in himself.

I returned to my notes. Soon afterward the telephone rang again.

"Vincent, dear?"

"Mr. Jopp's secretary speaking."

"O, will you say that Mrs. Jane Jukes Jopp called up to wish him luck. I shall be there tomorrow to see him play."

I resumed my work. I had hardly started when the telephone rang for the third time.

"Mr. Jopp?"

"Mr. Jopp's secretary speaking."

"This is Mrs. Agnes Parsons Jopp. I just called up to wish him luck. I shall be looking on tomorrow."

I shifted my work nearer to the telephone table, so as to be ready for the next call. I had heard that Vincent Jopp had only been married three times, but you never know.

Presently Jopp came in.

"Anybody called up?" he asked.

"Nobody on business. An assortment of your wives were on the wire wishing you luck. They asked me to say that they will be on the course tomorrow."

For a moment it seemed to me that the man's iron repose was shaken.

"Luella?" he asked.

"She was the first."

"Jane?"

"And Jane."

"And Agnes?"

"Agnes," I said, "is right."

"H'm!" said Vincent Jopp. And for the first time since I had known him I thought he was ill at ease.

The day of the final dawned bright and clear. At least, I was not awake at the time to see, but I suppose it did; for at 9 o'clock, when I came down to breakfast, the sun was shining brightly. The first eighteen holes were to be played before lunch, starting at 11. Until twenty minutes before the hour Vincent Jopp kept me busy taking dictation, partly on matters connected with his wheat deal, and partly on a signed article dealing with the final, entitled "How I Won." At 11 sharp we were out on the first tee.

Jopp's opponent was a nice looking young man, but obviously nervous. He giggled in a distraught sort of way as he shook hands with my employer.

"Well, may the best man win," he said.

"I have arranged to do so," replied Jopp curtly, and started to address his ball.

There was a large crowd at the tee, and somewhere on the outskirts of this crowd there came suddenly a musical "Boo!" It rang out in the clear morning air like a bugle.

I had been right in my estimate of Vincent Jopp. His forceful stroke never wavered. Squarely on the meat the head of his club struck the ball, dispatching it a good two hundred yards down the middle of the fairway. As we left the tee I saw Amelia Merridew being led away with bowed head by two members of the greens committee. Poor girl! My heart bled for her. And yet, after all, Fate had been kind in removing her from the scene, even in custody, for she could hardly have borne to watch the proceedings. Vincent Jopp made rings round his antagonist. Hole after hole he won in his remorseless, machinelike way, until when lunch time came at the end of the eighteenth he was ten up. All the other holes had been halved.

IT was after lunch, as we made our way to the first tee, that the advance guard of the Mrs. Jopps appeared, in the person of Luella Mainprice Jopp, a kittenish little woman with blonde hair and a Pekingese dog. I remembered reading in the papers that she had divorced my employer for persistent and aggravated mental cruelty, calling witnesses to bear out her statement that he had said he did not like her in pink, and that on two separate occasions he had insisted on her dog eating the leg of a chicken instead of the breast; but Time, the great healer, seemed to have removed all bitterness, and she greeted him affectionately.

"Wassums going to win great big championship against nasty rough strong man?" she said.

"Such," said Vincent Jopp, "is my intention. It was kind of you, Luella, to trouble to come and watch me. I wonder if you know Mrs. Agnes Parsons Jopp?" he said courteously, indicating a kind looking motherly woman who had just come up. "How are you, Agnes?"

"If you had asked me that question this morning, Vincent," replied Mrs. Agnes Parsons Jopp, "I should have been obliged to say that I felt far from well. I had an odd throbbing feeling in the left elbow, and I am sure my temperature was above the normal. But this afternoon I am a little better. How are you, Vincent?"

Although she had, as I recalled from the reports of the case, been compelled some years earlier to request the court to sever her marital relations with Vincent Jopp on the ground of calculated and inhuman brutality, in that he had callously refused, in spite of her pleadings, to take Old Doctor Bennett's Tonic Swamp Juice three times a day, her voice, as she spoke, was kind and even anxious. Badly as this man had treated her—and I remember that several of the jury had been unable to restrain their tears when she was on the witness stand giving her evidence—there still seemed to linger some remnants of the old affection.

"I am quite well, thank you, Agnes," said Vincent Jopp.

"Are you wearing your liver pad?"

A frown flitted across my employer's strong face.

"I am not wearing my liver pad," he replied brusquely.

"O, Vincent! How rash of you!"

He was about to speak, when a sudden exclamation from his rear checked him. A genial looking woman in a sports coat was standing there, eyeing him with a sort of humorous terror.

"Well, Jane," he said.

I gathered that this was Mrs. Jane Jukes Jopp, the wife who had divorced him for systematic and ingrowing fiendishness on the ground that he had repeatedly out-

The Romance of a Million Dollars

By ELIZABETH DEJEANS

"You'll do," said Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent with pleased brevity.

"May I have the Amy Bell put in shape, Aunt Bulah?" West asked. "She used to be a lively little boat."

"My uncle used to say that if one wanted to drown one's enemy, the Amy Bell would be a good boat to choose," Breck remarked. "There was some mistake made when she was built."

Marie could not help looking at him, his voice was so deep and even, as cold as deep frozen water. And she noticed West's face; the glow left his eyes. He looked at Breck as he had looked at him that evening in the garage, calmly and gravely, and Breck returned his look, a flash of the eye, like the glint of steel.

It was Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent who spoke, restrained anger in every word. "You have a habit of quoting your uncle—it's a little out of place."

"My uncle was right about most things," Breck returned in the same even way. He did not look at Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent as he looked at West; he looked at his plate.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said nothing; an expression of pain crossed her face. Until Breck spoke she had looked pleased. She had accomplished an entire surprise, and Marie had borne herself well. For the first time Marie glanced at Bella. It seemed to Marie an utterly unreal occurrence, the passionate embrace she had witnessed the day before and the flushed face Bella had lifted from Colfax's shoulder. Evidently there were unguessed depths of passion in Bella. Undoubtedly Breck's immobility covered as secret and as passionate a nature. Marie felt a shrinking dislike for Bella. Her long body, gracefully carried head, and haughty profile reminded her of Mrs. Smith. She seemed to her the same type of woman, secret and outwardly cold, but brilliantly beautiful if she chose to make herself so; and passionate to a degree, for the face Bella had lifted from Colfax's shoulder had been a revelation.

WEST drew a rose from the vase in the center of the table, dried the stem, removed the thorns, and offered it to Marie. He said nothing, only looked at her in an appealing way that made her drop her eyes She held the rose, not looking at it. It was going to be difficult for her with West doing such things while Breck looked on with that menacing glint in his eyes. He seemed to hate West. The way in which he looked at him frightened her, and yet, when Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had spoken so sharply to Breck, she had glanced at him and his face had made her feel like crying. It was carven and still, so terribly unhappy, as if he realized fully the aversion his family felt for him, and steeled himself against it, enduring it with a certain cold defiance.

Marie was glad when they rose from the table. "We have coffee in the library," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said to Marie. "You can go to your room afterwards, if you want to, child—you've had a hard day." She took Marie's hand, drew it within her arm, and led the way into the library.

"Find a corner there on the divan," she said reassuringly, and with a note of warning, "West, the divan's not for you—you can enjoy your cachou in a chair just as well."

"Very well," he answered quietly.

But before he retreated to the chair and took out his little gold cachou case, he placed the cushions for Marie and turned his chair so that he could look at her. Bella went to a distant lamp and took out her knitting, and Breck stood backed against the end of the mantel shelf, facing them all. It was exactly as it had been on that first day, yet how entirely different Marie thought. She did not feel like the same girl. That time seemed a hundred years ago. Now she felt a painful interest in the three seated there.

Marie pretended to drink her coffee and West took the cup from her. Then, in spite of Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's warning, he sat down beside Marie. "I am going over to Huntington in the morning," he said. "Will you go with me? It'll make the ride a pleasure."

Marie's answer was involuntary. "O, no, monsieur! It is most kind," she added quickly. "Another day I shall like to go, but tomorrow I think Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent will wish me to drive her." There was an appeal to Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent in the refusal.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent smiled to herself. Then every one stiffened at Breck's abrupt remark: "Look the roadster over well before you ride in it, Marie Angouleme." He leveled a gleaming look at West, then, with an even, "Good-night," he turned and left the room. Marie saw him go up the stairs.

Bella watched his going, her knitting suspended. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent crimsoned with anger, and Marie sat breathing quickly, terribly startled. Breck had spoken as if he meant to frighten her, and he had looked defiance at West. West seemed to be thinking more of Marie's distress than of his own annoyance, though he looked stern enough.

"Don't let yourself be disturbed by Breck's speeches," he said to Marie. "He's queer and we can't help it. The best we can do is not to notice the things he says and does. I'm sorry for him at times, in spite of everything, for he makes his own hell, Breck does—he's a mystery to me." He rose from Marie's side and replenished the fire, muttering an impatient sigh. "Lord—!"

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent was restraining herself with difficulty. "Depravity is a form of insanity, I suppose," she said bitterly.

West had straightened and a smile chased the gloom from his face. "Never mind, Aunt Bulah," he said cheerfully. "You've managed to introduce a bit of sunshine into the situation," and he looked at Marie appealingly. "If you won't ride with me tomorrow, will you walk with me, Miss Marie?"

He was persistent, Marie thought. If only she did not feel so wretched and worried, she would like him. He had done everything he could to help her through the evening, but he showed too plainly that he cared for her a great deal, and it made her heart ache the worse. He looked extremely handsome standing there by the fire with the color in his cheeks and his eyes bright; such a contrast to Breck's grim immobility. Breck had frightened her. There was something wrong with his mind, and that might explain everything. She wanted to go to her room and think about it. She wanted to be nice to West, too, appreciative and friendly. She was too much distressed and excited to be in the least coquettish or elusive. Marie felt as if she would never laugh again.

"If your aunt permits that I should walk with you, monsieur, I shall be glad to go," she said with a rather wan smile. It seemed a propitious moment for escape, and Marie rose. "And now, madame, I think I shall go to my room, so I say good night to every one," and she curtesied to the three, even to Bella, in her distant corner.

It was a quaint good night, an old fashioned dignity clothed in modern firefly garments and surmounted by a gravely troubled little face. She was so utterly without self-consciousness and so anxious to please. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent lost her angry flush. "Don't worry about anything, child," she said kindly. "Go to bed and sleep and wake up happy. We'll arrange about tomorrow when tomorrow comes."

West's eyes dwelt on Marie, and when she moved toward the hall he started forward impulsively. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's warning halted him: "West!"

"O, I know," he muttered. With an impatient glance in Bella's direction, he attacked the fire instead of speaking.

Possibly to give him the oportunity, Bella gathered up her knitting and with a quiet "good night" followed Marie upstairs, knitting as she went. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent sat on, watching in a satisfied way West's aimless thrusts at the fire. It was a rare thing for West to lose his composure; she had upset him pretty thoroughly. He would not speak to her until he was, outwardly at least, calm. They were all alike in that, these three Dunbarton-Kents.

West straightened finally and faced her. "So you've changed your mind, Aunt Bulah?" he asked quietly.

Her eyes twinkled. "No. I've been of the same mind from the beginning. I was dumbfounded at first—I didn't know you had so little worldliness and so much sense. Then all I wanted to know was that you were sufficiently in earnest. You've convinced me of that. I've taken her in and I intend that everybody shall recognize her. I may be a fat old woman, but I can put anything that's half way decent on its social feet—you know that—so, as far as society's concerned, your way's clear."

"I don't know how to thank you," West said gratefully.

He bent impulsively to kiss her hand, but Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent drew it away.

raged her feelings by wearing a white waistcoat with a dinner jacket. She continued to look at him dumbly, and then uttered a sort of strangled, hysterical laugh.

"Those legs!" she cried. "Those legs!"

Vincent Jopp flushed darkly. Even the strongest and most silent of us have our weaknesses, and my employer's was the rooted idea that he looked well in knickerbockers. It was not my place to try to dissuade him, but there was no doubt that they did not suit him. Nature, in bestowing upon him a massive head and a jutting chin, had forgotten to finish him off at the other end. Vincent Jopp's legs were skinny.

"You poor dear man!" went on Mrs. Jane Jukes Jopp. "What practical joker ever lured you into appearig in public in knickerbockers?"

"I don't object to the knickerbockers," said Mrs. Agnes Parsons Jopp, "but when he foolishly comes out in quite a strong east wind without his liver pad——"

"Little Tinky-Ting don't need no liver pad, he don't," said Mrs. Luella Mainprice Jopp, addressing the animal in her arms, "because he was his muzzer's pet, he was!"

I WAS standing quite near to Vincent Jopp, and at this moment I saw a bead of perspiration spring out on his forehead, and into his steely eyes there came a positively hunted look. I could understand and sympathize. Napoleon himself would have wilted if he had found himself in the midst of a trio of females, one talking baby talk, another fussing about his health, and the third making derogatory observations on his lower limbs. Vincent Jopp was becoming unstrung.

"May as well be starting, shall we?"

It was Jopp's opponent who spoke. There was a strange, set look on his face, the look of a man whose back is against the wall. Ten down on the morning's round, he had drawn on his reserves of courage and was determined to meet the inevitable bravely.

Vincent Jopp nodded absently, then turned to me.

"Keep those women away from me," he whispered tensely. "They'll put me off my stroke!"

"Put you off your stroke!" I exclaimed incredulously.

"Yes, me! How the deuce can I concentrate with people babbling about liver pads, and—and knickerbockers all round me? Keep them away!"

He started to address his ball, and there was a weak uncertainty in the way he did it that prepared me for what was to come. His club rose, wavered, fell; and the ball, badly topped, trickled two feet and sank into a cuppy lie.

"Is that good or bad?" inquired Mrs. Luella Mainprice Jopp.

A sort of desperate hope gleamed in the eye of the other competitor in the final. He swung with renewed vigor. His ball sang through the air and lay within chip shot distance of the green.

"At the very least," said Mrs. Agnes Parsons Jopp, "I hope, Vincent, that you are wearing flannel next your skin."

I heard Jopp give a stifled groan as he took his spoon from the bag. He made a gallant effort to retrieve the lost ground, but the ball struck a stone and bounded away into the long grass to the side of the green. His opponent won the hole.

He moved to the second tee.

"Now, that young man," said Mrs. Jane Jukes Jopp, indicating her late husband's blushing antagonist, "is quite right to wear knickerbockers. He can carry them off. But a glance in the mirror must have shown you that you——"

"I'm sure you're feverish, Vincent," said Mrs. Agnes Parsons Jopp solicitously. "You're quite flushed. There is a wild gleam in your eyes."

"Muzzer's pet got little buttons of eyes, that don't never have no wild gleam in zem, because he's muzzer's own darling, he was!" said Mrs. Luella Mainprice Jopp.

A hollow groan escaped Vincent Jopp's ashen lips.

I NEED not recount the play hole by hole, I think. There are some subjects that are too painful. It was pitiful to watch Vincent Jopp in his downfall. By the end of the first nine his lead had been reduced to one, and his antagonist, rendered a new man by success, was playing magnificent golf. On the next hole he drew level. Then with a superhuman effort Jopp contrived to halve the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth. It seemed as though his iron will might still assert itself, but on the fourteenth the end came.

He had driven a superb ball, leaving his opponent away by a full fifty yards. The latter played a good second to within a few feet of the green. And then, as Vincent Jopp was shaping for his stroke, Luella Mainprice gave tongue.

"Vincent!"

"Well?"

"Vincent, that other man—bad man—not playing fair. When your back was turned just now, he gave his ball a great bang. I was watching him!"

"At any rate," said Mrs. Agnes Parsons Jopp, "I do hope, when the game is over, Vincent, that you will remember to cool slowly."

"Flesho!" cried Mrs. June Jukes Jopp, triumphantly. "I've been trying to remember the name all the afternoon. I saw about it in one of the papers. The advertisements speak most highly of it. You take it before breakfast and again before retiring, and they guarantee it to produce firm, healthy flesh on the most sparsely covered limbs in next to no time. Now, will you remember to get a bottle tonight? It comes in two sizes, the dollar-fifty (or large) size and the smaller at seventy-five cents. Ex-President Taft writes that he used it regularly for years."

Vincent Jopp uttered a quavering moan, and his hand, as he took the mashie from his bag, was trembling like an aspen.

Ten minutes later he was on his way back to the clubhouse, a beaten man.

And so (concluded the Oldest Member) you see that in golf there is no such thing as soft snap. You can never be certain of the finest player. Anything may happen to the greatest expert at any stage of the game. In a recent competition George Duncan took eleven shots over a hole which eighteen-handicap men generally do in five. No! Back horses or go down to Wall street and try to take it away from Mr. Morgan, and I will applaud you as a shrewd and cautious financier. But to bet at golf is pure gambling."

AT THE AVE MARIA BREEZE

away. The real story was pieced together, and it was realized what Vaughan had done, and the police sent out notices for his arrest. He was taken when he came back to the river—higher up, you know. The girl had been waiting for this chance, I fancy. She had tasted the real quality of Vaughan's brutality—also there was the death of her brothers. I think she had been waiting all the time until she got within hail of a real police post—and then she denounced him.

"Well, he was taken. Vaughan tried the usual game, tried to slip a bundle of notes into the hands of the men who guarded him, but this time it did not act. It was a bad case; the authorities were on their mettle; also Strickland was behind them. No bribe could free Vaughan. So he tried to break and run."

"He was sabered?" asked Wallace, who at least knew the methods of the police.

"Shot in the back of the head, head blown off. And that was the end of Vaughan."

"Deserved, but too late," commented Duncan. "Too late for poor old Eddie, anyhow. He squared the headman in cash—but it takes more than cash to square a bad name."

"And Vaughan was a thorough bad hat, they found, eh?" said Slater.

"O, after," sneered Duncan. "These things do come out too later. He was just a common blackguard. He was wanted in Rio, St. Paulo, Para, Manaos—a host of places. He was a real mean white. His criminal record goes back years; some of his crimes, they tell me, were particularly vile. Poor old Eddie; his kind heart served him badly over Vaughan."

"I was going to ask the reason why Strickland employed the chap," said Waller.

"Another moral lesson, Waller," I grinned. "Beware of the kind heart. It was exactly that that caused Strickland to make that break. Vaughan came here down on his uppers, with little money and, as he said, without a relative or friend to help him. Well, Strickland began at the hard end of life, too. I suppose Strickland saw quite a lot of himself in Vaughan in addition to the resemblance in features. He seemed to have had the feelings of a slightly older brother. He helped him. They became, indeed, warm friends."

"Well, but we all liked him, too, didn't we?" protested Slater.

"And why not?" demanded Duncan. "Rogues don't go about carrying their criminal records on their sleeves—and decent chaps don't pry into one's past. Socially he was no different from scores of men."

"'Cept he was better company," added Anscombe. "It was quite easy to like the fellow a lot. Strickland did, anyhow."

"Yes, he did," said I. "If Vaughan had only run straight he might have been a made man. But he couldn't. He was just rotten to the backbone. That friendliness of his that made us like him—that was part of his stock in trade. I've read papers about him—he made a business of it. It wasn't real, it was his particularly mean way of winning the confidence of people he thought worth robbing. You can see how he worked even in this case. Take his attitude to us all, beginning with little Rickman down at Umary. Rickman's as decent and attractive a little chap as ever breathed. We all like him—Vaughan treated him like dirt. Why? Nothing in him worth robbing. How did the swine treat us? I leave it to you, but I feel that his friendship with us was graduated—the more we were worth the more companionable he was. And he was most companionable to Strickland, the man most worth robbing."

"God, yes," murmured Duncan. "Now you put it like that I see it. The cur! And poor Eddie, he treated it as real, that friendship anyhow."

"He did. These dwellers on the higher plane, these fine, lonely souled men—they give tremendously when they think they have found the heaven sent pal."

"The dirty, mean, yellow cur," mouthed Duncan slowly and solemnly. "Who and what was he at home, Sleath?"

"His real name was Claude Legh," I answered. "And, as far as I can find out from Strickland (who alone seems to have the facts), he was a nobody from nowhere, and there are no blood connections."

AFTER that we drifted into silence and cigaret smoke. The subject was exhausted. And then, as we sat hot and somnolent, this thing that I wouldn't have believed if I had seen it in print came about.

A woman with a caboloo tout came drifting along the pavement. The half breed said something to her in broken English which I did not catch and she stopped in front of the café looking towards us.

And then we saw the amazing fact—she was English.

English and a girl. A slim thing, looking taller than she was because she was slim and upstanding. In the light from the café we saw her face, a fine face, a sort of long oval, poised with a touch of pride upon a slender neck. In spite of sunbrown she gave a suggestion of the ethereal; there was something delicate and yet noble, something madonnalike about that face. The heavy dark hair massed about it seemed to give it a spiritual glow. The blue, clear eyes looked at us with a candid high purpose.

And yet about her was a suggestion of timidity. Hard to explain that. She seemed so courageous, so tenacious, and yet there seemed to be an air of drawing back always. It was as though purpose and will had dominated a retiring and reserved nature but had not eliminated it. She stood there looking at us.

Of course, she was an amazing thing. That a white woman of any sort should be in Cachimbo—and by that I mean a woman used to civilization—was astounding. That an Englishwoman should be there was incredible. It is not that Cachimbo is bad; it is that it is almost unattainable. It sits in a little pocket of utter remoteness. Even determined travelers of the male species rarely get there. It is unknown; it will always be unknown to the great mass. There are no attractions there save work.

She stood there looking at us and we gaped a little—we could not help it—at her. Slater whispered as though recalling something.

"O, yes, I heard. Some one told me that a woman came up on the Matajos boat. Of course, I didn't believe it. Came in this evening."

The woman entered the Café Paz. She had dismissed the tout. She went to a table, stood half hesitating in that curious manner of hers, then swung about with forced decision, came to us.

We all scrambled to our feet anxiously, each of us trying to get some decency into our woefully 'hot weather' kit. She stood before us blushing, hesitating. She said, "You're—you're the Englishmen?" And we all said with one voice that we were.

"Mr. Patrick Sleath?" she asked, as though she were willing herself to talk. The others fell back, I went forward. "You're—you're the consul?" I tried to remember the polite words I should utter. I didn't remember one. She went on. "I went to your house—and office."

"I'm—I'm really sorry. There isn't—isn't much consulting to do here. Soon done, I mean, and I—that is, Miss——"

"Lucas—Mary Lucas," she answered. Then I pulled myself together.

"You must forgive us—our confusion and our costume, Miss Lucas. It's startling to meet an Englishwoman in a place like this. But I assure you that I—all of us—will be delighted to help you in any way possible. May I introduce the white colony?"

I INTRODUCED everybody, and we sat down. We were all conscious of her charm, all conscious, too, that somehow she was ready to run away from us, and that only her brave will kept her facing us. We ordered coffee. She looked round at us, smiling with that shy defensiveness of hers. "You said the colony—the whole colony?"

"Except Rickman, who is down river, and Bates and Penney, who are at their stations, and Strickland—Edmund Strickland—who has gone up river for a day or so before leaving for good. There's not room for many white men here, you know, Miss Lucas."

"Then it would be easier to—to find a white man," she said, and she looked from one to the other pleadingly. And at those words I think we all felt something—a sense of the ominous. Anyhow, not one of us seemed inclined to answer, and it was after a pause that I said:

"You're looking for some one, Miss Lucas?"

"I came up specially to find some one."

Again I felt that chill. I covered it by saying, with forced geniality:

"O, well, if anybody has come within rumor distance of us we should have heard of him. Any assistance we can give you, we'll give gladly."

"You are kind," she said. "I am looking for a man named Claude Legh."

No, we didn't start—somehow, incredible though it seems, I think we were ready for that fateful name. We guessed it was the one, for a sense of foreboding had us in its grip. But, though we did not start, it was as though a chill hand had clutched at the heart of all. We couldn't answer her. We sat rigid, pretending to be engrossed in other things. And I knew instinctively that the others had withdrawn, were leaving it to me as a problem impossible for them to face. And I heard myself mumbling:

"Claude Legh. Claude Legh. Hmp! Claude Legh, now." It was all I could do, but Duncan congratulated me afterward, telling me that my pretense at racking my memory was brilliant and saved the situation. I didn't seem brilliant to myself. It seemed to me hopeless, until suddenly I recalled that her name was Lucas. She was Legh's sister, perhaps. He may have been using Legh as an alias. With that I blurted:

"No, I can't place any one with the name of Legh. But was that his name? Men sometimes change their names out here. Was he your——?" And then I saw an engagement ring on her hand, and its significance at once leaped at me; so that she had no need to answer. And, in fact, she did not. She said simply:

"It is the only name I know. I don't think he would change his name."

"But—how did you follow him up here?" blurted Anscombe, then saved himself by adding: "I mean, if we haven't heard of a man of that name, how—how did you come

"May I have the Amy Bell put in shape, Aunt Bulah?" West asked. "She used to be a lively little boat."

"My uncle used to say that if one wanted to drown one's enemy, the Amy Bell would be a good boat to choose," Breck remarked. "There was some mistake made when she was built."

The Romance of a Million Dollars

by ELIZABETH DEJEANS

THE STORY THUS FAR

DUNBARTON-KENT'S millions have been left with his widow, in trust for his two nephews, Breck and West, and his niece, Bella. They are to divide the fortune provided none commits a crime—and Breck has been reared as a thief! Mrs. Brent-Olwin's jewels disappear and $100,000 and some jewels are stolen from beneath Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's pillow. Breck denies all. Into this atmosphere of suspicion walks Marie Angouleme, French-Canadian war heroine, to become chauffeuse for Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent. She wins over the entire household and West proposes but she refuses him. Breck's secret is revealed to her by another nephew, Allen Colfax, when she finds him embracing Bella Dunbarton-Kent, and she discovers that a mysterious "Mrs. Smith," who has built a "spite house" near Kent Park, is a mysterious woman in sables who attempted to strangle her. Colfax reveals that "Mrs. Smith" calls herself Mrs. Kendall Smith, and that "Ken" Smith is the name under which Breck was known to the police. Colfax tells the girl that Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's only desire now is to recover the money and gems, force Breck to leave, and protect the family name. Marie suddenly realizes that she loves Breck hopelessly. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent asks her to doff her boy's garb as chauffeuse, "to turn girl again," and become a member of the family. Marie consents.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

Veiled Warnings.

IT was her last night in her garage home, and Marie had been certain that she would not sleep. She had wanted to think, for the day seemed a jumble of occurences with the one fact outstanding: the painful history Colfax had given her. She had wanted to think clearly of this future Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had sprung upon her.

But sleep came before she began to think; in brain and body she was exhausted. She slept heavily, and waked early to a feeling of lassitude. She dragged herself out of bed, and prepared for her bath. Then she paused to listen to steps on the stairs. Her nerves were awry, for she jumped when some one knocked on her door. "Who—is it?" she asked with a caught breath.

"Willetts. I'm sorry to disturb you, but are you all right?" he asked. There was anxiety in his question, though he had pitched his voice to a cheerful note.

"Yes, monsieur—but why——?"

"Is that puppy with you?" he interrupted.

"No. Is she not in the garage still?" When she had come into the garage the night before, after her talk with Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, Willetts had shown her the dog replete with supper and curled up in a basket.

"She's disappeared," Willetts said. "It gets me—the garage was locked up tight."

Marie had thought swiftly. She slipped on her kimono and gathered up her hair, then opened the door. "If the little dog has escaped, we cannot help it, monsieur. I think I would not trouble about it," she said quietly.

Willetts bulked large in the passageway. He smiled at Marie, but his eyes were keen. "Even if the animal made an astral body of itself, it's of no great importance," he declared pleasantly. "I wanted to make sure she wasn't up here, that's all—I didn't like for you to lose your pet. Did you sleep all right last night? How are you feeling this morning?"

"I slept well, only I feel a little tired." It was Breck who had taken the spaniel away; Marie felt certain of it.

Willetts looked at the little figure swathed in a kimono; there were circles about her eyes and she was colorless. "You look as if you hadn't slept much," he persisted. "Did anything frighten you in the night?"

Marie turned a shade whiter. Had Breck done more than merely steal back the dog. Perhaps he had done something dreadful again. "No. What has happened?" she asked.

"Nothing—nothing at all," Willetts declared reassuringly. "You look ill, that's the reason I asked. You want to take good care of yourself, and don't you worry about the dog—she's got out some way and made for Colfax Hall; she's all right enough. I oughtn't to have bothered you and I won't keep you talking," he added pleasantly, and retreated down the stairs.

But as soon as he was out of Marie's sight, he frowned angrily. The only way that puppy could have been removed was through the narrow windows up near the ceiling of the garage. It was a slick and swift and noiseless climber who could reach those windows while he, Willetts, was circling about the garage all night. The person who took that dog must have used a rope ladder or something like it to let himself down into the garage. Breck was capable of the feat, but the puzzling thing was that he had seen Breck's silhouette against the window shade of his room, an outline seated at the desk, until morning came. Who then had gotten into the garage in that slick way—and taken the puppy, of all things? Willetts pondered the thing.

IN her room, Marie went on nervously with her bathing and dressing. Why had Breck taken the dog away? It was dreadful, a whole family kept in terror by him. How could a man bear to live with every action of his watched, knowing that he was suspected, loathed and feared by his family, and knowing that at any moment discovery might come from without.

Then Marie noticed for the first time, on her pile of hairpins, a pistol. It was a small but effective looking weapon, which a woman could easily carry and handle, and, tied to it was a note. Marie stared at the pistol for some minutes, then untied the note with trembling fingers.

It was a single line, not written but neatly printed: "CARRY THIS WHEREVER YOU GO—YOU MAY NEED IT."

Marie did not touch the pistol. She went to her bed and sat down. Some one had been in her room while she slept and had put the pistol there. It must have been Breck.

Gradually she thought it out. "Because you are in danger," he had said when he had begged her to leave Kent House. "There are those who do not mean well by you." Breck would not harm her, she was determined to believe that, but if there were others implicated in the Brant-Olwin and the Kent House thefts; if, after the commotion in the park, Mrs. Smith suspected that she, Marie, was the girl whom she had so nearly killed on the train, and that Marie had recognized her, then, certainly she was in danger, for that woman was capable of anything.

Breck had wanted her to leave Kent House so she would not be harmed; there was much good in him. Why he had given her the spaniel and then had taken it away she could not imagine, but evidently he now thought she was going to stay at Kent House, and he had given her the pistol secretly that she might protect herself. It was strange, yet it was quite true that a man may know a woman to be wicked and at the same time be enthralled by her. Mrs. Smith was such a woman—a brilliant snake!

Marie wanted to believe that good struggled with evil in Breck Dunbarton-Kent; it brought her a certain comfort. It might well be that by entering her room and leaving the pistol with that warning message he meant to frighten her away from Kent House, most likely a plan suggested by Mrs. Smith. Because of that woman she was being urged and frightened into leaving, was she? She loathed the woman as she would a reptile, but she was not afraid of her. Not one step would she go. If that was a plan between them, they would see! The interests of the Dunbarton-Kents were her interests now, even to protecting Breck, but just let that woman try to harm her! She was not one whit afraid of the abominable creature!

Marie had grown tense and flushed. She took the pistol and examined it resolutely; it was loaded, a dangerous weapon. No one must see it; she would take it under her coat when they moved her things; it would not be safe to pack it in her trunk.

When Gibbs appeared with her breakfast, Marie was packing busily. She did not feel dull and tired any longer. She felt as one does who has lost some one who has been very dear, and yet has been left with a determined purpose. She followed her small belongings into Kent House and quietly observed the cream and pink and mahogany of her new room.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent was there, looking grimly pleased. "Like it?" she asked.

"It is beautiful," Marie returned quietly. "But it matters still more to me to be so generously taken into your family. Your interests now become mine, madame—it is of that I am thinking."

"You're a conscientious child," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent said, grave in her turn. "I've done what I thought was best. We'll see how it turns out."

IT was Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's maid, Margaret, the same girl who had run from Marie's friendly advances some three weeks before, who assisted Marie that evening into a cloud of red chiffon, red silk stockings, and red satin slippers, with Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent seated nearby, observing the proceeding.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent wore her grimly pleased expression, but Margaret's face was, as nearly as she could make it, a blank, for the significance of Marie's removal from the garage into Kent House had been whisperingly discussed in the servants' hall and Gibbs had delivered his solemn verdict:

"There's a deep purpose in this move—that girl's one of the cleverest born, as I've often told you. She's taken in Mrs. D. K., and now she's leading Mr. West around by the nose, and all the time she's laying for—you know what. It'll lead to a tragickt climaxt, mark me! 'Be blind, deaf, and dumb—it's the only way to keep out of trouble,' that's what I've said from the beginning. I, for one, intend to know nothing about anything."

Margaret looked as if she knew nothing about anything but hooks and eyes.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent was pleased by Marie's poise. It was surprising, and yet it might have been expected of the little thing, for she had not shown a particle of elation over being courted by a Dunbarton-Kent. It was enough to excite any girl, this being taken suddenly into the family and being given her chance, but Marie seemed simply to have gained gravity. She appeared to be taking her change of fortune too conscientiously to feel elated. When she and her maid invaded the room, Marie had courtesied, just as usual; her unpacking had been accomplished; her room was in perfect order. Her eyes had widened when Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had bidden Margaret hold up the red gown for inspection, but Marie had gone into no ecstasies; she had touched the dress lightly. "How beautiful," she had said softly. "Thank you, madame."

"I made a wild guess at the slippers—put them on first. You'll have to get out of that dress," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had commanded.

Marie had disrobed to her lace edged chemise, and had drawn on the red silk stockings with an entire lack of self-consciousness that had amused Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent. She smothered a chuckle when Marie sat down on the floor like any child and tried on the slippers, declining Margaret's help with a polite, "Thank you, mademoiselle, but it is best I try on for myself." Then she had stood up and had wriggled her toes in the loose slippers, her face intensely grave. "They are, I think, only a little too large," she announced judicially. "Some paper laid within the soles will be helpful."

Margaret laid some paper within the soles, and the ceremony of dressing proceeded. At its conclusion Margaret twisted a bit of red tulle and banded Marie's hair with it, and Marie surveyed herself in the mirror. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent wondered whether the girl would continue to view herself with the same unbroken gravity. She was really beautiful in the little gown. Flame red made her brunette skin whiter, emphasized the black of brows and hair and eyes.

Marie surveyed herself gravely enough, turned this way and that, without any brightening of countenance. Then, suddenly, her mouth lifted at the corners and she broke into a smile. "It is a costume more becoming than trousers," she said with conviction. "It does not displease you, madame?"

"You'll do," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent returned with pleased brevity. "Clear out now, Margaret, and tell Gibbs to announce dinner—we'll be down in a minute. The extra plate must be between Mr. West and Miss Bella."

WEST came in from the library and Bella from the drawing room, then Breck from upstairs. They met in silence and waited in silence, standing about the table during the extra moment or two consumed by Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's ponderous descent from above. Certainly there was no air of expectancy about them.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent came in through the hall followed so closely by Marie that, except to one who was on the watch as Gibbs was, her presence was not apparent until Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had reached the table. Her nephews and niece had not looked at their aunt; they were simply waiting for her to be seated. Gibbs moved forward to Bella's chair—even the intensest interest would not cause Gibbs to depart from routine—and West started towards Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent. When he was at Kent House, West always seated his aunt and Gibbs seated Bella. It was then West saw Marie and caught his breath, and Bella turned and stood petrified. Breck looked up and at West then, but without the slightest change of countenance.

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent put her hand on the back of her chair and drew it back with an air of decision, for West had stopped dead on a forward step. Unlike most fair skinned men he did not flush easily, but at that moment he was crimson. "Take that chair next to Bella, Marie—seat her, West," she commanded in her deepest baritone. "We are ready now, Gibbs."

West sprang to Marie's chair and held it for her. Bella, grown pale and with head held high, allowed Gibbs to seat her, and Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent seated herself with an air of the utmost satisfaction. In the general movement, Breck seated himself without haste, his shadowed observant eyes on Marie's white face and downcast eyes. The only change in his face was the twitching of the muscles in his cheeks, as if his teeth were clamped tightly on some emotion.

Marie had visioned how it would be and had braced herself for the ordeal, but she had not guessed how acutely she would suffer in those few minutes while she walked to her chair. Though she had looked only once, then had kept her eyes down, she had a vivid impression of two staring faces, West's and Bella's, one crimson and the other white, and, most vivid of all, Breck's utterly unchanged expression, neither surprise nor anger, just the usual shadowed watchfulness. Marie felt he had known she was coming.

She felt ill rather than confused; the tablecloth glared white and wavering. It was West's pleasant voice which steadied her. "Aunt Bulah, I took a look at the boats today. Amy Bell will go to pieces if she's not repaired."

"I don't see the use of keeping them," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent returned. "No one uses them." Her voice was quite as usual.

So was Bella's, cool and steady. "Why don't you get a motor boat, West?"

"I've thought of it."

Marie realized the Dunbarton-Kent type poise is a thing carefully cultivated. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had astounded West and Bella, but, after a moment of stupefaction, they spoke quite in their usual manner. At every step of the way into the dining room Marie had kept saying to herself, "No matter what I feel, I must be collected." She lifted her soup spoon and swallowed a little of the soup, by main will holding herself steady.

There was further talk of motor boats and of the yacht club, a conversation carried on by West, Bella, and Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, for Marie did not hear Breck's voice once. Then West asked pleasantly, "Which do you like best, Marie—a motor boat or something with sails?"

Marie felt she must be quite as much at ease as he. "To arrive quickly, I should choose an engine, I think, monsieur, but for pleasure a sailing boat. Sails make one think of—wings." There was the slightest quiver in her voice.

West was smiling at her; his eyes seemed to be lighted by an inward glow. "Have you done much sailing?"

"Never, monsieur. I have been in steamers only."

The basket trick. The great and only Tsudo, Oriental illusionist and king of necromancy, will now proceed to shut the beautiful houri—(none other than Mrs. Maude Foley in private life)—within the basket. Oh, the things that man is going to do to that basket! He will jab knives into it and shoot guns at it till you'd think the lady would be in a very scattered state. But no, just when you expect the worst, Tsudo removes the basket top and there isn't a trace of Mrs. Foley, the houri. Whereupon Mrs. Foley will trip in from the wings, smiling sweetly, just to show there's no hard feeling in consequence of her daily rendezvous with death.

The curtain speech. "I just want to say, ladies and gentlemen, on behalf of myself and my partner, how happy we are to be here. Being here in Brooklyn is just like being back in our boyhood home again and I just want to say that I wish I could tell each one of you just what your kind reception has meant to me and my partner," etc., etc.

of his life to our guests who spoke his language.

At the conclusion of the whining recital they waved him majestically away and all the translation their politeness gave us was that he was dissatified with the climate and the gorillas, and that the other boys made war on him.

He deserved war, and we sent him back to Kissenyi next day. Discharge is simple in the Congo. You reckon the time it will take the boy to walk back to the place you brought him from and give him 30 cents for each week of the way. If a boat or train is to be had you give him the native fare.

For weeks there had been the glare of volcanoes on our horizon. We were in the most active volcanic region in Africa, the scene of the most recent upheavals. It was the bursting of the Mfumbiro volcanoes through the earth that had dammed the trough between Lake Kivu and Lake Edward to the north, cutting Kivu off from the Nile basin and raising its waters to their remarkable height of nearly five thousand feet.

In 1912, from a fissure in the earth at the north end of Kivu—a fissure that swiftly developed into a small cone—there had come a violent eruption, with such an outpouring of molten lava into the lake that the end of it was almost entirely closed and the water boiled for twelve miles out. The fleeing natives, who escaped the fiery rocks and engulfing lava by launching their hollow log canoes, were nearly all capsized in the seething waters and boiled to death.

That little cone was inactive now, its rocky sides greening with lichen; so were all the little cones that dotted the lava strewn floor of the great valley stretching northward between the mountain ranges. The two separate mountains, Chaninagongo and Nyamlagira, were the only guardians of that restless fire. From their flattened crater tops streamed ruddy tinted clouds.

Chaninagongo smoked but slightly, but from Nyamlagira went up a cloud of steam by day and by night a crimson blaze seen a hundred miles away. It was the most active volcano in Africa, probably in the known world, and no one had ever made the ascension since the last outbreak of fire.

In 1904 it had begun to be active; in 1906 Wollaston reported a jet of steam escaping from the southern slope; in 1907 Kirschstein of Mecklenburg's expedition witnessed eruptions and made the ascent. For some time then it smoked heavily, as far as we could learn; Monsieur Van de Ghinste, the Belgian commissioner at Ruchurn, got up once to the summit, but could see nothing on account of the clouds of smoke. Then the fire broke out and no one had been up since that last eruption.

Its ascent was considered impossible on account of the fumes, but from the camp on Mikeno Mr. Akeley had noted that the wind blew steadily southwest, so the other side was safe. There was difficulty in approaching that side, as the mountain was encircled by a wide lava field, an outpouring from a tiny cone in the valley floor. Yubile was its native name, but after the eruption they called it Chaumunaniye (They Shall Not Pass).

That lava field was a mass of broken porous rocks, churned about blocks, like dynamited pyramids. Plants were finding rootage and the low, waving branches of green gave it the air of a field, but it was a desperate thing to scramble over, and practically impassable for porters with loads.

But Father Van Hoef knew that the natives knew a way across to the opposite forests, and he got us guides and porters, though he had his doubts about the porters making any ascent. The day after Thanksgiving Mr. Akeley, Miss Miller, the two Bradleys, and about forty luckless natives wound down through the banana groves, past the huts, and started to pick their way over the lava field.

It was the world's worst going. The porters made grass sandals for their feet and clung to stout sticks. They began to yearn, volubly, for home.

In the Congo your worst fears are never realized. Something that you didn't fear happens instead. We had expected a beating midday sun upon that lava plain—we got a freezing storm of sleet and hail, and the hail was literally the size of hen's eggs—Congo eggs. The Bradley raincoats were on the head of a porter somewhere out of reach—the porter with your personal belongings is always as elusive as Peter Pan, while the one with dried beans sticks like a plaster—so we had reached a shivering saturation point by the time we found shelter.

Breakfast on a volcano—the main camp below the summit of Nyamlagira. Mr. and Mrs. Bradley and Miss Miller are at table.

We made camp in a glade on the lower slopes of Nyamlagira, and then for two days the guides led us round and round that mountain—anywhere but up. The sides were cleft with fissures and ravines, so that we had plenty of climbing to do, and they must have cherished the fond hope that if they exercised us sufficiently we would call it an excursion and go home. They had a violent aversion to approaching the crater and an equally poignant sentiment against walking up the mountain side on an elephant trail with our luggage on their heads.

Our second camp was in jungle utterly unlike the forests of Mikeno and Karisimbi. There was no gorilla food here, no evidence of gorillas. There were elephants, and we ran into them on the march. We heard them, quite near; the green was too dense to see them. We waited; the profound stillness which succeeded the cracklings and rumblings told us that the elephants had heard us and were waiting, too.

Then there was a noise. The porters pitched their loads away and fled. Mr. Akeley shot at random, and the elephants crashed off. I got a glimpse of a gray back that looked as high as a barn. We would have liked an elephant hunt, but we could not take time from the ascent.

The third day the porters decided to stop. They decided it every hour. At last Mr. Akeley got the kilangozi, the headman, far enough in advance to be out of ear shot and drove him up, while we shepherded the rest, like reluctant chamois.

One or two bolted, but the others struggled up the elephant trail, through the jungle, on through barren heights of sparse grass and lava, till we made camp about half an hour from the summit. We weighted the tents with rock and the porters made huts of the grass.

Mr. Akeley went up ahead to the crater, then went up again with us about 4:30. Martha Miller and I went hand in hand to distribute whatever distinction there was in being the first women to put our heads over Nyamlagira's fire.

We stood on the brink of a great crater about ten miles about. We looked down into a colossal chasm blown out by three separate eruptions—table lands and bastion walls, cinder slopes and spouting steam, and billowing sulphur clouds—a wild, demonaic place that was as beautiful and mad as a volcano ought to be.

The fire came from the third crater, the only one active. We could see the glow and we made our way for three-quarters of an hour about the summit, over jagged lava, until we could look down into the pit of boiling lava from which came the explosions that thundered up to us like the roaring of surf.

It was a gorgeous sight—the fire of the very heart of the world at our feet and all about ethereal distance and great mountains melting into space.

East of us, across the wide valley, were Mikeno and Karissimbi, purple peaks with clouds streaming like banners from their pinnacles, and Vissoke, the third mountain of the gorilla triangle, just visible on the left, and yet farther to the left three ancient volcanoes, Sabinio, Mgahinga, Muhavura, so directly in line that they seemed one mountain. Karissimbi was the highest of all, 14,638 feet, and a faint sprinkling of snow was powdering her peak.

Northward stretched the valley, a shadowy reach of forest and lava plains, guarded east and west by mountain ranges; south were the slopes of Chaninagongo, and across from us, an azure cloud against the crater's black edge, lay distant Kivu.

We looked too long. The sun set, night swooped down like a bat, and up the mountain sides rolled enveloping white cotton clouds of fog. We tried to save time by taking an oblique way down to camp, and for three hours we floundered in fog and blackness and rocks and ravines and brush.

And it rained. It poured. We huddled under a bush until the fury of the storm was spent, feeling we were taking refuge in a water course, so tremendous a fall of water washed down that mountain's sides; then we kept moving to keep warm. Ultimately an answering halloo from camp brought us down to our welcoming boys, who were fairly pallid with fear that the devils of the volcano had us!

The night ended in hot chocolate and dry dressing gowns and the gaiety of reaction.

The next day we went with a few porters to carry the cameras and food and firewood and blankets for the night. We went about the rim, at first over upthrust rocks, then over cinder slopes, until a hollow in the edge enabled us to climb down to the level of an old crater floor we had first looked down upon, billowing white with clouds from green and yellow sulphur beds.

We started out across the flats, clinging at first to a rope with commendable prudence, but after we found the sulphur beds harmless and the hollow sounding crust supporting, we grew blase and explored light heartedly, finding caves, and hot caves at that, most opportunely during the daily storm. We grew to feel most domestically attached to that crater before we were through our housekeeping in it. Its craters and ledges were as familiar as a home.

Speaking of men's fashions in the Congo, this table boy's idea of real style is a union suit.

That night we camped upon the rim, beside a bowlder, beneath a stretch of canvas weighted down with rock. The porters descended to the base camp, gladdened with a franc apiece for backheesh, and after looking down into the glowing life between black portal-like openings in the inner crater wall and photographing it, we laid us down to sleep upon lava rocks lightly overlaid with torn up grass.

The porters remained on the edge of Nyamlagira's crater. Here is a group that has just brought up some supplies.

It was a cold night. We had dressed for it elaborately, discarding nothing and adding everything in the line of sweaters and raincoats that we had. It was none too much. That we slept was due to the day's generous exercise rather than any cooperation on the part of the rocky beds and the weather.

Sunrise was a gleam of gold behind amethyst peaks, and a sea of cloud rolling through the valleys. During breakfast our porters appeared, faithful to the rendezvous, although from the new faces among them we judged several originals were unwilling to brave the volcano again even for a franc.

We went around the rim to the spot from which we could descend into the crater, and marched out across the flats for half an hour, feeling well acquainted now with sulphur beds and not blenching when an unwary foot broke through the crust—the fact that man and woman is a two legged biped saved some of us from total eclipse—and reached the edge of the terrace at a point from which we could make a further descent to a narrow ledge on the brink of a steep drop.

On that ledge, against the rock of the crater wall, we stretched our shelter cloth, weighted by tied on rocks, which hung down over the brink. There was steam pouring from the rocks near us and sifting from the gravels whenever we stretched it—we had no fear of being cold that night. Here we made ourselves at home. The porters clutched their francs and took what they clearly thought the last look at the mad ones.

Mr. Akeley made his way on till he could climb down a cinder slope, and set up his cameras there on the edge of nothing. We could look down now into the crater pit of boiling lava, a great mass, crusted with cooler, darker lava, patterned with gleaming cracks of pure gold, that shifted and changed as the stuff boiled and seethed and broke into fountains of fire or rolled into molten rivers or hissing flame.

As night came on the cloud above that cauldron became a glow of rose, vivid, unearthly, a rose of hell—a drifting, billowing radiance that made an inferno of those rocky walls, throwing into weird relief every jutting ledge and rock, filling with mysterious shadow the deep recesses and dark distance. High above the crater that rose-red cloud streamed out against a sky its fire made black.

Half the night we sat out upon the ledge, the glory of that spectacle filling our eyes, the thunder of it in our ears. It was for us alone; we had been the first to look upon it. And for night after night, year after year, that glory was blazing and thundering away, unseen, undreamed!

It was an unforgettable night. It was Rome burning. It was Valhalla ablaze.

MONDAY MATINEE

By W. E. HILL.

(Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.)

Blue Ribbon Comics

The "classy delineator of feminine types" has removed his wig at the end of his act, and, oh, isn't he being tough and rough. It's for the moment only, however.

"And where does your papa spend his evenings, Johnny?" asks the lady ventriloquist. "In the cellar," answers Johnny, "makin' home brew." What WILL they think of next?

"So that's your idea of a pretty girl, is it, Joe?" A little difference of opinion on relative merits.

Aerobat, all fixed up for street wear. The act didn't go very well today. Cold house.

Film star about to show off in person, as advertised. Will tell the audience how much she loves each and every member of it, how glad she is to count them all as her friends, and that's about all. After which the feature film will be shown.

The colored act. "Green, Howard, and Green, society jazz hounds," is the way the ad reads in Billboard. Two members of the act are so VERY dressy, and wear so MANY clothes, that for a week afterward the workday of the entire colored population will be seriously disrupted. (Wait till you hear Miss Green sing "I Got Those Lonesome Mama Blues.") That's talent for you!

On the GORILLA TRAIL

by Mary Hastings Bradley

Today We Met the Bizarre Pygmies of the Congo and Descend into the Crater of the Fire Mountain that Has a Crown of Flame which Can Be Seen 100 Miles.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT.

The Pygmies.

THE Batwa were coming. The pygmies, the fugitive little forest dwellers, were coming to our camp. A hasty message from the White Fathers brought the word, and I was so afraid that they would change their fugitive little forest minds that I seized Alice, our star attraction with natives, and with Martha and Priscilla hurried to meet them.

Ever since we had reached Lulenga, before we went up the mountains after gorillas, we had been trying through the kindly offices of the White Fathers to get the Batwa to come in. They are the forest dwarfs, the descendants, in all probability, of these little bushmen who succeeded the kin of the Neanderthal giants, and who, a hundred thousand years ago, while Europe lay under glacial ice, were covering the rocks of Africa with their delicate paintings and drawings.

They are nomads, shy, suspicious, often at war with the blacks. Later, in Uganda, we found that pygmy raids from the forest had wiped out the population of the southern shores of Lake Bunyoni, and, though the British had conducted a punitive expedition against the Batwa, the natives did not settle there again. But here the relations between the dwarfs and the Banyaruanda were friendly, even to intermarriage, and the White Fathers had induced the chief to send into the forest for the Batwa, with a promise of salt from us for each one that would come in.

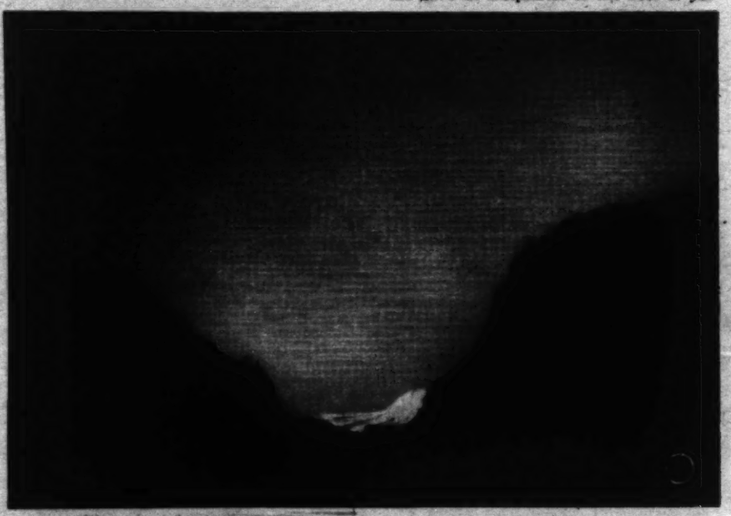
Mr. Akeley and Mr. Bradley were still on Mikeno, planning to reach camp by noon, for it was Thanksgiving day, and as we hurried along we felt an anxious pang for fear the retiring Batwa would not stay to meet the men and be recorded in the motion pictures.

We might have spared that pang. Ahead of us we saw coming, not the shy two or three, advancing cautiously from bush to bush, whom our fancy pictured, but an actual procession pouring along like a pilgrimage, clapping and singing, and followed by a mob of curious natives. Martha and I exchanged bewilderment. Were these our shrinking Batwa? It could not be!

It was the Batwa. Men, women, and children, the tribe of them was making holiday to see the strange white women and the child with the long, fair curls—and receive the promised salt. Short, stocky little dwarfs they were, with round heads, which had the effect of being driven too deeply between their shoulders, clad simply in leather aprons, the women supplementing the aprons with anklets and a head wreath of flowers, the men carrying bows and arrows. The children were unincumbered. Not that that was any distinction. No little African has to be careful of his clothes.

They poured into the cleared space before us and ringed Alice in, chattering their monkey-like clicks and grunts, and then they danced. They danced like mad for three hours. We tried to get them to wait till the Bwanas had come down the mountain, but no, the spirit was on them, and they clapped, and sang, and jazzed in oblivious excitement, and in that pandemonium we finished breakfast and preparation for Thanksgiving dinner.

When the men finally appeared our Batwa had exhausted their first fine frenzy, and for the sake of the salt did a somewhat spiritless affair for them.



Fires from the heart of the world—the fire pit of Nyamlagira photographed at night by its own weird light.

Within the crater of Nyamlagira, where the lava smokes and boils.

The Duke of Mecklenburg reported that he found the pygmies taller than expected, about four feet seven, some even four feet eleven inches. We found some men about that height, due undoubtedly to intermarriage with the Banyaruanda, but the women, who were the ugliest creatures I saw in Africa, were smaller, squat, and thick. We did not try to measure them, for fear of intimidating them, but we had Alice stand by them, and her height was three feet eight inches. There were women with children on their backs who were no taller, and two much shorter. Their color was black, warm toned.

They are the only inhabitants who live on true native fare; it has been considered a sign of the comparatively recent origin of the Bantu tribes that they live on imported grains. When there is a famine, as there was after the war, they die in thousands, but the Batwa, with their bows and poisoned darts, rove the forests and find food.

Gen. Smuts told me that in the South African bush the little men lived largely upon carrion, and one would lie for hours, unwinking eyes fixed on the vultures high overhead, invisible to other eyes, and when the vultures sighted some dying animal or lion's kill and made for it the bushman would jump up and run to it, holding the direction, and after the lions and jackals had feasted would creep in and pick the bones.

Finally Herbert got rid of our retiring Batwa, who were underfoot like troublesome kittens, by salting each in turn—and the chief brought three women back, who had not danced for us, and made them give up the salt.

Then, rest in camp being merely change of occupation, the porters were lined up and paid off, with all the promised backsheesh. And then we had a real dance.

The porters started down the slope, turned suddenly, with a shout of song that rose and fell like hammer strokes, and came up the hill to us, their four headmen in the lead. I never saw men dance as those men danced. All their joy at release, their triumph at danger overcome, their exultation at fortunes made and wives to buy, was in that leaping, stamping orgy. Four times they surged up to us and four times receded, a marvel of wild and savage motion.

Thanksgiving dinner was on the porch of the mud house. It was a day like June, with only a sprinkle of rain—Thanksgiving with roses blooming and volcanoes glowing, Thanksgiving with chicken instead of turkey, and strawberries and cape gooseberries from the mission instead of cranberries, with green corn from Burunga and plum pudding instead of pumpkin pie—plum pudding with a sauce that does not exist now within the three mile limit, creamy and buttery and fragrant!

We had two dinners, the family affair at 2 o'clock, and another at 7, to which we invited the White Fathers. Think of saying tranquilly to your cook, "Two dinners today—the first for six people, the second for ten, and six courses to each dinner!" It did seem to us a fairly full day for the kitchen. But we did not know our cook.

A six course dinner. And four guests. Well, he was a Congo cook, he had served the chef de poste at Kissenyi, and he would save us from ourselves and our shame if it could be done. Heaven knows how he gathered the oddments of ham and flour and lard and unreliable eggs—if I had known his intentions I would have given him the keys and let him do his best and not his worst—but out of his clandestine this and that and what not, he supplemented those six meager courses with six others of his own and served a meal that satisfied his ideas of state.

He gave us croquettes of the beef of yesterday, and vegetables matriculated from the soup; he gave us pie of cooking fat and discarded citrons with a meringue of hoarded eggs! He alternated with the courses of our election, but not in order, so that the green corn came after the dessert, but it all came, course after course, each with the complete change of plates and knives and forks, and a harrowing wait for the washing of those plates and knives and forks.

Night deepened, stars brightened, volcanoes glowed redder and redder. Candles spluttered and burned out and were replenished. Conversation, our French conversation, spluttered, too, in those awful waits, then revived in gales of laughter.

And still the boys came, serving, serving.

And one of them served, in honor of the occasion, in the union suit that Mr. Akeley had given him on the gorilla mountains to supplement his shirt and khaki shorts. Then he had worn it invisibly, as custom prescribes for union suits, but in these warmer regions Leo did not need so much clothing and discarded the shirt and trousers for the newest thing. Anything quainter than that sketchily buttoned union suit passing the potatoes I have never beheld. Never, when buying the garment in New York, had Mr. Akeley contemplated its appearance behind his dining room chair!

The other boy, Mablango, had gone to the other extreme. He had trousers, a coat, but no shirt, and he pinned his coat scrupulously across and wound about his neck a woolen muffler.

Merrick, the washboy, aided the festivities prettily attired in pink pyjamas donated by Miss Miller.

And then Alumna, an unpopular tent-boy, the one with us during the gorilla hunt, who shirked so badly with the other boys that he was in disfavor even with that easy-going lot, suddenly appeared on the edge of the outer darkness and in a horridly exaggerated croak, like a dying frog, from mountain colds, insisted upon enumerating the sorrows

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

THE LOVER TWINS JOIN THE TEENIE WEENIE BOY SCOUTS. BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE Teenie Weenies have a rule in their little community which the big folks would do well to adopt. Every Teenie Weenie boy and girl is made to join the Teenie Weenie Boy and Girl Scouts. When they are old enough to understand they are taken out into the woods, where they live for several weeks each summer, and they are taught how to take care of themselves in the forest.

It was decided that the Lover twins were old enough to take up their training in woodcraft, so they were told to make ready for their entrance into the order of Teenie Weenie Boy Scouts. Mrs. Lover and the Lady of Fashion made the two little fellows each a suit of Scout clothes and the Old Soldier hammered their tiny axes out of the heads of two carpet tacks. He also made them two little hunting knives and each one a pack to carry his belongings in.

The Indian was to take the little fellows into the woods and the twins could hardly wait for the time to start. Mrs. Lover wanted her children to have every comfort on the trip, so she prepared such a lot of things it would have taken one of the trucks to carry it all. There were four nightshirts apiece, six towels apiece, four changes of underwear for each, a bathrobe apiece, four pairs of stockings each, four shirts apiece, an extra pair of shoes each, bedroom slippers, and many more things. The poor Indian was quite excited when he saw this pile of clothes, for he would have to carry most of the baggage and they had a long ways to go.

"One towel apiece heap enough," cried the Indian. "Wash towel out when get dirty and dry in sun. Two pair socks enough. One cake soap too much."

"Yes, the Indian is right," said the General, who saw Mrs. Lover did not agree with the Indian. "They will have all their food and blankets to carry, as well as their pots and kettles."

After a great deal of argument the Indian finally had his way and only the most necessary things were chosen. When the little party was ready to start off it was plainly seen that they could not have carried another thing. The Indian carried most of the load, while each of the twins carried his sweater, ax, coat, and blanket.

After much weeping and kissing on the part of Mrs. Lover the three set off early the next morning toward the big woods. The first night the Indian made a camp beside the little creek which ran out of the woods. He made a bed of dry moss and soft dandelion down under a big mullen leaf, and after the twins had eaten their supper the tired little fellows soon rolled up in their tiny blankets and in spite of the loud cries of the crickets they quickly fell asleep.

It was just getting light the next morning when the Indian routed the twins out, and after they had washed themselves in the clean creek water they sat down to breakfast. The Indian baked delicious pancakes, which he served with wonderful sirup.

"Where did you get the good sirup?" asked Jerry, one of the twins.

"Me get head of white clover," answered the Indian as he skillfully flipped a cake in the tiny frying pan. "Next me pull out little white flowers and squeeze out honey in pan. Then me put over fire and cook down a little and me have sirup."

After breakfast the three travelers set out for the woods, where they arrived early in the afternoon. The Indian set to work at once putting up a shelter, which he built out of poles and bark. The camp was made next to a big stone, on a clean, dry, sandy beach of the creek. The twins helped to cut the poles for the shelter with their tiny axes and they gathered dry moss for the bed, while the Indian tied the frame of the shelter securely with tough grass blades.

"Me want shelter strong," said the Indian, and the little fellow certainly made it strong, for it held the weight of the ground robin, who perched on it occasionally when he visited camp.

There were plenty of wild strawberries nearby, deliciously sweet, and the little campers ate nearly a whole berry at each meal. After the twins had rested for a couple of days the Indian set to work teaching the little fellows the many wonderful things about the woods.

Vionnet chooses apricot crepe de chine with winged sleeves.

Dress of blue crepe jersey, trimmed in red. By Doeuillet.

Sleeve trains from shoulders feature a red crepe de chine gown.

Dinner frock of orchid satin crepe with silver lace drapery.

BY MARY BRUSH WILLIAMS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS. — (Special Correspondence.) — When nobody was looking—in the watches of the night, or when all of us were busy getting the English through town on their way from the Riviera, or were waving greetings to short skirted Americans just off the boat—somebody flooded this town with materials shaded in apricot tints. It is the local substitute for fruit trees and lilacs and wild flowers. Line your coat with apricot and call the season spring. They class it here among the reds, although I am pretty sure that in Indiana we used to put it under the yellows.

However, results in Paris are the same. For whereas out where I came from everybody poked a finger at that combination, yelling "red and yellow, catch a fellah," here it is used alike for dressing wives of presidents, staging musical comedies, "getting up" little exotic blossoms of South Americans for dances, tea gowns for Madame Sorel—and what you will.

Get yourself tricked out in a sleeveless, neckless, lifeless slip of a thing, without any punch to it, that clings to the length of you, taking all of its line from the line of your body. Top this with a hat that hasn't any back to it and shoots a mile out in front of you like the scoop shovel, and you are ready to get up on the floor of the afternoon dance room and poke your brim into the eyes of the other dancers, along with the best of them.

It will be well if you can get a little bias feeling into the slope of your dress, and this, of course, comes in the cutting and depends upon the materials. Upon investigation it was found the cutting could not be done successfully in imitation of the Vionnet slant unless you first found material eighty inches wide. And it is said not to come as wide as that. Which furnishes the first obstacle in the fretted path of trying to be correctly dressed.

Wear the bateau neck, but model it on a canoe instead of a rowboat. Let it, in other words, run far out toward the shoulders, and not extend low front or back. And, above all, when you are "out among 'em," let it fall off one shoulder. If it doesn't do so naturally, keep wriggling it off. That is, of course, if you wish to be dressed after the manner of the Parisienne of the boulevards. I am not speaking for the moment of the French lady of the salon.

Vionnet has so far deigned to notice what the rest of us are doing as to make up a dress in apricot crêpe de chine, with the neckline above recommended. She liked her little invention of the crêpe de chine roses for belts and cape hoods and dear knows what all. It made such a hit with her that she has gone one better her single strand of roses that circled her waist last summer, and now she has put three rows of tinier, compacter flowers of the "same genus, different family," as we used to say in botanical research, round the waist in the same relative position—although slightly higher, perhaps, to suit the changing zodiac of the waistline.

These same bands of roses circle the bateau neck and the three-quarter length sleeves. Down the sides of the back she has set her this season's seal on this model. Why need Vionnet have thumb marks for designating her dresses? You can tell the present vintage by the little winged capes that descend down the sides of the back, behind the sleeves. This particular brand is attached to the sleeve to a point just above the rose-banded cuffs. Sometimes sleeves similar to those fall to the floor, and on it in trains.

M. Paul Poiret would not appear to set much store by the finger print method of self defense against copyists. He received a letter from an unknown friend after the appearance of one of his sketches in these columns. "Merci beaucoup for this gravure," so the letter ran. "The dress is pretty and my little couturiere can copy it. Please continue to give sketches and fashion information to the various journals because your prices, like other maisons of the Haute Couture, are extremely dear, and I find it impossible to dress chez vous. However, Paris abounds in the little couturiere's who copy dresses most accurately from sketches."

The great artist replies that he will be glad to meet the lady's demands and that he fears not the little copyist. Indeed, he snaps the finger of scorn at her, and says he would like to see the reproduction she would make of any creation of his. That is where he stands on this vexed subject of copyists, and beside the petty wrangling going on forever, it seems to me rather fearless and fine.

The second offering represents a charming day frock of crêpe jersey by Doeuillet in blue, with touches of red in the lining of the petalled sleeves and skirt. Red beads form the girdle, and two lines of red run down the middle of the front of the dress. By the way, a part of the charm of the dress is due to an audacity. The front of it is of crêpe georgette, and this gives a pleasing contrast in textures of the materials. It is smart this season, you know—that combination of silk and wool.

The third figure presents a dress of red crêpe de chine with a diamond buckle on a belt that is draped, falling in a low curve across the back. Two long sleeve trains fall from the shoulders and are held in place by a series of three straps on either arm.

The last sketch represents a charming dinner frock of orchid colored satin crêpe, with a jeweled belt of turquoise. The lace drapery is of delicate silver frilled on to one shoulder. It descends its graceful length down one side of the gown, until eventually it crosses the skirt and falls along the floor on the other side. Two or three immense roses in pink fall from the belt into the lace drapery.

SPORTS CLOTHES ARE GENEROUSLY EMBROIDERED.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—We have been promised them for a long time, and yesterday they began shyly appearing—coming up, you might say, as of wild flowers—in the big glass shop windows. The knitted things of the day that are so awfully popular are all intertwined and trellised and grown with a thick underbrush of vegetation in embroidery. Roses, wild things of autumn, spring flowers, and even the more cultivated ones with the lattices that they grow over, adorn beige woolens and brown silk jerseys, and gray mixtures of silk and wool. These old friends still pursue the long, straight lines with a middy blouse when they are in two pieces, but they are plastered o'er with garnishment.

"What are they for?" I demanded in innocence.

Certainly one could not muss them up in a hefty game of tennis, as the sporting side to their appearance might suggest. And one could not be presented at the Court of St. James in them, although gowns have appeared there more sparsely embroidered.

"O, they're for Hot Springs, Va., this fall," answered my friends, the smart American, "and for the potieniere, or gossips' stand, at Deauville, where one assembles for pastry and coffee before midday." And they are for the Bois in Paris, which, of course, means also the local Bois of your town. And if you should happen into a tearoom with them on later nobody could say you were anything but well dressed. Sports things are only just started on their way to fame and fortune, and it doesn't matter where you wear them—even to church.

Now that the weather has taken a turn for the better and the temperature is mounting so that if you cross the street you return to your hotel just about overcome—in other words, now that summer is here in fact and by the calendar—one's thoughts, if one is in Paris, just naturally turn toward furs. Already the smart shops are magnificent with them, and by the time the dry spell adds its charms to the sun dried heat of June we shall all be clothed in them. One of the leading topics along with the status of the franc and the price of bonds is, will the line in fur mantles change? If so, to what? Magnificent bushy tailed animals hang by these tails from the curtains of smart houses and spread like spokes of a fan along the velvet of the show window. And yet everybody is saying that animals are not chic this year. They say that only Americans wear them, but, if true, at least the Americans have on some much handsomer ones than any on view over here. And whatever the signs of the windows, the boulevardieres have suddenly begun to attire themselves in long scarves or stoles of sable if possible, of mink as a second, and of squirrel as a not at all bad compromise.

Americans are buying their long coats for next year, and the prevailing style would appear to be a line like a cape falling from the shoulders which you wind round you, making what would otherwise be a circular flare come down in a descent almost straight. This wrap is not a simple cape, but a strange new evolutionary type with sleeves, as if you had crossed a cape with a coat. Word has it that capes as such are gone.

One day an American girl, having given up all hope of the arrival of summer, grabbed down an old seal coat and took it to be made over. She chose a model from one of the bobtail jackets of the day. It came into a low, tight band round the hips, and fastened with two buttons close round the neck, which ended in the usual muff shaped collar. The jacket bloused low. They made the customary white lining for the girl to try on, and her pronouncement was in no unmeasured terms that it would not do. It was almost cadaverous in its line of pinched slinkiness in blouse and the flatness over the chest. There was only the shadow of a ghostly reminiscence of a blousing. "It ought to stick out full all round, above that tight band." She told the stylish what the style should be and departed.

Before the next day's sun she dispatched a note to that house. For she immediately began to take notice, and when she reached the boulevards found that some time in the dead watches of night all jackets, fur and other, had been made over into a different kind of blouse. Instead of the bouffante line of youth launched by Renee, every well dressed woman now has the consumptive look of Camille, with no width under the arms, a line mounting over a hollow chest (if she can possibly get her chest to look that way), and all of the silhouette giving the appearance of length without breadth. Those little coats are the wraps of the day, and cannot possibly be outlawed by fall.

The pictures show some of the early summer offerings. An afternoon dress by Lanvin is the first. It is of black crepe de chine with a rolled belt of black and green. There are four panels down the skirt. They are of green and white silk and are gathered into the girdle. The boat shaped neck and the short sleeves are edged with organdie.

The second offering is a white crepe seen at Claridge's. There are two diamond shaped openings in the bell sleeves. There is a belt draped and tied at the side and again low in back, allowing the ends of the belt to fall to the floor. A red horse hair net accompanies the dress, and it is trimmed with coque feathers sprinkled with cherries.

The third sketch represents a black crepe dress made in the simple lines now prevailing. The notable thing about it is the hemstitching belt. Word has it that hemstitching is going to be played hard. A new dress by Vionnet is, as it were, punctured with it. There is hemstitching across the neck of the dress shown here. The sleeves are slashed, after a manner now popular. The hat is of black straw, banded with crepe de chine, which ties on one side.

The fourth dress is taken from one seen on the dance floor at Claridge's. It was of white crepe, trimmed in tooth shaped points in green braid running round the skirt, each point set with a tassel. The sleeveless armholes and the wide neck were finished with what we used to call "pinking." The hat was of green straw with a roll round it of black and green.

REDUCING ANKLES

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The lengthened skirt is here, there's no doubt about that. The smartest girls one sees on upper 5th, Park, and Madison avenues, at the afternoon affairs at hotels and restaurants, are wearing them at least eight inches from the ground. Already the extremely short skirt looks the style of a yesterday, every woman understanding just how passé that may be. And as the tendency is to narrow them at the hem, the business of learning to walk with a much less strident step is again upon us.

But it was not of the new skirt length I intended to talk today, except as it applies to the ankles. The short skirt will die hard with many of us, for it was a free and easy covering as far as it went. With the emancipated feeling and the actual muscle freedom, one could get where she was going in time as correspondingly brief as the skirt.

The slender ankle craze has been with us during the abbreviated skirt reign, to be sure. But the perspective allowed by the greater distance from heel to skirt hem was more kindly in the long run (no pun intended) to the average girl than the eight or six inch skirt length. This latter leaves nothing but the ankle itself to be viewed. Consequently, it requires a neat turn to complete a pretty picture as the eye travels downward.

Pep, Energy, and Perristence.

Before going farther, I warn the troubled in this regard that reducing ankles is no easy job. You have to put patience—much of it—and a deal of pep and energy and faithfulness into the exercises I am about to recommend. Not before four solid weeks, including holidays, holy days, and Sundays, of energetic kicking and stretching need you expect a noticeable difference. Then every week after that there will be added improvement. I cannot guarantee any stated number of inches reduction in any given time, because that is entirely up to you and depends upon the vim and vigor with which you tackle the slenderizing job.

One of the curious freaks of nature is to turn the ankle of a woman over weight by forty or fifty pounds with the grace and dimensions of the most exacting sculptor; and, again, to deposit upon the legs and ankles of an otherwise underweight girl avoirdupois that simply appals her. There's no explaining it.

Beware the White Stocking.

First, let me call attention to the necessity of neat stocking-ing where the ankle measurements are out of proportion by reason of adipose.

New York has often been said to have the best shod women in the world. There's reasonable ground, too, for the proud boast that the women here dress from the ground up. Their feet, as a rule, are easy to look at. But even here, as elsewhere, you find the dilettante with the gross ankle encased in white and beige and silver stockings when darker colors would serve better. The one person who might be justified for great extravagance in finest silken hosiery is the heavy ankled. She should afford it for her own happiness, because, as every one of us femmes know, the thickness and the sheerness of a stocking have great influence.

But more important is the adjustment of the stocking so that the seam in the back runs a straight and even course, and not in a drunken, reeling line which distorts the shapeliest of pedal extremities. One wouldn't dream of putting a hat on with corresponding carelessness. And it is such a trifling responsibility, really—this drawing the stocking into a straight line from heel to the knee back, when you consider the difference it makes. It might be said in passing, too, that it prolongs the life of the stocking to adjust the weave as it was made to be adjusted.

Kick Like Everything.

Now, for the shifting of the weight that presses upon your spirits and upon your ankles:

1. Suspend a pillow in the doorway high enough to insure a good stretch on the leg muscles when you kick. Stand back a couple of feet, hands on hips, then aim first the right foot five times and then the left five times at the suspended pillow. Adjust the suspended pillow as you progress and can kick higher.

2. Swing right leg forward and extend right arm (both with forcible movement); force leg upward until it touches the hand, keeping other leg straight, knee unbent, and foot firmly on the ground. Also, keep body from inclining forward. Repeat with left leg and left arm. Five times each.

3. Stand erect and raise one leg as far as possible in backward direction, being careful not to bend trunk. Point the toes of leg backward and downward, stretched to toe tip, putting a strain on them actually, then swing leg forward and backward five times.

Repeat with Other Leg.

4. This is slightly different from the first exercise, and until you get your balance might be better to begin with, although my idea is to give you just as many versions of the kicking and stretching of the leg muscles as possible. So I leave it to your discretion whether to make it additional or as a substitute for No. 1. Practice this by standing with one hand on a chair to maintain your balance. Kick forward as high as possible five times. Then, from standing position, kick backward. Repeat with other leg. Stretch muscles to toe tips.

5. Raise right thigh and knee until they are at right angles to the body; then kick right foot out sharply, stretching muscles to the tips of the toes. Five times. Repeat with left leg.

Spurn the Elevator.

In addition to these five excellent trainers, I urge you to swim. The frog kick, used in company with the breast stroke, has force enough in it to help much. The paddling required in the crawl, which is the more popular present method of swimming instructors, too, is excellent.

Don't take the elevator, either, if there are a number of flights to walk up. Stair climbing, when done by putting only the fore part of the foot down and allowing a spring to propel you on to the next step, is an aid of great value.

But with the five exercises I have given you here, done with energy and pep, as I have said before, and done regularly and consistently night and morning for six weeks, I would not be afraid to wager a trim pair of ankles peeping out below the lengthened skirt hem.

Don't you dare to write and tell me at the end of a week or ten days that these exercises are no good. At the end of six weeks I'll listen to your plaint, if you can prove with witnesses that you never missed a morn or night in that time and your ankles are as before. But I doubt sincerely if I shall receive one such complaint.

It is fairly dull and monotonous doing these things—but think of what obese women do to reduce, and think again of what thousands of them have accomplished by sticking to the end of the program mapped out. Bear in mind you are working for a pair of alluring ankles and—kick like everything!

BABE: IT IS PRETTY HARD TO fatten your face without adding a few pounds to the rest of you. You could stand it, I think. No use sacrificing the pretty contour of a face to a foolish desire to be underweight in the figure proportions. Massaging plumpness into the cheeks is a slow and tedious course, ingariably of little success, too. Wearing the hair low and puffed around the ears lends an artificial aid. You had better eat and eat heartily until you have put roses and a dash of rotundity in your cheeks.

Two Babies to Amuse.

"I am an ex-soldier, was married in France, and have two children—the youngest 6 months old. We live close to the park, and my wife can go over there all day. If you can find some one who has an old baby buggy to give us, we will surely appreciate it, as the two little ones are too much for my wife without a buggy. R. B."

Your wife has my sympathy, tearing about after one and "toting" the other. I hope some one will send you a buggy.

Shoes Beyond Means.

"I am the mother of six children, 9, 7, 5, 3, 2 years, and a baby 3 months. If any one runs across shoes no longer wanted for children I should be more than grateful if they were sent to me, as my 5, 3 and 2-year-olds have been walking on the inner soles of their shoes for some time, and the uppers are gone, so they can't be fixed. If some one will send their no more wanted shoes I will gladly pay postage. Mrs. G."

Every mother knows how pattering little feet soon wear out the sturdiest boots. Any offers of shoes will be passed on gladly to Mrs. G.

Keeping Them Together.

"I am writing for a worthy mother who works to keep her four little children together. She is trying to make a home and cannot afford to buy furniture. Anything in the way of beds, bedding, chairs, dishes, etc., would be appreciated. She would be glad to pay cartage. Mrs. E. V."

Pieces of furniture in dark corners could brighten the faces of this little family if they were brought into the light.

Give Him a Boost.

"Has anyone a writing desk to give to a 16 year old boy who wants one badly. He is a cripple and is trying to learn a trade in a technical high school so he will be able to support himself. His father has been dead several years and an older brother is trying to support the family. The boy is unable to get outside a great deal and he would like to have a writing desk of his own where he can keep his books and papers, but the family cannot afford to buy one. M. G. H."

If this boy only can fix up his cosy little corner for his own possessions, I'm sure he will get along famously in his studies. Who is willing to give him a boost?

Wake Up Rested

DOWNY REST Bed Springs rest you all over. The instant you lie down on a DOWNY REST Spring, your body relaxes—any position is comfortable; DOWNY REST Springs immediately adjust themselves to the contours of the body; they respond to the slightest movement—the slightest pressure.

When you awaken you are fully awake—the muscles of your body are completely rested. Circulation uninterrupted from too much pressure on some parts of the body and not enough on other parts, eliminates aches and numbness.

Those who are accustomed to "tossing and rolling"—often for hours—go to sleep quickly and without effort because DOWNY REST Springs are soft, cooling and encourage the body to remain in the same position. Ask your dealer—ask him today.

Delightful bits of light and color

THE instant you enter a room lighted by Almco Lamps, you are conscious of their lovely glow of light, the richness of their coloring, the grace and decorative value of their designs. Yet they are in no way obtrusive; the delicate restraint of their beauty is a large part of their charm.

To secure complete harmony, Almco Lamps are designed as a single unit, shade, base, fixtures and all details of trimming and finish. Their sale is restricted to the better stores, where they can easily be identified by the Almco tag or label on both shade and base.

1387—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material and ½ yard of 32 inch lining.

How to Use Patterns

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

HERE is just the design for a blouse to wear with a skirt, and will be appropriate for either a young girl or older woman. The pattern, which opens in the front at the neck, is to be slipped on over the head and at the waist is shirred and fitted with a casing for elastic.

The pattern is perforated for different ways of finishing the neck. One way shows the high neck finished with a small rounding collar, while the other way shows a low neck line and no collar—just a narrow facing of the binding that finishes the opening at the neck—used to finish the sleeves.

The inset pockets each side of the front give a sort of tailored appearance to the blouse. Of course the blouse may be made without pockets if one desires.

The sleeve pattern is given in two lengths, and if the blouse is to be worn as a tailored suit the full length sleeves with cuffs will look well, otherwise the short sleeves will probably be preferred.

Cotton crepe is fine for blouses, as it lends itself beautifully to embroidery. Then, of course there are the various crepes, such as crepe de chine, crepe meteor, crepe georgette, pongee, or taffeta.

An apron that practically covers the dress, like pattern No. 1290, is useful and every housewife should have at least two.

This is a good pattern, the opening almost meeting in the back, and in place by being buttoned to the shoulder straps that are sewed to the front and to the shoulders. Two small buttonholes in linen tape should have been worked and turned in and hemmed to

How to Use the Patterns

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

HERE is just the design for a blouse to wear with a plaited skirt, and will be appropriate for either a young girl or an older woman. The pattern, No. 1387, opens in the front at the neck, and is to be slipped on over the head. The band at the waist is shirred, and is filled with a casing for elastic.

The pattern is perforated for two different ways of finishing the neck. One way shows the high neck line, finished with a small round collar, while the other way shows a lower cut line and no collar—just a continuation of the binding that finishes the opening at the neck used to finish.

The inset pockets each side of the front give a sort of tailored appearance to the blouse. Of course the pockets may be made without them, if one desires.

The sleeve pattern is given in two lengths and if the blouse is to be part of a tailored suit the full length sleeve with cuffs will look well—otherwise the short sleeves will doubtless be preferred.

Cotton crepe is fine for blouses and lends itself beautifully to embroidery. Then, of course there are the crepes, georgette, pongee, or taffeta.

An apron that practically covers one dress, like pattern No. 1390, is most useful and every housewife should own at least two.

This is a good pattern, the skirt part almost meeting in the back and kept in place by being buttoned to the fitted shape that are sewed to the apron at the shoulders. Two small lengths of ribbon tape should have both edges turned in and hemmed to the under side of the apron at each side of the back to sew the buttons to. They will serve for greater strength, and if one catches the apron in moving about it will be much less apt to tear.

Rick rack braid makes a strong and attractive finish for all edgese. Baste it to the under side so that one of the pointed edges extends, showing well from the right side. Two stitchings will be necessary to hold it in place—one close to the apron edge and the second one about one-quarter of an inch in, so the opposite edge of the braid will be caught.

Unusually large pockets go with the pattern, and they will surely hold all that any one will ever need to put in them.

Pattern No. 1,389 is a jumper dress, one of the most popular styles of dresses for girls and women that has been seen for a long time. This pattern is cut in a deep point in the front at the neck, which will make it especially easy to get in and out of, besides showing the guimpe attractively. There are perforations each side of the front at the waist line, which indicate slashes that are to be cut and bound and through which the belt or sash is slipped. Not having the belt show across the front will give a length of line that will be particularly becoming to a plump little girl.

A pocket is inset in the skirt each side of the front, and this part of the work of making has to be done with extra care. In binding the edges and turning to the wrong side to sew the pocket, handle lightly so as not to stretch the opening, and after the pockets are sewed in place stitch the facing through to the skirt at each end. The guimpe buttons down the front and has a pretty collar and the turned back cuffs to the short sleeves give the right finish there. Having a separate guimpe makes the dress serviceable, and of course three or four guimpes are none too many to keep one looking fresh and clean. A dress of this kind would be fine for traveling.

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of broken marriages? Are there many happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything, with marriage as an institution?

Dr. H. G. Wells, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages. Mr. Gerould says, were "apparently successful."

"Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question: "Marriage—what do you think of it?" Address Marriage Editor, The Sunday Tribune.

Baby Needs a New Pair of Shoes.

There they are on a corner of the couch, a little dusty, a little shabby, and still as a mouse after a rollicking day on two busy feet.

"Something awfully alive about a baby's shoes, isn't there, Nancy?" I whisper.

Nancy smiles tenderly, then suddenly leans forward. "Just look at that!" she sighs.

It is a hole in the heel. But I swell out as proud as a rooster. Paid $3 for those shoes a week ago, and if the little beggar isn't through 'em already!

"By the way, Nancy, where are my old shoes—those comfortable ones?"

"Wherever the baby left them, dear. You know she just loves those old shoes!"

We both search. One of them turns up in the bathtub, its laces all tangled where wee fingers have threaded them in and out. The other one is in the woodbox. And there is something far down in the toe. Ugh! Something wet and clammy, like an eel or a worm. It is a soggy piece of toast, moistened by rosy lips and poked by mischievous hands into daddy's shoe.

"Little rascal!" I chuckle again.

Next morning Nancy hands me a package. "Wish you'd have these half-soled today. They're my old shoes, but I'd rather wear them and save the money. The baby's got to go to college, you know, and——"

"Yes, Nancy, all right."

Half a block down the street she comes running after me. "Dear, I'm going to Mrs. Smith's tomorrow and her children have the prettiest clothes. You know that hole in the baby's shoe?"

"Shall I buy her a pair like those we saw?"

"Those little patent leather ones with the white uppers?"

"Yes, and the fancy buttons."

"Won't she be cunning?"

"And they're only $4."

"Why, that's not so bad!"

"I should say not!"

"Good-by, dear."

"Good-by, Nancy." O. H.

Married in Haste.

It was in 1917, when love ran high and hasty marriages were frequent, that I met the man who won my heart.

I was helping mothers, sweethearts, and wives find their loved ones at the Hostess house when one day my eyes met those of a soldier who drew my attention as no man had ever done before. An acquaintance was easily effected in those days, and before long a friendship sprang up between the lonely soldier and myself. He spoke with a marked foreign accent, yet I thought little of what the uniform might be covering. A hasty marriage followed, a hurried good-by, and then I was left to dream and wait for my soldier's return.

A year passed and a small son and myself awaited the return of our loved one. When he returned my eyes began to open. After taking me to his home town, we settled in a humble apartment surrounded by foreigners.

My husband preferred speaking his native tongue. I attempted to master the language, but failed. I enjoyed books. I liked good company. I cared only for good music and the best plays. I could not fit into the life of my husband. He indulged in loud talking, he was not particular about his company, and our young son soon became rough and uncouth from the example set by his father.

I vainly attempted to share my mate's life, enjoy his friends, and accept their ideals. It was futile. I was soon a subject of ridicule.

More than once in the wee, small hours of the morning my husband returned from a drinking bout so intoxicated that he was more a beast than a man. Finally, my patience broke. I gathered my few possessions and, taking my son, fled.

Is marriage a failure? "It is," say I, "if you aren't sure of the man you are marrying." E. F.

It's All Wrong.

Replying to O. K.'s letter in answer to George, I would like her to explain where she gets her ideas. It is not necessary for a woman serpent to have stung George; others are getting it every day, and if O. K. will read the papers she will see for herself.

Marriage hampers a man's present because he has no liberty, less enjoyment, more trouble, and if unable to agree, the woman has the nerve to demand alimony. All wives don't sacrifice all of their time at home with husband and children, either.

Yes, marriage is a victory for any woman, because it assures her future—alimony. What man ever received alimony? What woman refused alimony?

If O. K. is 20 and wears 'em short and uses rouge, and admits being called a flapper by some, she'd better keep away from the government offices in Washington, D. C., as they will send her home. FRANK.

Some Good Advice.

Married life is sure no cinch,
With its heartaches and its trouble.
You can't go out or have no fun,
'Cause now your life is double.

When hubby goes off to the club,
Wifey goes to mother.
Now, that's just where the trouble starts—
They both want to boss each other.

The making up is terrible
When wifey starts to cry.
But everything is settled
When hubby starts to lie.

And now he's promised to be good,
And everything's all right.
And now they promised not to quarrel,
And they won't—till tomorrow night.

Married life is sure no cinch,
And it always is the man.
Now I'll give you good advice,
Stay single if you can.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a young girl four months, and everything was going nice till one day. I did not hear from her in two weeks, and I tried to see her after working hours but never could see her. I wrote a few letters but never got an answer.

One night I met her, and we had a little talk, and she said she was sick and didn't have time to write me. Then she told me she was going out with her old friend.

Kindly advise me what to do, as I love her too dearly to lose her.

"WORRIED."

You have a rival, Worried, and, alas, I fear a deadly one. The girl's actions indicate it plainly. Don't wait for any more disappointments from her. There are other girls whom you may learn to love quite as deeply.

You Were at Fault.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a fellow of 22. He became angry at me on account of not keeping an appointment with him. I have not heard from him as yet, and as I love him dearly, would like to know what you advise. BRIGHT EYES."

If he had failed to keep an appointment with you, Bright Eyes, you would have expected an apology. Now, you must do the same thing to reinstate yourself. You were at fault.

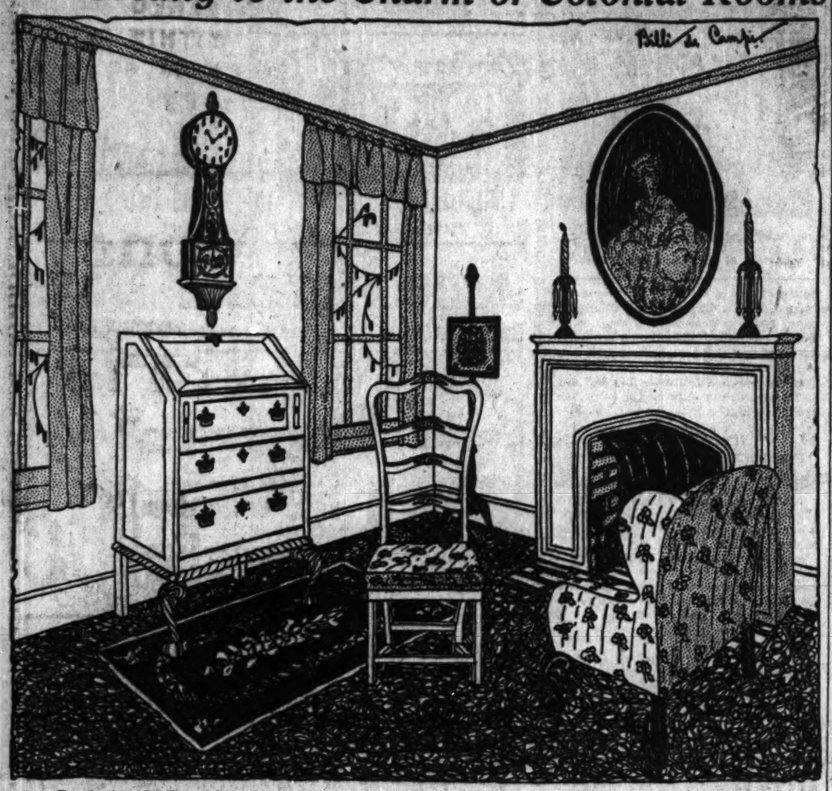
Characteristic Accessories Contribute Greatly to the Charm of Colonial Rooms



By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to house building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

ROOMS which are furnished in Colonial style are almost always satisfactory. They are especially fascinating if the furnishings are supplemented by characteristic accessories and pieces of needlework. Take, for example, Colonial bedrooms. They are already pleasing in themselves, but they can be made still more enjoyable by the addition of such articles as crossstitched samplers, rag rugs or carpets, hooked rugs, little footstools with cross stitched tops, and appropriate bed and window hangings.

Each of these articles is easy enough to make, when those which are ready made are unobtainable or of a prohibitive price. It is usually difficult to find an original Colonial sampler, for instance, but it is not at all hard to make a good copy of one. It can be given the semblance of antiquity by being dipped in diluted coffee. The cross stitching is usually done in light weight worsted. The patterns worked out on the samplers generally consist of alphabets in large and small letters, or some quaint little verse, or fragments taken from the Scriptures. A stiff little border is worked around the edge, and various little patterns—birds, beasts, flowers, fruits, etc.—are scattered here and there, wherever space permits.

The work is done on coarse linen or crosstitch canvas. The shape is square or perpendicularly oblong—not panel shaped, but almost square. Patterns and letters may be copied from books which contain cross stitch designs. The colors used in most of the eighteenth century samplers [such as we have been describing], are black, greens, yellows, and blues, with blues predominating. These eighteenth century samplers are more interesting than those of the seventeenth century, which are more like charts of various kinds of stitches.

Pieced and patchwork quilts, though they are quite different, are both adaptable to Colonial bedrooms. The entire surface of a pieced quilt is composed of contiguous pieces of material which are hand stitched together in a geometrical pattern. The surface of a patchwork quilt is decorated with appliqued patches of another color and material, at definite intervals, so that the pattern is silhouetted on the background. These patches are quilted down in such a way that the lines of the quilting emphasize the design.

A young girl's bedroom in the home of a southern family owes its interest largely to its colonial accessories. The low, four poster bed has not footboard, and the patchwork bedcover comes down over the ends and sides, above a valance that reaches to the floor. There is a rush bottom chair at the bedside, and another at the quaint little writing desk. Above the low chest of drawers a mirror in an olive wood frame is hung. The small patterned flowered wall paper, which has a white ground, matches the valances and drapes at the windows. The glass curtains are of ruffled white Swiss. Two of the most interesting features of the room are a painted dower chest and a bride box. The old colonial custom was to have a dower chest, which was filled with household linens for the young girl who had hopes of being a bride, and a bride box, which was somewhat smaller than the chest, and was usually rounded at the ends. This box was to contain the linens, laces, ribbons, and other finery of the trousseau. The chest in this young person's room is painted cream color, with dull blue panelling. In the center panel of the front there is a bunch of four plums, with leaves, painted in their natural colors. The other two front panels and those at each end of the chest are decorated with stiff sprays of flowers and leaves in bright colors. The bride box is painted to correspond. These two painted chests, with their linings of vivid scarlet add a note of life and color which gives the room a distinctive air.

In another colonial bedroom in a New England home the richly carved mahogany high four poster has a red calico tester valance. The counterpane is white. The overdrapes at the windows match the tester valance and the glass curtains are of white net. The floor is painted deep taupe, the woodwork French gray, and the walls a light gray. There are several hand woven rag mats on the floor, in combinations of black, gray, and white. The wing chair is upholstered in the same glazed chintz of which the dressing table cover is made. The little mahogany footstool is upholstered in black velvet, with a cross stitched design of flowers in the center. The two Windsor chairs are painted to match the woodwork.

Dining rooms in colonial homes almost invariably have open fireplaces. A lovely one which I saw recently has fire dogs and other accessories of the hearth of brass. All of the furniture is walnut. The chairs have high backs, rounded at each end, and filled in with cane webbing. They are surmounted by carved pedimental pieces, each of which is supported by two turned pillars to which the rest of the back is fastened. The plain framed seats are filled in with cane webbing. The front legs and the straining rails are turned. The lower part of the carved cupboard contains two drawers. These are surmounted by a cupboard with receding sides. The two front corners of the flat top rest on turned columns, which rise from the front corners of the drawers. The cupboard door and the drawers are carved. The whole is supported on four short baluster legs, with cross bars of the same design. The dining table is long and narrow, and the small console table is square. A mirror, in a carved, black frame, hangs above the small table. The yarn rug is a dull sage green. The glass curtains are pale green, the overdrapes of glazed flowered chints have Du Barry rose as their dominant color, and the walls are oyster green. Brass candelabra and candlesticks are used.

In the large colonial living room of a seashore home, the window draperies are of heavy, ecru linen. Glass curtains are omitted in order that the ever changing view of the sea may be enjoyed. The walls are painted robin's egg blue. The mahogany Chippendale set consists of a sofa, two ladder back chairs, an arm chair, a wing chair, and a chest of drawers with decorative brass mounts. The sofa, wing chair, and the seats of the other chairs are upholstered in flowered chintz, the ground of which matches the draperies. Above the chest of drawers there is a large mirror in a Chippendale gilt frame, which is flanked by a pair of brass sconces. The andirons for the open fireplace are of brass, as are the candlesticks on the mantel shelf. A banjo clock hangs over a small writing desk, in the wall space between two windows. The front of the clock is decorated with pictures, which are painted under the glass, and the framework is gilt. An old portrait, in a plain oval gilt and ebony frame is hung above the mantel.

Nicest Compliment I Ever Got

What was the nicest compliment you ever got? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

More Than Unexpected.

He was big and blunt and not especially given to compliments. While he was away on his vacation, a bouquet of white water lilies reached me, with the following note:

"I might have sent you some yellow ones, but send them all white, symbolic of your character." M. P.

His Place of Refuge.

The superintendent of the school in which I was eighth grade teacher frequently came and stood quietly at the back of the room, watching the children at their work.

No reference was ever made concerning his observations until one day the following explanation was given: "When things go wrong with my work in other parts of the school, I like to come into your room, because it is so restful." A. H. S.

The Adeptness of Auntie.

Several years ago I used to do a little painting which my young nephew greatly admired.

One morning when he came to my house I gave him some cream puffs that I had just made.

After thoroughly enjoying one of them, he looked up at me and said: "Well, auntie, what can't you do?" B. M.

He Wasn't Worried.

I was a stranger in a large city. One busy noon hour a friend and I went to a restaurant for lunch. We left, each thinking the other had paid the bill. When we reached home the subject came up, and we both felt humiliated over it.

The next day I hunted up the place, ordered another meal, and when I went to the desk explained to the clerk the incident of the day before.

He smiled and said, "O, I saw you going out without paying, but I knew you'd come back." M. D.

They Little Rock.

Being somewhat timid, speaking in public was a trial for me. However, it was in connection with a little speech I made before a literary society that I received my nicest compliment.

On this particular occasion I had experienced all the tremors and quakings peculiar to my public appearances, and when I sat down wondered whether the shaking of my knees had been visible to the public eye.

A friend turned to me and said, "I think you are the most comfortable speaker I ever heard." B. L. S.

Stick to Senreco and Your Teeth Will Stick to You

Have White, Radiant Teeth That Will Compel Unstinted Admiration.

Don't neglect your gums, whatever else you do, or you'll be sorry later on.

Keep them strong, sturdy and full of life. Bear in mind that a hearty plant won't grow in that soil. Neither will unhealthy gums produce good teeth.

Your dentist is one of your best friends—don't forget that—see him often—many thousands of men and women are enjoying health today because of the dentist's knowledge and skill.

You can have white teeth so radiantly clean and fascinating and so free from film or coating that they will compel unstinted admiration. You can have firm, healthy gums with no fear of disease if you will only visit the dentist occasionally and use Senreco tooth paste night and morning.

Senreco is a dentist's formula, a combination so perfect that besides being the finest cleanser for teeth and the most effective dentifrices, is an active exterminator of the vicious germs of pyorrhea that all too common and alarming disease that attacks the gums and causes them to recede and grow soft, tender and spongy.

Get a tube of Senreco today and the good results will astonish you—in just a few days your teeth will radiate purity. Stick to Senreco and your teeth will stick to you.

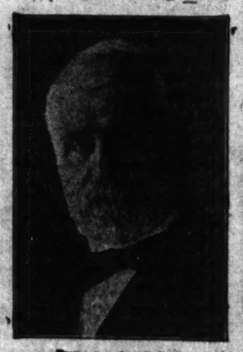
Doctor at 82 Finds Mothers Prefer His Formula to New-Fangled Salts And Coal Tar Remedies for Babies

Judgment of 1892 vindicated by world's approval of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a simple vegetable compound for constipation—So safe thousands give it to babes in arms—Now has largest sale in the world.

WHEN a man is in the 83rd year of his age, as I am, there are certain things he has learned that only time can teach him. The basis of treating sickness has not changed since I left Medical College in 1875, nor since I placed on the market the laxative prescription I had used in my practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of my Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other mild laxative herbs with pepsin.

Recently new medicines have been brought out for constipation that contain calomel, which is mercury, salts of various kinds, minerals, and coal tar. These are all drastic purges, many of them dangerous, and the medical profession is warning the public against them. Certain coal tar products will depress the heart; certain salts give rise to intestinal poisoning, impaction and rupture of the intestines. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.



From a recent portrait of DR. W. B. CALDWELL, Founder of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Born Shelbyville, Ills., 1839

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with pills and powders and strong drugs, even if disguised in candy? My remedy, too, costs less than most others, only about a cent a dose. A bottle such as you can find in any drug store, will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the babe in arms because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. In the proper dose, given in the directions, it is equally effective at all ages. Elderly people will find it especially ideal.

The formula of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is on the cover of every bottle, and the ingredients have the endorsement of the U. S. Pharmacopoeia.

$10,000 Worth of Syrup Pepsin Free

In remembrance of my 83rd birthday I have set aside the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars to be given away in half-ounce bottles of my Syrup Pepsin. Only one Free Trial bottle to a family. All are constipated now and then, and here is an opportunity for you and others to try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE. Ask for your free bottle today, simply sending name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Do not postpone this.

MEN'S FASHIONS

By A. T. Gallico.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

GARB FOR THE TENNIS COURT.

NEW YORK, — [Special Correspondence.]—A friend of mine expressed amazement when I mentioned the other day that I intended writing an article on tennis clothes. "But what is there to say about them?" he asked. "There aren't any fashions for tennis—men don't dress up for the tennis courts—they just want to be comfortable."

"Well, and aren't there more ways than one of being comfortable?" I returned. "Do you ever see any men playing tennis, that is, at a respectable court where real tennis takes place, in an old pair of khaki trousers and a shirt with a neckband and no collar? And yet that is a custom which would be termed comfortable by a great many people."

For there is just as definite a costume for this game as there is for golf or for horseback riding or for swimming. It is simple enough, to be sure—so simple that it is no wonder that my friend was surprised that I should talk of it at all. But such as it is, any one who wishes to be correctly dressed for the game should follow it.

Just as in golf, and perhaps more so, for tennis is a more strenuous game, the idea is to get as much comfort as possible and yet have a neat and attractive appearance. And so the tennis uniform, one might say, is best adapted to this end. Every one knows that white is the coolest possibility in the summer, as it throws off the rays of the sun, whereas dark colors absorb them. And coolness is above all things to be sought in as lively a game as tennis, which always takes place in a sunny spot.

A proper tennis costume is white trousers of flannel, plain or with a stripe, or duck or cotton twill; a white shirt with a soft attached collar, a sweater or sport coat to wear as far as the court, a white hat if desired, and rubber soled shoes without spikes or heels. Probably more men, professional and amateur, wear the flannel trousers, but they do not predominate noticeably. Many men wear them possibly because they consider them dressier and better looking. But from a standpoint of comfort, the duck or twill is obviously more to be desired, since flannel is a material which holds in the heat of the body, while the air can go through the other cloth with ease.

And from an economic point of view duck trousers have the advantage of having a far lower initial price and a correspondingly low upkeep. For several hard games of tennis mean that the trousers are ready for dry cleaner or laundry, and whereas the duck or twill may be laundered countless times and come back each time fresh and white with a reasonable bill attached, the flannels must be dry cleaned at a higher cost, and after a certain number of such trips they become yellowish, due to the gradual loss of the sulphur, which is used to give flannels the whiteness that is not theirs by nature.

Here and there you will see men playing tennis in white knickers. But this style is not recommended, for knickers are hotter than long trousers. The binding at the knee obviates the possibility of sufficient ventilation, not to mention the long woolen stockings which must be worn.

Until ready for action on the court a tie should be worn with the attached collar white shirt. When the game starts it may be removed, the top button of the shirt unbuttoned, and the comfort of an open neck indulged in. Players find it desirable for greatest freedom to have short sleeves on their shirts. They may be bought in this abbreviated form at some places, but if one already has long sleeved shirts it is a good idea to have them cut off at home, as it is a nuisance to have to roll them up at the court with the possibility of having them slip down at a crucial moment. Besides which, the effect is neater.

As for outer garments to go with tennis attire, anything in the way of a sweater or a sport coat is proper. Many men like to wear a light weight slipover sweater with or without sleeves, to warm up until the game gets under way. A popular sweater of this order is one of light tan, of almost feather weight. There is a novelty sweater like the one in the drawing, third from the left, which has three pockets across the front at the bottom. But heavier sweaters, slipover, or coat, shawl collar or V neck, according to preference, are worn to a great extent. All varieties of sport coat are seen at the courts—tweed, cheviot, anything that is worn with knickers or white flannels elsewhere than at a tennis game. An especially popular coat for tennis is a jersey cloth jacket. These coats come in greens, blues, and oxfords.

Occasionally there is in evidence a blazer, such as used to dot the landscape in countless numbers, but which have now subsided almost to extinction. It takes a brave man to venture forth in one of these brilliant coats these days.

As for shoes and hats, I will mention them later in the week.

For Finer Embroidery

Ask your dealer for this new and better hoop with a positive-locking device and velvet cork cushions holding tissue or toweling with vice-like grip. Beautifully finished—strongest hoop made—cinch to winding—can't soil nor injure finest fabrics or catch threads—can't snap, splinter, shrink, swell nor warp—designed to overcome every objection to every other style hoop. 4, 5, 6, 7 in. rounds only. If not carried by your dealer send us his name and 25c (25c west of Rockies) and we will send you one postpaid. State size wanted.

Embro sort-cushioned Embroidery Hoops—same as Adjusto except for an extra strong coil spring in place of the positive-locking device—holds extra taut every sort of fabric—30c each (35c west of Rockies.) 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 in. rounds only.

Both Hoops approved by Modern Priscilla Proving Plant—the only embroidery hoops so approved.

De Luxe Adjusto—heavy 14-kt. gold plate—5 in. size only—ideal for gift and prize purposes—at jewelers and fine specialty stores. $2.50 each. Sent postpaid if your dealer cannot supply you.

Merchants can obtain any of these hoops from their regular jobbers.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Dorothy Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

NEVER DID THINGS BY HALVES.

DEAREST JACK:—Tonight the stars are shining above the tall, dark buildings—and I'm so lonely—if only I could walk with you and talk with you. Do you remember that little old song we used to sing—"Let's take an old fashioned walk—"? I cannot walk and talk with you now, and there is no one else in the world I care to walk and talk with.

The other girls are out riding with Sylvia in her new car tonight, but I wanted to be alone here with your letter and my beautiful dream of the time when we—you and I—can take a walk under the stars in your little mountain town!

Jack, I'm greatly interested in your bridge building project. I'm so proud to think you have succeeded where the older engineer failed. Of course, you did not say that, but that is what it amounts to, just the same. I know! You could not have failed, dear—because you are you.

When I think of that new cabin in the Rockies, my heart almost breaks with longing. What is this little flat—with a street for a canyon and a faucet for a waterfall—a fern in the window for a forest, and an artificial bird song whistled on the talking machine?

Typewriter keys click all day long under my fingers in the stuffy old office. O, it's all right Jack, really. Every one is lovely to me, and I ought to be happy and contented here like the good little girl I'm not! But how can I be contented when my real home is a thousand miles away, where you, dear you, are waiting for me?

Well, the first of June is not far away, although it seems like centuries. Am I foolish to write this way? Well, it's just me, dear. And I couldn't write any other way—you being you, and me being me. Mother used to say I never did things by halves, so how can I help loving you with all the heart and soul and strength I have? And why shouldn't I?

The clock keeps ticking. "Five more weeks—five more weeks—five more weeks." And every second brings me nearer to the time of your coming. And then—you will not go back to your canyon and your strenuous labors alone.

Tonight I can almost feel the pressure of your thoughts upon my heart. The big, bright stars are shining in through my window—and I know they are peeping through the wildows of my little cabin so far away. How I envy them!

Five more weeks——

Good night Jack. I think of you every hour of every day.

Your own,

BETH.

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a well-known skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

That First Love Affair

"Puppy love, calf love"—
That is what the older folk unfeelingly call the first golden love affair of the boy and the girl. But to youth it is a serious matter. Sometimes it shapes lives. Sometimes it deepens into tragedy. But most of the time it is just a roaring comedy of the teens—a comedy that will bear telling now that its principal actors are older, with perhaps a bit of frost in the hair.
What was your "puppy love" affair? Can you tell it now without a wrench of the heart—with a laugh, say? If so—
The Tribune will pay $5 for each story published on "My 'Puppy Love' Story." Write on one side of the paper and make your story brief. Address Puppy Love Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

BITTERNESS OF DISILLUSION.

IT is a weeping shame when one becomes so callous that one is willing to retail one's shattered infant romance for a bit of cold cash. However, il faut de l'argent, which in this case means, the rent's due again.

While I was a sophomore in high school a young man came to our town to conduct a series of evangelistic services in the church of which dad was pastor. He was a most beautiful young man—I use the adjective advisedly—with the crisp curls of an Apollo and the languishing lashes and melting eye—two of them, in fact—of a Romeo. Every female in town between the ages of 15 and 50 was promptly assailed by the pangs of religious fervor, and tumbled pell mell over each other in their eagerness.

The evangelist, naturally, stayed at our house and I became the envy of every girl in school. I alone could tell what shaving soap our idol used, how ravishing he looked in his shirt sleeves, and whether he liked his eggs hard or soft. Our druggist told dad that within an hour and a half after I had told the crowd of the young man's preference for a certain tooth powder he was completely sold out of that commodity.

But, alackaday! Our hero caught the flu. For five days he tossed feverishly on the guest room bed while my good mother plastered and doctored and fed him; and I, my heart in my throat with anguish and dread, was kept rigorously away from his room. But on the sixth day I was allowed to carry his supper tray to him. Tremblingly I fluffed up my hair, donned my prettiest middy, and ravaged my pansy bed of its choicest blooms for the dear invalid.

I rapped gently upon his door. I entered. And once again I looked upon that beloved countenance. Then I hastily set the tray down and closed my eyes, vainly trying not to see what I had seen. Something seemed to have gone wrong with the beloved countenance. I know of nothing which detracts more from the romantic appearance of a man than a five days' growth of beard and a large blue woolen sock about the throat. The erstwhile Romeo had both. Also he snuffed—dreadfully! My hero! Snuffling! And he wore a nightshirt! Not a debonair pair of silk-frogged pajamas, but a nightshirt, a hideous woolly one with brown splotches! And the scent of the lowly onion from the quite plebian plaster on his manly bosom well nigh overpowered me!

Well, that's all. I've never used his favorite tooth powder since.

Learned Her Lesson.

My little daughter is fond of cake and has a habit of looking over the plate carefully and selecting the largest piece. I have explained to her repeatedly that the pieces are all about the same size, and have labored long and faithfully to correct this fault.

An old school friend, whom I had not seen for a number of years, dropped in on us unexpectedly one day recently and remained for the week-end.

I served cake and cream one evening with dinner, and when the cake was passed to our guest our chagrin and embarrassment can only be imagined when daughter remarked, "Mrs. Brown took the biggest piece on the dish, mother."

R. F. W.

All Eyes on Mother.

My small son was having his first meal in a large café and was much thrilled over every detail.

As we were finishing our second course he looked up and exclaimed in his loud, clear voice, "O, isn't this nice, mother, and nothing burned?"

I would like to have explained to the interested audience that we had a young and inexperienced cook at home.

C. E. K.

It Sometimes Happens.

We were disappointed when my brother married a quiet and unattractive girl and discussed it at length in the family circle.

Soon after the marriage we were all invited over to the new home for dinner. My small brother greatly enjoyed the meal the bride served.

As we were getting up from the table he embarrassed us all by remarking, "Mama, Henry must have married her because she's such a good cook."

G. S.

Spoken in Jest.

We had recently moved into town and were unacquainted with our neighbors. One day I made a strawberry shortcake, and just as I was setting it out to cool, one of my neighbors looked over and smiled pleasantly.

I nodded and she said, "That looks mighty good."

In a joking spirit I answered, "You'd better come over for dinner and have some," and never thought of it again.

As we were finishing the last luscious strawberry at dinner, the neighbor appeared at the door and said, "O, I have been looking forward to that shortcake all afternoon."

J. H.

Light on the Subject.

When I was a freshman at college the dean of women called a meeting of all the freshmen girls. The subject for discussion was rouge and powder.

At the close of the lecture she came over to me and said in a loud tone, "Is the light good in your room?"

Thinking she was inquiring whether it was suitable for study, I replied, "O, yes, indeed."

"Well," was the dean's answer, "your face doesn't look it."

B. D. T.

Anything to Oblige.

I had been out late the night before and consequently felt sleepy in church that Sunday.

In a doze I faintly heard the minister mention my name, saying, "Mr. Jayar will lead the congregation."

I jumped up. "Sure," I said. "Where shall I lead them?"

JAYAR.

'TIZ' FOR TENDER, SORE, TIRED FEET

Ah! what relief. No more tired feet; no more burning feet, swollen, bad smelling, sweaty feet. No more pain in corns, callouses or bunions. No matter what ails your feet or what under the sun you've tried without getting relief, just use "TIZ."

"TIZ" draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet; "TIZ" is magical, "TIZ" is grand; "Tiz" will cure your foot troubles so you'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't seem tight and your feet will never, never hurt or get sore, swollen or tired.

Get a box at any drug or department store, and get relief for a few cents.

How to Make Strawberry Jam For 10c a Half-pound Glass

Entirely New Method That Never Fails and Takes Only Ten Minutes

Everyone loves strawberry jam. For a spread on bread or hot biscuits nothing seems to equal it. Its wonderful flavor makes children of us all. Until now, however, an expert was required to make it. Until now, also, it has been expensive. Certo, a natural product of fruit, has solved the problem so that everyone can make and eat this delicious conserve.

To Make Strawberry Jam by the Certo Process:

Crush well in single layers about two quarts of ripe berries, using wooden masher and discarding all green parts. Measure 4 cups crushed berries, add the juice of one lemon and 7½ leveled cups (3½ lbs.) sugar into good sized preserving kettle. Mix well; stir hard and constantly. Bring to vigorous boil and boil hard 1 full minute, continually stirring. Take from fire and add ½ bottle (scant ½ cup) Certo, stirring it in well. Let stand 5 minutes only, by the clock, stirring occasionally; skim and pour quickly into sterilized glasses. Result is 10 half-pound glasses of strawberry jam for total cost of 97 cents (strawberries at 30c a box and sugar at 6c lb.).

This Certo process banishes all the guess work or worry, as perfect results are certain. Unlike the old method of "pound for pound" mixture boiled for thirty or more minutes, with consequent loss of fruit juice and flavor being boiled away, the economical Certo Process requires only one minute's boiling and thereby saves all the fruit to produce 60 per cent more jam.

Certo is pure—contains no gelatine or preservative. Jams and jellies made this way last indefinitely. Certo positively saves time, fruit, flavor and guess work. It makes all kinds of jams and jellies with fresh or canned fruit—some you have never made before. It is highly endorsed by national authorities and cooking experts. Every woman who tries it recommends it to her friends and says she'll never be without it.

The above recipe and nearly 100 others are in the Certo Book of Recipes which will be given to you by your grocer when you get Certo. Extra copies sent free if you write to the Pectin Sales Company, Inc., 105 East Avenue, Rochester, N. Y.

Get a bottle of Certo from your grocer or druggist today. Start the new—the sure, quick, economical way of making jams and jellies. You'll never return to the old "hit or miss" method.

If your grocer or druggist does not have Certo, please call Leeds Brokerage Co., Sunnyside 1453, to learn where to obtain it.

Gov't Balloon Silks — Cream color and 38½ inches wide. It makes the most practical drapes one could imagine. We've sold several large manufacturers thousands of yards for men's shirts—there is no prettier, more practical material for women's and children's dresses. In other words, it can be used for almost any purpose. (One of Chicago's largest and finest theaters bought 800 yards for their drapes.) Government cost, we understand, was around $2.00 a yard. Price, per yard, 45c

GOVERNMENT BLANKETS — Reclaimed—but perfect blankets. Supposed to be all cotton, but there are a lot of wool and wool nap in the lot. Big enough for a big bed. Each, 69c

U. S. GOVERNMENT TYPEWRITERS — Royal No. 5, Monarch, and Remingtons. We bought 3,000 of them, all in perfect shape and condition. We believe they cost about $100 each. $34.50

U. S. GOVERNMENT AUSTRALIAN JAM — FULL TWO POUND CAN. We have what we believe to be the very last lot of Government Australian Jam. This is, as you know, the very best quality possible to produce. Nothing but sugar and fruit, and it's all in the standard fruit. There is no finer jam in all the world. 19c

5-lb. Jar Pure Jam — We believe this to be the finest Jam money can buy or skill can produce. 5 lbs. of Pure Fruit in each jar. In Strawberry, Raspberry, Blackberry or Pineapple. Price, per jar, 95c

U. S. NAVY SHOES — Every boy who served in the War knows "Rosenwasser" Navy Shoes. They're the best that the Government bought. We have 6,000 pairs. New, black, and, in our opinion, they're the best value possible in a man's shoe. $4.95

GOV'T O. D. BLANKETS — Every Blanket is perfect, as good as a new blanket, and in fact we have found 60% are new. Big enough for any bed, as they're all size 60x84 and over and weigh around 4 lbs. apiece. We believe the Gov't cost was $5 to $8. $2.29

GOVERNMENT SUMMER UNDERWEAR FOR MEN — Shirts and drawers. In balbriggan and ribbed Summer weight. In perfect condition, though reclaimed. Garment, 15c

HUCK TOWELING — Unbleached—good quality. Ideal for kitchen or roller toweling. Specially priced for tomorrow at, yard, 6c

U. S. NAVY OVERALLS — Made of the heaviest blue or brown denim without bib. Jumpers to match. New cost to the government about $2.00 a garment. Each, 85c

U. S. GOVERNMENT IMPORTED CASTILE SOAP — 4 lb. bar. We understand the Government paid about 50c to 60c a pound and that it's the real Imported Castile. 15c

U. S. ARMY CANVAS COTS—New — $2.85

A little story about these canvas cots. Most collapsible canvas cots are made of 12, 14 or 16 oz. white duck—ours is the only cot made of 30 oz. No other make is waterproof. Ours is absolutely; and what's more important, the other makes sell for $3.75 to $6. And our price is only $2.85.

U. S. GOVERNMENT GILLETTE RAZORS — With 3 blades and in khaki kit. New. It must be a regular $5 set. Our price is 69c

Mandel Brothers' June sale of summer frocks

Here, with warm weather scarce begun, is a chance to choose women's, misses' and girls' modish frocks at mid-summer savings

Women's summer frocks, many imported

Group 1—frocks at $15

Group 2—frocks at 16.75

Group 3 frocks at 19.50

The groups comprise exquisite French modes, hand-made, in white and tinted cotton crepe, and beautifully adorned with hand-drawn work; frocks of voile, ratine, linen with novel touches of embroidery and insertion, collar and cuffs of embroidered batiste, organdie, laces. Four piquant fashions pictured. Fourth floor.

Misses' airy frocks of preferred fabrics

Group 1—frocks at $10

Group 2—frocks at 12.50

Group 3—frocks at $15

The frocks are in Fashion's favored summer fabrics—ratine, gingham, voile and linen—in cool, becoming styles, effectively trimmed with embroidery, braid, scallops, frills, lace, plaiting, with organdie, stitching and drawnwork; your choice of modish colortones. Four styles sketched above, at right. Fourth floor.

Moderately-priced-frock-shop specials for women and misses

Frocks with the tone of higher priced garments—for even less than this shop's consistently low quotations.

Imported gingham frocks at 5.75 —fashioned with batiste or linen collar, cuffs and pockets, tastefully embroidered.

Airy frocks at 8.75

Frocks of voile, gingham with drawn work or collar, cuffs of organdie.

Summer frocks at 10.75

—of voile and gingham with organdie edges or plaited silk ruffles.

New frocks of ratine, linen and tissue fabrics at 14.75

The frocks are in latest shades and are trimmed with fetching collars and touches of contrasting color embroidery. Four frocks are pictured above. Fourth floor.

Girls' pretty, practical vacation frocks strongly specialized

They are fashioned from remnants of materials employed in frocks regularly sold for twice 5.50.

Frocks for play and dress at 5.50

Expert workmanship characterises every frock in the collection. The fabrics include:

imported fancy voile, French and tissue gingham

English prints and chambrays—appealing, serviceable materials available in all the color combinations most wanted for summer time occasions.

Frocks for girls from six to fourteen years

Such garments will clothe girls youthfully and becomingly throughout the period of "no school." The models sketched are typically desirable. Fourth floor.

2,000 Kayser's pure silk vests and other glove silk vests

Kayser vests of pure, fine ribbed silk and with bodice top, sheer yet durable. Third floor.

June sale, 1.95

Also glove silk bodice vests, self shoulder straps, 1.95.

Remnants of handmade filet laces, ½ to 2 yards, vastly reduced.

New, smartly frilled net blouses

—the latest styles—at a very attractive price

Blouses of soft, fine-meshed net are these, in new and clever models, and altogether unusual at 5.75

They are in charming, short sleeved styles and are artistically adorned with Irish or val. laces

Dainty, carefully sewn tucks and novel different collars lend further distinction. Included in the group is also one model with the popular bramley collar

Such blouses are easily laundered and make charming additions to summer wardrobes. Too, they may be worn on the season's semi-formal occasions. Third floor.

Human hair nets "Mandel" brand

"Jewel" and "Gem" nets, preferred for quality and strength,

85c Dozen

All shades. No white or gray. Every net inspected perfect.

Telephone orders filled. Call Private Exchange 19, locals, 30, 62, 207.

Summer's finer silks much underpriced

Because they were ordered months ago, they will be sold at a saving, notwithstanding the market's upward trend.

Ivory satin canton crepe at 2.65

Exquisite, heavy, all-silk fabric, in 39-in. width—a third below regular. Vogue for sports frocks, brides' and bridesmaids' gowns.

PROLOGUE.

Nothing in the animal kingdom ages so fast as a college graduate . . . out of school five years he appears as a man of the world to the undergrad . . . fifteen years out, he is a savant . . . twenty-five years and he is an oracle whose every utterance is delphic and portentous . . . when he comes back for Commencement his words are pearls without price, his every gesture is richly significant . . . awed by his importance, dazzled by his splendor, the undergrads coagulate in little dazed clots around the campus and burn the incense of respectful silence in his path . . . gosh, how he loves it! . . . "I am Sir Oracle," says he, "and when I ope my lips let no dog bark."

Scene I.: The Banquet Hall.

The Alumni have gathered tonight for the annual Monogram Dinner, and the football team are guests of honor . . . Red Miller, as captain of the team, is present with his cohorts and will undoubtedly be called upon . . . he has a fear, an old fear and a boding . . . he'd better have . . . meanwhile the Old Boys are making merry—that is, as merry as may be considering the disturbing fact the worthy and dignified president of the university decided at the last moment to attend.

TOASTMASTER (heartily):
I see Butch Proctor over there by the door. Old Butch Proctor. Will he stand up and give us a look at him? C'mon, Butch.

VOICES: Addaboy, Butch! Good old Butch. Stand up; let's see ya.

CHEER LEADER (jumping up):
Nine rahs for Butch Proctor! C'mon, everybody:
RAH! RAH! RAH!
RAH! RAH! RAH!
RAH! RAH! RAH!
BUTCH! BUTCH! BUTCH!

(Butch, who was a famous tackle in his day, twenty-five years ago, stands up and grins sheepishly. . . . Time, that humorous old architect, has remodeled his façade considerably, moving his chest down to his belt line and overlaying the entire structure with numerous overlapping strata of blubber . . . once as lithe as a gazelle, Butch now weighs slightly less than a duplex apartment building.)

RED MILLER (to Toastmaster):
For the luva mike! And that guy was an athalete once!

"Those were the good old days."

TOASTMASTER:
He'd make a good lineman now.

RED: He'd make a good line . . . Sh-h-h, he's going to talk.

BUTCH: I never was much good at making speeches, and it's too late to start now, but all I got to say is that I'm glad to be here and see the old boys again. I miss my old friend, "Bull" Flannigan. Dear old "Bull!" (Cheers.) What swell times we used to have in my day! I like to think of the time we put the cow up in the president's office. I don't know which was more surprised, he or the cow. (Laughter.) Those were the good old days. We will never see their like again. (Sits down amid avalanche of handclaps.)

TOASTMASTER:
I am sure it was only his innate modesty that prevented Butch from relating the story of the Bundy House.

BABBLE OF VOICES (lustily):
Go on and tell us . . . Let's hear about it. . . .

TOASTMASTER (beaming):
Well, Butch, as you know, is now a state senator, engaged in making laws. But not so many years ago he was just as busy breaking them. There was the time the team went south to play a certain university which will be nameless here, and in this little town, which will also be nameless, was a hotel, the Bundy House, owned and run by Col. Bundy, who feared college boys with a great fear. This particular night he warned his son not to let the team stop in his place under any circumstances, but while he was gone the fellows, with honeyed words and fair promises, persuaded the lad to let them get rooms there. (Hearty laughter by some of the "lads" who were there that night.) The first thing they did was to steal the cigar counter and take it, full of cigars, up to one of the rooms. Then they took the stove up to the third floor and threw it out the window. The resulting crash woke up the whole town, including Col. Bundy, who knew then what had happened. Rushing up to the room from which he figured the stove had been tossed, he hammered on the door to get in. Butch drop kicked a cuspidor full of ice water over the transom and effectually dampened the colonel's ardor. And then, to add insult to injury, while the colonel was gone looking for the police, Butch got into his room and stole his marriage license off the wall. That afternoon, while the game was in progress, the colonel walked out on the field with a deputy sheriff and took Butch off to recover the marriage license. And that, gentlemen, is how our state senators prepare themselves for their careers. (Applause.)
And now, gentlemen, I would like to introduce the man who led our team last year through one of the most successful and glorious seasons in the long and honorable history of our alma mater, Capt. Red Miller.

CHEER LEADER (with sudden paroxysm of violence):
C'mon, everybody! Nine rahs for Miller!

INSANE CHORUS OF PARANOIC ALUMNI:
RAH! RAH! RAH!
RAH! RAH! RAH!
RAH! RAH! RAH!
MILLER! MILLER! MILLER!

MILLER (frightened pink, rises and tips over water glass in his nervousness, clears throat several times to get tonsils untangled from around Adam's apple):
Mister Toastmaster and Fellas: I can't make speeches and I . . . well . . . I . . . sorter . . . well, it's like this—we all did our best, and I guess we had a pretty good team, and we had a lot of luck, too, but the credit is due pretty much to our coach. (Applause, Red encouraged, proceeds more steadily.) He's one grand guy, believe me. I'm sorry I'm graduating this year. I'd like to stick with him lots longer, but I s'pose we all got to go out in the world and make our way sooner or later, and I only hope that I'll do as well as you fellas have and be a credit to our alma mater. And

"I can't make speeches and I . . . well . . . I . . . sorter . . ."

I guess that's all. Thank you. (Sits down with face four shades redder than his hair.)

TOASTMASTER:
I am sure we all agree that Red Miller has been one of the brightest stars in the firmament of our alma mater and will always have a niche in her hall of fame and a large place in our hearts. Certainly if he carries into the outside world the pluck and endurance and brilliant energy which characterized his college career the world will be his oyster and every month will have an "R." (Cheers.)
And now I take great pleasure in presenting to you the grand man of football who has given us champions year after year, a man of whom it may well be said in the words of the poet:

And when he dies and goes to heaven, this will be Coach Brickney's fate:
He will coach the twelve apostles, taking Peter off the gate,
And you'll see them making touchdowns with a planet for a ball:
Peter going through left tackle, interfering for St. Paul.

Gentlemen, Coach Brickney.
(Wild cheers and pandemonium . . . nine lusty rahs with a demoniac tiger.)

COACH BRICKNEY:
Mr. Toastmaster, gentlemen: There isn't much I can say that the team hasn't said for me already this season. We are losing most of our stars by graduation, but the material looks promising, and I think I can promise you a team next fall that you won't be ashamed of. (Cheers.) I want to thank all the boys who did so well this year. We will miss those who are leaving us, none of them any more than Red Miller. (Cheers from crowd. Blushes from Red.) But I join our toastmaster in wishing them the success they so well deserve. And I'd like to see anybody stop them from getting it, if they really go out after it. (Cheers.) I want to thank you for the cooperation you alumni have given us all. And I trust I will see you all at the homecoming game, which has been scheduled this year with our dearest enemy (excitement), whom we haven't met since we walloped them ten years ago. (Wild outburst of enthusiastic cheers and applause.) And that is all. Thank you.

(Slow curtain.)

Epilogue.

(Group of old grads discussing things after the dinner were all famous athletes in their day, but you'd never suspect it now unless you overheard them.)

1ST GRAD: So that was the team, eh? Looked kinda light in their clvies, didn't they?

2D GRAD: Looked like a bunch of kids.

BUTCH: No such guys as they had in my day. Why, we'd eaten that gang with a grain of salt.

3D GRAD: They don't grow 'em any more like they used to in our day.

2D GRAD: Yeh, they're slippin'. Just a bunch of kids, that's all.

BUTCH: If they'da had to play the babies we went up against, eh?

1ST GRAD: O, boy!

3D GRAD: Drop up to the room and let's have a gabfest and . . .

CHO.: And is good. C'mon, let's go.

(Meanwhile Red has hurried away to meet Mamie and tell her all about it . . . they didn't make 'em any grander than Red in anybody's day, believe Mamie Potter.)

(And That's That—Until Next Sunday.)

125 South Wabash Avenue

WHAT romance ever ripened but hore in its two hearts the perfume of the violet, the rose, the lilac, anemone, hyacinth, or buttercup, daffodil or narcissus? What broken romance but sight of a faded flower e'en could bring salt tears to dimming eyes and sharp memories to world weary hearts.

One can no more dissociate flowers from romance than brides from wedding days. Dan Cupid never shoots an arrow without plunging it into the hearts of the flower the fair one loves the best; that is, the old Dan Cupid who feathered his nests with pure and unadulterated sentiment.

And so has grown the love lore of flowers, with superstitions a-plenty to feed the hopeful heart upon. Hunting the four leafed clover was a game you played because your mother played it before you and hers and hers again. Your children will hunt it, and on until the end of time, so long as "maid doth pine and man doth long."

At one time among a certain people curative powers were attributed to this luckiest of leaves. It was believed to prevent madness and many other violent maladies. Again, if two persons would eat a four leafed clover, a great and noble love would be inspired.

A four leaved clover found in dew,
A lover found who is always true;
But a four leaved clover withered and dry,
A lover leaves you without a sigh.

To cure a broken heart the maid of a former day would wear a clover near her heart, sewed in a tiny piece of blue silk. Another would come to do the healing.

To find a four leaved clover after making a wish means surely that wish must come true.

Luck—the thing you wish for most—be it money, fame, or love—follows the finding of four fresh green leaves on one stem.

To find a five leaved clover means money to come, an inheritance, a fortune to be found somewhere.

One leaf for fame and one for wealth,
And one for a faithful lover,
And one that brings you glowing health
Are all in the four leaved clover.

Even a two leaved clover is a harbinger of good omen:

A clover, a clover of two,
Put it in your right shoe,
The first young man or woman you meet,
In field, in lane, in road, in street,
You'll have him or her to be your sweet.

If a girl has no sweetheart, let her place a four leaved clover in her right shoe and start to walk, right foot forward first, and she may expect to meet the one her heart seeks.

If she finds two four leaved clovers, she twists them together with a bit of grass and hooks the stems under her belt. Thus she is assured great popularity for the season.

Find a four leaved clover and sew it under the left garter; it means a wedding in the fall.

Divination of fate is translated by the daffodil, so flower lore affirms:

When a daffodil I see,
Hanging down her head toward me,
Guess I may what I must be!
First, I shall decline my head.
Secondly, I shall be dead.
Lastly, safely buried.

A daffodil found with its head hanging toward one is unlucky.

Step not upon a daffodil or ill luck will be yours. Pluck it and wear it over the heart for luck.

The daisy, too, carries romance upon its petals:

"Whoever picks the first daisy will become possessed of a spirit of coquetry that will charm and win for her an ideal mate."

Toss up the small yellow centers of a daisy and catch the tiny bits on the hand as they descend. The number caught indicates the number of children you will have.

By taking a daisy and pulling off the petals a girl may tell for what reason she is being courted. So each petal in turn, she says, "For love, for beauty, for bright golden dollars." The last petal tells the story. Another version is: "For position, for wealth, for passion, for affection."

To find out how long it will be before you marry, or if married, before you die, blow the feathery bloom off the dandelion. As many years as it takes to blow it clean is the answer.

It is lucky to leave unpicked the first flower you see in the spring, and say: "Increase and grow, and so also my luck."

If some one gives you a yellow flower you are going to receive money.

If flowers that you wear wither in a short time it is a sign that some one loves you deeply and suffers from the passion.

The first wild flowers gathered in the spring will give you the initials of your future husband's name by taking their initials as you happen to pick them; thus, if you pick crocus, anemone, and violets, your future initials will be Mrs. C. A. V.

If you love pink hyacinth, you have a sweet and amiable disposition.

If a youth loves a maid, he may help to win her more quickly by sending her mignonettes.

To discover if your sweetheart loves you take a full blown rose and pluck each petal, spelling his name, first and last and middle name if he has one. If there are enough petals to cover every letter, you win. If not, you lose.

The streaks on the pansy are supposed to foretell destiny. If the petal plucked is marked wtih four lines, it signifies hope; five, hope sprung from fear; leaning toward the left, a life of trouble; leaning toward the right, prosperity unto the end; if the center one is longest, Sunday will be the wedding day; eight lines denote fickleness; nine, a changing heart; ten on one petal foretells riches; eleven, a large family.

The Magic rose: Gather a rose on the 27th of June. Let it be full blown and a bright red rose. Pluck it early in the morning, letting no one witness the transaction. Take it to your room, and clap it between sheets of writing paper on which is written your name and that of the man you love best; also, write thereon the name of the morning star that has the ascendancy at that time. Fold it up and seal it neatly; tie it with pink ribbon, then bury the parcel at the foot of the tree from which you gathered the flower. Here let it remain until the 5th of July; take it up at midnight; go to bed with it under your pillow, and your dream will interpret the success of your undertaking. Try for three nights, but if end of that time the young man appears not in your dreams, your case is hopeless. But if he does, he will be yours ere long. Burn rose and paper after the experiment.

Varied Activities of Women.

Mme. Joffre, wife of the French general, has established a museum in Paris to house the hundreds of gifts and mementoes received by her and her husband on their world tour.

Miss Anna Rose is "Cleveland's champion bridesmaid," having acted in that capacity at no less than 1,000 weddings during 1921.

A majority of the wage earners in Argentina are women.

Women outnumber the men in the Philippine mining industry.

Working girls in Moscow earn on average of $5 for three months' labor.

Fashionable women in London now use cigarets with tips the color of their gowns.

Miss Elizabeth Stine, a New Jersey high school girl, set a new women's record for hop, skip, and jump of 33 feet 10¼ inches.

Women may now serve in the vestry in Episcopal churches of Connecticut and may be elected to the office of clerk and treasurer.

The Japanese birth rate in California during 1921 was the highest of any year in the history of the state, averaging 344 per 1,000 Japanese married women.

Miss Josephine Warner of the pathological division of the bureau of animal industry uses a still to extract poisons from plants received by the agricultural department for analysis.

Miss Ruth Oleman holds a position unique for a woman in the film business. She is what is called "a location finder," and spends most of her time hunting up desirable exteriors and interiors for photoplays. Miss Oleman has to know the country like a book and be able to make recommendations on a minute's notice. She is also one of the highest salaried technical artists in the movies."

Alabama has one woman assistant attorney general, several registers, two county superintendents of education, three educational field directors, a director of child hygiene, director of the department of archives and history, and director of child welfare.

WEDDING MENUS.

IT is the wedding guest—in the poem—who beats his breast, but in general it is the planner of the wedding breakfast who beats her breast or beats the culinary bushes in the hope of flushing some idea that is new or may be worked up in a new way.

The writers on this subject for years have preached simplicity, but often they have presented at the same time pictures of tables crowded with food and fixtures. They have talked about classic simplicity, and then have used decorations of tissue paper—not all of them, of course, and undoubtedly Nathalie Schenck Laimbeer can be safely followed when she writes:

"A wedding breakfast remains a wedding breakfast until late in the afternoon, when it turns into a high sit down tea, and becomes a supper only when the wedding occurs after dinner. There are, of course, the regulation stand up affairs where the dining room table is set as for the formal tea, and much the same food may be served. Hot biscuits, chocolate, tea, sandwiches of all kinds, creamed oysters in the chafing dish, or lobster Newburg, chicken or vegetable salad, ice cream, lemonade, fruit punch, cake, and coffee—this can all be arranged on the table, together with the necessary china, glass, and silver. The guests are allowed to help themselves, assisted by two or three man servants. This menu may be served in the morning, afternoon, or evening, and needs only to be varied to suit the season or fancy."

Individual Taste Rules.

Mrs. Laimbeer has given much attention to what is correct form, and, taking her for an authority, we do not have to worry about what we shall serve at a 10 o'clock breakfast, as different from one served at 2 o'clock in the afternoon; nor about what we shall have that will be quite different from what could be served buffet style.

After all, more of individual taste and decision may be exercised in this matter than anxious planners sometimes guess. Perhaps they should first decide whether they will have a good old fashioned breakfast or one extremely up to date, and whether something simple or elaborate, plain or fussy, or whether to have a regular meal or refreshments from the buffet. The size of the wedding party has a great deal to do with what shall be served, and how.

For instance, if a small and old fashioned meal is decided upon, broiled chicken may be the first thing on the menu. Some baked potato fluffed and put back into the shells might appropriately be served with it, and new peas in timbales. Hot rolls are always suitable, no matter what the size or type of meal, but in many cases they have been split and buttered before being served. An elaborate fruit salad is rather modern, but fits into almost any menu, and for a small number it may be elaborately mounted with the bridal occasion fully in mind. Cake, ice cream under a meringue, which is called baked Alaska, or omelet surprise, some beverage, and white bonbons may complete this meal.

Get High Grade Chicken.

In carrying out the details of such a meal, the first consideration is to get chicken of a high grade, not one which has suffered from days of crowded, cooped up travel in wilting weather.

When the menu is for a large number, and yet somewhat old fashioned, it is the thing nowadays to have a creamed meat, like chicken or sweetbreads, where formerly there would have been cold meat. Chicken pot roasted and served cold is quite delicious if the chicken, which need not be so young as the word may mean, is of the old fashioned sort—not insipid and flavorless. Bread and butter sandwiches, or these and some with dainty fillings, may replace the hot rolls. The salad may be one of frozen fruit, which may be made in quantity, rendering a dessert ice superfluous. Cake, coffee, and bonbons may complete the meal.

By the way, the bonbon with a wedding history is the sugared Jordan almond; and, if any are purchased, these are the truest thing. But when a delicious fondant can be prepared, some of it melted up makes a delicious thing for a covering of strawberries or nuts, or it may be worked into balls into which may be pressed a freshly shelled nut.

Modern Items of Equipment.

One way to modernize such menus is to serve at the beginning a fruit cocktail. There may be also modern items of equipment, but a modern mixture of flavors will seem to most people rather out of place. The main decoration may well be the cake and the gold rimmed china. Lace instead of damask is nowadays used for the part or entire cover of the table. Instead of the cocktail, curled celery, radish flowers, or plain fruit, like strawberries with the hull, may be used as a beginner. The strawberries should be washed and chilled, and may be served around a little mound of sugar. Those who grow their own berries are most fortunate when such a use is desired. The strawberries should be perfect in appearance and flavor. Some of the big sorts are extremely mild of flavor, while others are as rich and spicy as the European wood strawberry. The variety called Gandy is of the latter sort.

Cherries with stems on and in clusters may be served in little individual baskets in place of the cocktail. They are handsome, and such use makes for simplicity. Fine fruit calls for no sugar, or sirup, or salad dressing to perfect it.

Fried Chicken.

No recipe can teach anybody how to fry chicken, but it can give cautions and suggestions. There is the question of whether to remove the skin or leave it on, and much depends upon circumstances as to which shall be done. There is more danger of drying out the meat when it is removed. But if each piece is thoroughly covered with some hot melted butter there is a better chance of getting juicy meat and all the seasoning may be in the butter. I have seen an expert chef fry chicken breasts—the driest part of the chicken, of course—with enough fire to burn them. What is needed is a hot fire to sear and a small fire to finish. It is useless to cover and steam the chicken in a slack oven if it has been cooked dry. There are substantial reasons why moist foods have more flavor and palatability.

Creamed Dishes.

The sauce for creamed chicken should be half chicken stock, at least, and the more highly seasoned with vegetables the stock is the finer the sauce will be. If no stock is to be had, the best thing to do is to make a vegetable stock for part of the liquid of the sauce and the seasoning. If condensed, it may be used in a small quantity only for the seasoning. For each cup of water take one onion, one carrot, a handful of dried or fresh celery leaves, and a half teaspoon of salt. Add the water cold to the vegetables and cook for twenty minutes or half an hour, and strain. Two tablespoons of flour to one of butter is good for each cup of liquid used. Melt the butter, mix in the flour until the whole is as smooth as velvet, add the liquid cold, and stir over the fire until it thickens. Whatever is to be served in this should be cooked in it about fifteen minutes. Some freshly grated nutmeg—a bit—improves the sauce for anything like sweetbreads or lobsters and other shell fish. A bit of fresh butter stirred in just before the dish is served but perfectly melted and blended adds richness. Any creamed meat can be served in patties, timbales, on toast, or with a toast garnish or in blocks of bread hollowed out and toasted. Rice may be used molded in a border.

Fruit Salad.

The bleached French endive and the white part of curly endive make the best basis for an elegant fruit salad. If anything positively green is wanted, use water cress. Used sparingly, the cress may be a great ornament to a salad, and like mint, it adds piquancy. A bit of freshly chopped mint mixed with sugar may be a delicious addition. The fruit may be prepared in no end of ways, but whole slices of orange and pineapple may be used if a salad is to be mounted handsomely on a large platter or chop plate. The prettiest device I have ever thought out for such a service is slices of shredded pineapple. Wash pineapple, cut one inch slices, and peel and remove eyes from slices. Put a slice on a plate, and with the fingers or a fork hold it firmly with the left hand and shred it with a silver fork in the right hand. Press the fork in close up to the core and draw out to the edge all the way around. The edge will be thinned down almost flat, and the whole will look not unlike a daisy or chrysanthemum. Take out the hard core by cutting all around it, slanting the knife in so as to take it out in the shape of an inverted cone. Sections of the slice may be cut out and what is left joined at the cut ends to make smaller flowers, so as to have perhaps one large flower in the center of the dish and smaller ones around it.

The place where the core was may be filled with mayonnaise dressing or what you will. Some grapefruit goes well with the orange and pineapple, and all fruit salads are better if the fruit is lightly sprinkled with sugar before the dressing is added. A mayonnaise mixed with half whipped cream and flavored with fruit juices may be quite perfect. Raspberry juice is delicious for this and gives a dainty shade.

Omelet Surprise or Baked Alaska.

A melon shaped mold or a brick of ice cream turned out on an inch thick layer of sponge cake a little larger than the mold, covered with a slightly sweetened and stiffly beaten mass of egg white and put in the hottest sort of an oven until the meringue sets and is lightly browned may be one of the most elegant possible of ice cream services. If some of the meringue is put on through a pastry tube in scrolls and nests, which may have a bit of color in the shape of jelly or candied fruit added it is possible to get something highly ornamental. Slices of brick ice cream on a slice of cake, covered with sweetened egg white, and baked like the larger sort, make an attractive individual service. Prepare on little white enameled plates, setting these into china service plates for the table.

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

ALMOST every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago, the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

DON'T TOLERATE GRAY HAIR

DO NOT permit streaks of gray to mar your beauty. Watch those betraying locks. When the first gray appears call to your aid "Brownatone," the modern hair tint. You can apply it at home by following easy directions. "Brownatone" is sold by drug and toilet goods counters in two colors—golden to medium brown and dark brown to black—50c and $1.50. Guaranteed absolutely harmless to hair growth, scalp or tenderest skin. Try it at home—trial bottle sent for 10c. The Kenton Pharmacal Co., 613 Coppin Bldg., Covington, Ky.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Johnny's neighbors had a dog and they promised Johnny one of the puppies in the near future.

One day a friend who knew of Johnny's eagerness to possess this puppy asked him if he had yet got it.

"O, no," says Johnny, "it isn't quite born enough yet." A. C. H.

We were at a picnic and Lois and Robert walked off into the woods.

Pretty soon I heard Robert calling and when I hurried up to him he said: "Hurry to Lois, father. We saw a snake and she is mixing her laugh with her cry."

I found she was somewhat hysterical. C. A. R.

A few days later he said it was too good to keep, for after they had walked a while Margaret casually asked, "Is you lookin' for the peanut stand?" W. P. H.

His parents were taking Francis for a drive in the country and the youngster, city bred, was in ecstasies over every chicken, horse, or cow that he saw.

He pointed in surprise to an old mule grazing by the roadside, and exclaimed, "Look, mother, there's a mule without a fence around it!" F. A. S.

George had been a daily caller at the next door neighbors. He was in the habit of asking for cookies and was usually granted his request. To this his mother objected, and cautioned him never to be guilty of such a thing again.

The next day, after entering the house and being seated, he gave a sigh, then said, "Aunty, isn't it funny that I don't get hungry any more." C.

Several little girls were discussing the merits of their respective teachers, so wishing to have some fun I turned to Pansy and asked who her teacher was.

Before she could answer Jinny replied, "She hasn't any teacher, she isn't school old yet." M. O.

We were at the county fair and Margaret had been duly warned to ask no one except mother for candy. A man of the party invited Margaret to walk with him and soon she was discovered laden with peanuts and popcorn.

Mother immediately inquired if she had asked for these things and the man answered, "No, she did not."

One day while visiting a relative, whose only child was just starting to walk, James remarked, "Look, mother, Cousin Charles is walking on his hind legs." J. A. B.

Willie usually does the talking and uncle listens. One evening the conversation began to drag, and finally stopped.

Uncle was surprised to see Willie so quiet, and asked if he were sick.

"No, I am not sick," said Willie.

"Then why are you so quiet?"

"Aw, I can't say no more when my talk's gived out, can I?" was the prompt reply. R. E. S.

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

LOVED AND LOST.

MARY MARTIN began to keep company with Dick Wentworth when she was 19 and he 21. He was a senior in college then and could not think of marriage for some time to come, as he was going to law school for three years, and after that it would be three or four years before he could hope to earn enough to support a wife. Mary understood this, but she was willing to wait for him, as in the meantime she was needed at home, and the salary she received as stenographer went towards the care of her widowed mother and three younger sisters. By the time Dick would be in a position to marry Mary's younger sisters would be able to earn money for themselves.

When Dick was graduated from law school they became formally engaged, and a modest little diamond sparkled on Mary's left hand. Before this Dick's family—father, mother, and sister Muriel, who was seven years younger than Dick—had accepted his friendship with Mary as a more or less casual matter, and she was a welcome visitor at their house. But after the engagement was announced their attitude changed subtly, although to all appearances they were as friendly as before.

Dick had gone to work for a prominent law firm and received a small salary at first. If he worked hard and showed promise there was a chance that some day he would become a member of the firm. But he was unable to save anything towards his marriage. Muriel, rapidly becoming a young woman, began to make demands for new clothes, and Dick's mother insinuated that it was time Dick helped out. So every time Muriel went into town to spend a useless afternoon shopping or at the matinée she called at her brother's office and teased money from him. Then she demanded a fur coat when his salary was raised; then the living room must be done over and refurnished so that Muriel might entertain her young men friends in style; and finally Muriel and her mother induced Dick to buy an automobile. Dick's father was in moderate circumstances and owned his home, but did not feel he could afford the expense of a car. Gradually every cent that Dick earned went for finery for his mother and Muriel. In a futile endeavor to earn more money he worked nights and Sundays, and brought work home with him that kept him up until after midnight. Mary tried to remonstrate, but the demands of the other two women were constant and more insistent.

Then came the war. Mary urged her fiancé to go to Plattsburg. When Dick spoke of this at home there was a scene; his mother and Muriel almost went into hysterics. Finally Dick was drafted. He and Mary considered getting married before he went to camp, but there was another scene and more hysterics. Dick mustn't think of such a thing; his soldier's allowance and insurance must be made over to his sister, and there must be no wife to have a claim on him.

When the influenza epidemic raged in camp Dick succumbed among the first, his energy sapped by the extra work he had been doing for the last few years. Muriel, resplendent in the most fetching and expensive mourning, sighed to Mary, "It's better for you to have loved and lost, Mary, dear, than never to have loved at all."

What would happen to Mary and Muriel in fiction? The selfish sister would be punished, of course—preferably by having as dilatory and harassed a sweetheart as her brother had been. And Mary would have gone on her solitary way in subdued and remembering grief. As it really happened, Mary married within a year, and is happy with a young man who is unincumbered by clinging relatives. And Muriel has a fine husband, too, who provides generously for her many extravagances. J. M.

PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

BY CLOTILDE

EMBROIDERY

[Star Needlework Journal, New York.]

CROSS STITCH INITIALS.

INITIALS embroidered in the cross stitch are just a little out of the ordinary, but are wonderfully effective and pretty. One or more colors can be used in a letter, depending largely upon what the article is.

It is absolutely necessary to baste your canvas for this work true to a thread on the material. Count the number of stitches in the deepest and widest part of the initial, and in cutting a piece of canvas allow a margin on all four sides. Try to do the embroidering so the work will look as even as possible on the wrong side—not crossing and recrossing from side to side more than is necessary. Of course, the under stitches must all go in one direction, and the top stitches in the opposite.

Two inch initials on towels are effective, and especially so when done in colors. Handkerchiefs, lunch cloths—indeed, all sorts of articles are beautified by one of these initials.

Use a fine rather than a coarse meshed canvas.

The last installment will appear next week.

Answers to Sewing Questions.

MRS. CLARA: Why not use a single feather stitch—taking the smallest possible stitches—to outline your scroll design? The effect is good, and it is a change from the plain outline stitch.

MRS. L. S. A.: I have mailed to you the directions for making the beaded bag. Indeed, yes, many of them are beautiful, and if one has the time the work is interesting.

"MISS I'll write like a Japanese this morning!
Reader of the Fan: "This ought to be GOOD!")

He think picture man him all in air up for story. Me think he clasp hot browee (No, that's Chinese)—me think he clasp much hot brow in hands which tremble excruciatingly and murmur:

"What a matter! What a matter! Writer Think Beverage cold. No bubble. No kick. Same old thing. Only color different sometime—smell. Some time not so thick. Some thin. But same old thing. Bah! Whewee! Eyes which are merciful, you are only fooling, me. But please, and also humble curtsey, do in sometime not so far beyond, bestow upon writer honorable impetuous which shall guide that he is humorously pleased to call his imagina- discreet laugh up sleeve on part of present im- into ways not greatly worn by the so ha- imaginations of other plot makers who have likewise."

"Just like a Japanese."

Now I have go to see this "Gay and Devilish" and I am feel so what the gentleman and lady kidder have learn to describe as a stat "low." I am not bright and sparkling like a morning. I am "low." My pet bull dog which joyously raise for to be my pride, have sud- becomes "off his nut" as according to that authority the gentleman and American kidder. He have instead of grow fierce and bristle to all save present implorer, for some time look kindly disposed upon all passing tramps who, learning he wave legs in air in humble acknowledgment of visit, visit continuously, pitifully soliciting much food which writer have no heart to refuse, thereby eating all reserve supply of food on hand at any time.

All of which is not so bad have not my humble dog decide he is a chicken and immediately adopt fifty incubator orphans which make night hideous with their cries if he is not on job to sleep with them and follow him constantly, to the writer's intense distress and humiliation. It is the straw which have make the camel give up hope so we have go to see "Gay and Devilish," hope being that we shall come out of that nice, cool theater strong to cope with a situation which have need of firm and rested brain.

Well, we see this "Gay and Devilish" and while who shall even cast the foul insinuation that the beautiful Doris May is not most intriguing and that have not nice people who support her with great strength and a photog- which have cause high lights to rest in the most suitable and conspic- the plot cause that tired feeling for which present writer can not same of remedy.

I have no new aspects, as a young lady is ask will she please save from financial embarrassment her family by marrying, please, fat rich man? Young lady go forth to the sacrifice, but not so quick! She meet handsome who may be rich or not, she should worry. She use her head

Twenty-seventh Paper—Plutarch and His Immortal Half-Hundred.

WHAT A KING WROTE TO HIS WIFE.

Vive Dieu. As God liveth, you could not have sent me anything which could be more agreeable than the news of the pleasure you have taken in this reading. Plutarch always delights me with a fresh novelty. To love him is to love me; for he has been long time the instructor of my youth. My good mother, to whom I owe all, and who would not wish, she said, to see her son an illustrious dunce, put this book into my hands almost when I was a child at the breast. It has been like my conscience, and has whispered in my ears many good suggestions and maxims for my conduct and the government of my affairs.

Henri IV., to his wife, Marie de Medicis.

WHAT A PHILOSOPHER PUT INTO HIS SON'S HAND.

When I was fourteen years old, he put Plutarch's Lives into my hand and bade me read two pages every week day and ten every holiday. It seemed at first an irksome task, but my mother asked me to read them aloud to her, and this made it easier. Lycurgus' training of the Spartan boys, Archimedes' amazing military engineering in the defense of Syracuse, Hannibal's passage of the Alps, Scipio's magnanimity and Caesar's courage and genius won their own way, as my father knew they would with a boy, and, what is by no means common with authors, the personality of the writer also, as, for instance, where he drops the narrative to hotly censure the meanness of Cato the Elder in selling his slaves when they were past service. The style of Plutarch could commend itself even to a boy.

Edward Waldo Emerson.

WHAT THE HERO OF A DRAMA OF REVOLUTION SAID.

Karl von Moor, laying his book aside.—I am disgusted with this age of puny scribblers when I read of great men in my Plutarch. . . . The glowing spark of Prometheus is burnt out, and now they substitute for it the flash of lycopodium; a stage fire, which will not so much as light a pipe.

Schiller's "The Robbers," Act 1, Scene 2.

AND thus you see at a glance how the greatest king in Europe at the end of the sixteenth century, and the serene man of Concord in the mid-nineteenth, and the ardent, distraught hero of Schiller's drama that helped to make revolution in the troubled days of the waning eighteenth, all were interested in and instructed by the old Boeotian, and wanted to share their love of him with those they loved.

Always it has been so with Plutarch. His book is more than a book. It is a bond. He is the delight of those greatly placed in the world and the first step of the untutored. The reason that he is thus a bond is not because he is profound. Nay, be not affrighted! He is not that. The reason is his intense humanity and his readableness. Deans and schoolboys alike pore over him. Here is a letter from a school teacher who says, "The children want a paper on Plutarch's 'Lives' in the Best Sellers series," and here is another from the dean of the college of liberal arts in a great university—Flickinger of Northwestern, an outstanding Latinist in American scholarship—and he hopes "that THE TRIBUNE will not omit Plutarch's 'Lives,' which have been almost the Bible of some periods of history, from the series."

Now that solicitude for the book is both hundreds of years old and as fresh as this morning. It is one of the most engaging things in the history of literature—or in the literature of history. That teacher in a secondary school of the most modern city of the modern world who writes in that her "children" want their Plutarch has her predecessor in the good Roger Ascham, one of the great school teachers of the ages, who used to point with pride to a favorite pupil of his—a certain Princess Elizabeth Tudor, who was to be one of the great queens of the ages and who, said he, "you could see during her tarryings at Windsor castle 'writing down hard phrases from Plutarch's 'Lives,' and reading more Greek," he would tartly add, "in a day than some prebendary did Latin in a week."

I open my Shakespeare alongside my Plutarch and I find that the solid bronze Plutarch left behind him about the year 100 A. D. was some fifteen centuries later transmuted into gold by the Elizabethan, and this famous alchemy of his we know as the plays of "Julius Cæsar," "Antony and Cleopatra," "Coriolanus," and "Timon of Athens." I lay those books aside and take up my portly edition of Mr. Wells' "Outline" and therein I find a dozen citations of Plutarch, some of them copious, and one of them—Plutarch's description of the marriage feast of Philip of Macedon—is followed by these

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

By Fanny Butcher.

Last week's composite list of best sellers at five leading Chicago book stores was:

FICTION.

"The Vehement Flame," by Margaret Deland.
"The Secret Places of the Heart," by H. G. Wells.
"Maria Chapdelaine," by Louis Hémon.
"The Ninth Vibration," by L. Adams Beck.
"Aaron's Rod," by D. H. Lawrence.
"The Unspeakable Gentleman," by D. H. Marquand.

NONFICTION.

"The Revolt Against Civilization," by Lothrop Stoddard.
"Opinions of Anatole France," by Paul Gsell.
"The Outline of Science," by J. Arthur Thomson. (Vol. II of this valuable work is soon to appear.)

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:
"The Beautiful and Damned," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"Maria Chapdelaine," by Louis Hémon.
"Kimono," by John Paris.
"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.
"A Parody Outline of History," by Donald Ogden Stewart.
"Civilization in the United States," a series of most stimulating surveys of American life and affairs by thirty specialists.

"THROUGH THE SHADOWS" is a novel by the personal religious guide of the King of England. His name is Cyril Alington.

But you mustn't let either of those facts deter you!

If the ecclesiastical Cyril is as amusing when he is guiding as he is when he is writing, one wouldn't mind being the King of England—so long as one didn't have to change curates or whatever the reverend gentleman is called. He must be a sort of court jester, refined and all that, but upholding the most sacred traditions of jesting circles. "Through the Shadows" is, honestly, awfully funny. It is a lighter-than-air craft which bobbles around in the breeze of a week-end party at an English country house at which the host's estimable uncle, a gentleman brewer, is masquerading as an Indian official, the host's unmarried cousin as another cousin, the mother of two children whose names confuse her as to their sex, his confidential secretary as Professor Lapski, spiritualist extraordinary, and a young lord as his twin brother, a curate.

CYRIL ALINGTON.

The most absurdly tight places close in on the actors, but somehow they always open up, and all the time the author is writing that rare English paragraph, the one which is almost heady with humor no matter what it's about.

Perhaps the Reverend Dr. Alington would not like to be compared to such an ancient as Charles Lamb, but if that enviable essayist had had the knack of writing a light novel, it would have sounded like "Through the Shadows."

"Lightnin'" Leads in Vote on Season's Plays

By Sheppard Butler.

TWO weeks ago readers of this department were invited to express their views as to the merits of the season's theatrical offerings. Opinions were asked regarding the identity of the six best plays, the six best musical entertainments, the worst play, and the worst musical entertainment.

The polls are now closed (though, curiously enough, ballots are still coming in) and the votes have been counted. Here is your verdict:

THE BEST PLAYS.

1—"Lightnin'," the American comedy by Winchell Smith and Frank Bacon, which Bacon has been playing at the Blackstone since Sept. 1, 1921.

2—"Anna Christie," Eugene O'Neill's drama of the water fronts, now being played by Miss Pauline Lord and others at the Cort.

3—"Liliom," Franz Molnar's "allegoric" comedy of life," current at the Great Northern in a more or less faithful adaptation from the Hungarian original.

4—"The Bat," the mystery melodrama by Avery Hopwood and Mary Roberts Rinehart which had a fifty-three weeks' run at the Princess and Cohan's Grand.

5—"The Claw," an adaptation from the French of Henry Bernstein, played at the Princess with Lionel Barrymore in the leading role.

6—"The Woman of Bronze," a play by Paul Kester and Margaret Anglin, based on a French drama by Henri Kistemaeckor and played by Miss Anglin at the Princess.

DONALD BRIAN
in "Garrison and the Girls," Jessie's new play at Cohan's Grand.

THE BEST MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

1—"Tip-Top," the Fred Stone show at the Colonial last fall.

2—"The Beggar's Opera," John Gay's 200 year old music play, visible for two weeks at the Olympic.

3—"Lady Billy," the piece with which Mitzi closed the season at the Illinois.

4—"The Ziegfeld Follies," Mr. Ziegfeld's annual pageant, a Christmas arrival at the Colonial.

5—"The O'Brien Girl," the typical Cohan entertainment which departed last evening from the Grand.

6—"The Last Waltz," by Oscar Straus, sang at the Garrick and Studebaker.

THE WORST PLAY.

"Ladies' Night in a Turkish Bath," a farce by Avery Hopwood and Charlton Andrews, played for six weeks at the Woods.

THE WORST MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT.

"Lola," Miss Helen Shipman's short lived venture at the La Salle.

The individual list which coincided most nearly with the result of the voting as set forth above was that of Leah F. Witt, 138 Laporte avenue, Chicago. She will receive, therefore, the promised autographed portrait of any player she may select. Her list included ten of the fourteen plays chosen, and in six instances the rank given was the same as that indicated in the final verdict.

Vagaries of the Vote—a Study in Likes and Dislikes.

Browsing among the ballots—it would be a fascinating task for any manager—one encounters various diverting glimpses of playgoing psychology. Thus:

"Lightnin'" appears to hold a curious fascination for its admirers. Of those who listed it as among the six best plays, more than half accorded it first choice. In the case of every other play the votes were rather evenly distributed from first to sixth position.

The total number of votes cast for "Anna Christie" was slightly larger than that for "Lightnin'." The greatest number, however, assigned it to second rather than first place. Similarly, "The Bat," "The Claw," and "The Woman of Bronze" received their largest votes in secondary positions—not as first choices. Exactly twice as many votes were cast for "Anna Christie" as for "The Woman of Bronze."

After the six "best plays," "Nice People" rolled up the largest vote. Next came "The Emperor Jones" and "The Return of Peter Grimm"—the Chicago is catholic in its tastes.

Among the musical shows "Tip-Top," long since departed, was far in the

IN PRIZES TO ARCHITECTS

Seventy-five years old yesterday, The Tribune seeks surpassing beauty in new home on Michigan Boulevard

THE TRIBUNE herewith offers $100,000.00 in prizes for designs for a building to be erected on its vacant lot at North Michigan Boulevard and Austin Avenue. Commemoration of our Seventy-fifth Birthday is made in this manner for three reasons:

—to adorn with a monument of enduring beauty this city, in which The Tribune has prospered so amazingly.

—to create a structure which will be an inspiration and a model for generations of newspaper publishers.

—to provide a new and beautiful home worthy of the world's greatest newspaper.

The contest will be under the rules of the American Institute of Architects. Competition will be open and international. Each competitor will be required to submit drawings showing the west and south elevations and perspective from the southwest, of a new building to be erected on The Tribune's property at the corner of North Michigan Blvd. and Austin Ave. Architects desiring complete information are requested to write to

"Lightnin'" Leads in Vote on Plays

lead. The fugitive "Beggar's Opera," which remained, this season, only two weeks, had more than twice as many votes for first choice as the long-lived "Lady Billy."

"Ladies' Night" had no serious rivalry for the dubious distinction given it, but among the musical entertainments the race was closer, with substantial votes cast by those who did not like "The Whirl of New York," "Love Birds," and Mlle. Alice Delysia's perilous diversion, "Afgar."

The scattering vote for pet aversions was a liberal education in the matter of diversified theater tastes. Of the six plays acclaimed as "best" by the majority, every one was set down by at least one voter as the "worst" of the year. The same thing was true of the second group, with one exception. In the tally of "worst musical entertainments," only "The O'Brien Girl" escaped without a vote.

Summer Arrives in Showdom.

Last week's hot weather brought a depressing slump in theater business, with the prospect that many of the playhouses will soon close their doors for the summer. A spurt of prosperity in May filled the showmen with a hope which now proves to have been mistaken. Various new entertainments were sent to town, only to find that too many theaters are in operation to divide, profitably, thee suddenly decreasing patronage. As these lines were written, there was doubt as to whether "Hollywood Follies" will exist longer at the Playhouse—despite the fact that it was, last night, a vastly better show than when it started. "The O'Brien Girl" goes to the storehouse today; "Irene" is given only one more week at the Studebaker; "Anna Christie," which was to have stayed until August, will leave a fortnight hence, and in several other quarters there is grave thought of early departure.

Meanwhile, the scene of activity shifts to the gardens, where the outdoor impresarios are staging things on a scale more elaborate than in any recent season. Ernie Young's "Passing Parade of 1922," newly revealed at the Marigold, is easily the most spectacular of that producer's efforts. Here a company of figurantes such as Mr. Ziegfeld might envy appears at intervals in a stately pageant, clad in costumes of bizarre magnificence. One group displays enormous peacock tails, made of countless thousands of genuine feathers, brought (I have Mr. Young's word for it) from China. Again, there are butterflies with gorgeous wings, prancing pirates, Dutch dancers clattering down a stairway from the old mill among the trees, cadets in spirited old-time military evolutions. Miss Ann Greenway, a soprano new to Chicago, adorns breath-taking raiment with dark and dazzling beauty; Will Higgie and Miss Margo Raffaro contribute vivid dances, and the diminutive members of the Elida ballet perform with stirring abandon.

ANN GREENWAY.
(© Connelly.)

To the Green Mill on Friday will come an echo of "Shuffle Along," the record breaking entertainment by colored performers, which has become a fixture in New York and which was promised an engagement at the Olympic, but probably will not be seen there. Fifty players from a company which has been presenting "Shuffle Along" outside New York have been engaged for the north side resort, where they will put on a characteristic show called "Plantation Days."

The rejuvenated Rainbo gardens also have ambitious plans for the summer, with Miss Kitty Gordon and Miss Eva Tanguay listed as prospective entertainers of their patrons.

News of Plays and Players.

"The Mountebank of Emotions," Ben Hecht's new play for Leo Ditrichstein, was given its first performance in San Francisco last Monday, the author having journeyed from Chicago to be present at the accouchement. One Pacific coast scribe identifies it as "a comedy of morals and manners in which highly modern types of men and women blend or clash with keen sex interest, and the far-famed 'single standard of morality' gets a thorough shaking, with honors rather shockingly distributed at the end." Ditrichstein's arrival in Chicago is now appointed for a week from next Sunday. He will come to the Princess instead of the Studebaker, as first planned, and will play a brief engagement in "The Great Lover," his most popular play of recent years. The Hecht play, he thinks, he will reserve for a September or October opening, probably in Chicago.

Rumors have been current among those who presume to know that the stately Chicago theater is to be the home of Shubert vaudeville next season—or, if not that, then the Roosevelt, not far away on State street. The reports are denied by the Shubert offices in Chicago. It is virtually settled that the Apollo will not return to the uses of vaudeville, but it is probable that the original plan of installing this form of entertainment at the Garrick will be carried out.

The play recently made from the story called "The Drums of Jeopardy" has been withdrawn after a brief career in New York. It will be put away for the summer and brought forth again, they say, in Chicago on Labor day.

The blood-curdling melodrama "Bulldog Drummond" also is listed for a Chicago visit in the fall. When it comes, H. B. Warner will have the leading rôle, played in New York by the British actor, A. E. Matthews.

Monday night's premiere of the new "Ziegfeld Follies" in New York yielded more than $10,000 at the box office (first night seats on the main floor were $10). The receipts for the week were in the neighborhood of $42,000.

Thomas Jefferson, eldest son of the late Joseph Jefferson, has joined the increasing community of those who will play the leading rôle in "Lightnin'" next season. The list now includes Frank Bacon, the originator of the part, Milton Nobles, and Banks Winter. John Golden, the producer of the play, has definitely abandoned the idea that only Bacon can play the part, and is planning to gather in the shekels with as many companies as he can prudently form. Jefferson has acted for many seasons in his father's "Rip Van Winkle"—a rôle which Bacon has frequently been urged to undertake, and in which he may, some day, appear.

"To the Ladies!" by the authors of "Dulcy," is announced as the Blackstone's first play for next season—an indication that "Lightnin's" days are numbered. "To the Ladies!" when it comes, will have Otto Kruger and Miss Helen Hayes in the leading rôles.

While the new McVicker's theater is being erected in Madison street, plans for its future are revised. It is now made known that vaudeville will be seen there no more as in the past, and that the playhouse, when finished, will be dedicated exclusively to the movies.

Miss Elsie Ferguson's return to the stage gives promise of being more or less permanent. She will act next season in a play by James Bernard Fagan, called, in London, "The Wheel," and by way of preparation has gone to England to see it performed.

James Montgomery, author of "Irene," is at work on a new musical play with which he proposes to make a star of Miss Patti Harrold, now singing the part of Irene O'Dare at the Studebaker. The new rôle for Miss Harrold will require her impersonation of an Italian girl.

Two companies are being organized to present "Blossom Time," the operetta with Franz Schubert's music, here and there about the country next season. The original company, which includes Bertram Peacock, Olga Cook, Howard Marsh, William Danforth, and Zoe Barnett, will remain in New York through the summer and come to Chicago in the fall.

Mme. Jennie Valier, an actress of high repute in Germany before the war, is now a visiting star at Glickman's Palace theater on the west side. She will appear tonight and tomorrow night in Zolotareffsky's "Woman's Desire," and later in the summer in a variety of other plays.

The New Plays

OPENING TONIGHT.

"Garrison and the Girls" (Cohan's Grand)—A mystery farce by George M. Cohan, performed by him and his daughter Georgette in New York under the title "Madeleine and the Movies." Neither of the Cohans is now present in the cast. Donald Brian has assumed the leading rôle, essaying therein his first full-length part without music, and others of the company are Ruth Donnelly, Boots Wooster, Rob Johnson, Georgia Lee Hall, James Gleason, and Jean Robertson.

COMING.

"The Great Lover" (Princess, June 25)—Leo Ditrichstein in a revival of one of his most popular plays of former seasons. His company will include Mary Duncan, Frances Underwood, Clara Mackin, Lee Millar, Orlando Daly, and Albert Morrison.

Frank Bacon, the originator of the part, Milton Nobles, and Banks Winter. John Golden, the producer of the play, has definitely abandoned the idea that only Bacon can play the part, and is planning to gather in the shekels with as many companies as he can prudently form. British Stage Censor Deals Blow to "Bedroom" Dramas

By Archibald Haddon.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 10.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—A bombshell has been dropped on the producers' "bedroom" plays by the new stage censor, the Duke of Atholl. So many London plays of recent years have contained bedroom scenes that the censorship apparently decided to put an end to their vogue, even if modern condemnation falls hardly on productions not necessarily offensive. The first scapegoat was Monckton Hoffe, author of "The Faithful Heart." Hoffe's new play, "Pomp and Circumstance," had a bedroom scene.

THE DUKE OF ATHOLL.
[Tribune Foreign News Service Photo.]

It was banned for that reason only, irrespective of its merits, but the author acceeded to the censor's instructions and produced the play rather than throw the company out of employment. The censor's policy of appearing to take exception to stage bedrooms merely because they are bedrooms has aroused opposition among dramatists, actors, and producers. On the other hand, the public oftn has shown its antipathy to bedroom play. Several have been booed flatly. The last example was "Nuts in May," a French farce that was hissed and that only ran eleven days. A previous notorious example, "Up in Mabel's Room," was booed and ran only a month, despite the fact that it had Charles Hawtrey, the popular comedian, in its cast.

Blaming It on the War.

"Bedroom plays" reached their height in London during the war. American farces containing doubtful bedroom scenes, like "Fair and Warmer," had long and successful runs, and no protests were made by the public. The censorship at that time was lenient, owing to the necessity of amusing the people in a period of stress and anxiety. Moreover, those particular pieces were unusually clever and their harmfulness was debatable, even though in "Fair and Warmer" erring spouses popped in and out of each other's sleeping rooms, more or less indiscriminately.

MISS GLADYS COOPER.

It is generally considered that only prudes object to the "bedroom" play, and it is pointed out that if every such play were to be censored, Atholl, to be consistent, must ban "Romeo and Juliet" and eliminate the smothering scene in "Othello." At the same time, the post-war public as a whole is showing scorn for "bedroom" plays, with the result that producers hesitate to bring over any more American specimens, especially since "Up in Mabel's Room" proved a fiasco. Al Woods, however, has declared his intention to produce in London "The Demi-Virgin," which is reported to have shocked New York.

Sympathy is being expressed for Monckton Hoffe, owing to his clean form of humor, his last play, "The Faithful Heart," being one of the most inoffensive plays of modern times. He and A. A. Milne undoubtedly are coming into the front rank of dramatists.

Can the Old Ones Be Cleaned Up?

The subject of "bedroom" plays recalls the revival by the Phoenix Society of comedies of the Restoration Period. It is contended by some that such productions, even though seen only by private subscription audiences, are indefensible, and that the dialogue of the old dramatists, Dryden, Wycherly, and Congreve, is incredibly filthy. Dryden's "Amphitryon," just revived by the Phoenix society, is regarded as one of the worst examples, and it has been suggested that the actresses must blush beneath their makeup when speaking some of the lines of the Phoenix performances. The excuse for such revivals lies in their brilliant wit, their literary splendor, and their value as historic documents and pictures of the period, but it is doubted whether these advantages counterbalance the evil effects on audiences composed largely of women and girls.

C. B. Cochrane is planning public performances of some of the Restoration comedies, but the project seems unfeasible unless the plays are expurgated to such an extent as to rob them of all value with the exception of Dryden's "Marriage à la Modern," the language of which might be bowdlerized for the regular stage. The love making imbroglio in this piece is delightfully vivacious and humorous. Another typical Restoration comedy is Van Brough's naughty "Provoked Wife," in which Garrick was great as Sir John Bruce. This play is packed with so much wit and wisdom that it would be a great pity if it cannot be expurgated for the general public. Cochrane therefore would do a service to the stage if he succeeded in satisfying the censor with new versions of the Restoration comedies that would retain their literary brilliance while discarding the objectionable elements.

Cochrane also proposes to revive some light French operas. Here again he faces the reconstruction difficulty. The librettos of old time opera bouffe are hopelessly old fashioned and the humor is mere buffoonery. However, for the sake of the most delightful music outside of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, best wishes go with Cochrane for his suggestion.

Comic Opera Veteran Dies.

Reference to Gilbert and Sullivan recalls the death at the age of 69 of Rutland Barrington, creator of many of the major rôles in the Gilbert and Sullivan operas. He had fallen on evil days after nearly half a century of service as an actor, and following a stroke of paralysis, had been unable to work. His furniture and art collections sold, he was reduced to poverty and given a benefit for which he made a pathetically prophetic play, called "The Old Actor," its story being that of a dying actor in deep distress. Henry A. Lytton pays tribute to Barrington in his new book, "Secrets of a Savoy Art." "No one," says Lytton, "could have done more than Barrington by his example on the stage to encourage refinement in the Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

RUTLAND BARRINGTON.

Up from the Chorus.

Gladys Cooper's portrayal of the title part in Pinero's "Second Mrs. Tanqueray," at the Playhouse theater, is of a character worthy to rank with that of the greatest exponents of the rôle, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Duse, Jane Hading, Olga Nethersole, and Mrs. Kendal. Miss Cooper began in the Gaiety theater chorus and became a famous beauty on picture postcards. Ambitious to become an actress, she studied earnestly and made steady progress under several leading West End managements. As Paula Tanqueray she proves her tragic powers. All previous Paulas have been neurotic. Miss Cooper gives the rôle a fine new reading, that of tigress, not snake. The play has not aged as had been feared. Its technique is fresh, modern, despite the fact it was written thirty years ago and it held the audience in silent tension from beginning to end. It is regarded now as Pinero's masterpiece.

Theater Exhibition Causes Stir.

There is an interesting international theater exhibition at Victoria Albert museum. Nine large rooms are filled with 900 exhibits of the theater, stage architecture, photographs, and scenery. There are scores of illuminated models of stage settings, showing the advances in art of the greatest painters and de-

"Think Beverage" Cold! Pup Remains a Chicken

...of course, she get her own way in the end, which is the manner of most films nowadays.

So we say thank you, inside, for the pleasant cooling, and we say, inside to ourself, "It is nice and clean film—but adds up completely nothing." We come to ideals and debate. Have we squander money which is so hard to get there is now getting it?

No, we say. We have had pleasant hours. But we are not uplift and surprise and strengthen.

Our bull dog will have to think he is a miserable hen. No argue.

THE KICK KORNER

ITS OBJECT: OBJECTION.

My dear Miss Tinée: In many ways the producers of pictures have accomplished wonders; they have, in fact, proven themselves marvels in a world which drearily exclaims: "There is nothing new under the sun!" They have spent fortunes in securing the screen rights of the best to be had in the way of fiction; they have shared in the pick of the successes of the stage; they have paid out enormous salaries to the most noted writers of the day—and they then proceed to spoil half of the enjoyment by the most flagrant miscasting of their stars.

Is Wallace Reid a good actor? I'm sure I don't know. Paramount has put him submerged in he flapper parts for so long I have completely forgotten the fast coming Wally of five years ago. Tom Meighan, the crashing, dashing star of "The Miracle Man," is now a hand waving, sweet smiling lover who assures us he loves women, children, and animals. "The Conquest of Canaan" and "A Prince There Was"—yes, indeed!

Charles Ray, once Chicago's best loved male star, is sinking into the depth of mediocrity, because Producer-Director Ray insists upon casting Actor Ray in parts totally unsuited to him.

Remember "Revelation"? Some picture! Well, Nazimova is out to show us that it was just an accident.

The prize boner of the year was the casting of Agnes Ayres as the leading lady in "The Sheik." And again: by no stretch of my imagination can I picture the earnest, deadly swashbuckler—D'Artagnan—as a clownish jumping jack!

Nothing can kill off the player who is ideally cast. Just last week, in a large southern city, three of the screen's most noted stars hooked up in a battle for box office supremacy, and after a week's run of their pictures the honors were copped by a brilliant comedienne who had sense enough to heed the warnings of her friends and go back to the studio and the roles in which she became famous. All of which proves, my dear Miss Tinée, that the old saying: "Shoemaker, stick to thy last" may be transposed to apply to our screen stars. JAY DEE SEE.

Dear Miss Tinée:
Little Jack Horner read the Kick Korner
And greatly disgusted was he
With wise crackin' blokes and their silly jokes,
Addressed to "My dear Miss Tinée."

Let him who reads run or he'll be undone
And thrills will no longer be rife.
Ye amateur critic is so analytic
He takes all the joy out of life.

LOONEY LOUIE.

[Editor's Note—He likes his movies "as is."]

Dear Miss Tinée: I've just now found time to ask—how could you!! Am speaking with reference to a remark you made two or three—maybe four—Sundays ago, when you said that perhaps you might write interestingly enough to intrigue the interest of the young population—between the ages of 10 and 16—on that particular Sunday. (I think you were reviewing some juvenile picture.) As if we young people don't read the movie column!!! Surprisedly FREDERIQUE.

P. S.—I do read the m. c.—really—every day!

(Ed. Note: ONE friend, thank heaven, who reads us and admits it.)

ASK ME! ASK ME!

P. F. M.: I think the man was entirely right for thinking that you should work instead of lounging in your sweetly scented room reading Shaw. Scoff all you want at "dollars" but dollars mean doughnuts, and I reckon even you, dreamer that you proudly claim you are, eat now and then. Your last letter leaves me entirely unsympathetic.

MISS T. B.: A "picture of our new star, Rodolpho Valentino"? Why, yes, my dear, you might write to him at 7139 Hollywood boulevard, Los Angeles. A letter addressed to Mary Miles Minter, Hollywood, will reach her. Ywekkum.

TRIBUNE READER: Thank you for the information regarding Alice Terry. We'll put it on file.

ESTHER: Yes, it's pretty hot today. But it's been pretty cold, and if we'd had to build a fire in the furnace after the house was all cleaned (it smokes—furnace, not house) THAT would have been awful. "Always something to be thankful for," said Pollyanna.

Browsing Back for Film Classics

Dear Matinée: Among the pictures that hang on memory's wall "The Miracle Man" I consider the most awe inspiring. Next my favorite screen artists, Dustan Farnum and Winifred Kingston, in "David Garrick," and, just to show their versatility, "A Son of the Emerald Isle"; William Farnum in "The Spoilers," also featuring Tom Sanschi, Katheryn Williams, and Bessie Eyeton; James K. Hacket in "The Prisoner of Zenda," Ethel Barrymore in "The Nightingale," Mary Pickford in "Dawn," Frank Keenan in "The Sins Ye Do," William S. Hart in "Hell's Gate" Tom Meighan in "Male and Female," Tom Moore in "The Gay Lord Quex," Pauline Fredericks in "The Woman in the Case," Theda Bara in "Under Two Flags," Nazimova in "The Brat," Pavlowa in "The Dancing Girl," Olga Petrova in "The Butterfly," "Sessuaye Hawaka in "Black Roses," Edith Story in "The Christian" with Earl Williams; Earl Williams in "The Hawk," Harry Morey with Clara Kimball Young in "His Official Wife," "The Million Dollar Bid," with Harry Morey, Julia Swane Gordon, and Anita Stewart.

Dear Mae Tinée: May I join your ranks as movie fan correspondent? Three film pictures stand out boldly in my memory—"Cabiria," Marguerite Clark's "Prunella," and Chaplin's "Vabahond"—or was that the name of it? The one where he rescues the gypsy girl, and takes care of her, and loses her to her rich relations, and pretends with his fiddle he doesn't care, and then hides his head and weeps—you know."

[I believe you mean "The Tramp."]

D. G. W. comes with a mindful:

"Dear Miss Tinée: Don't you remember Nazimova in 'Revelation?' I can still see wonderful pictures of a Bohemian art studio, Joline giving her jewels to the madonna, and Joline amongst the nuns. So far as Mary Pickford's concerned, I remember 'The Little American.' Maybe it's because that was the first picture of Mary Pickford I saw. The wedding scene way back in 'Dulcy's Adventure,' with Mary Miles Minter, made an impression too.

"I am surprised that no one has mentioned 'The Miracle Man.' How can it be forgotten? I might also name Douglas Fairbanks in 'He Comes Up Smiling,' Vivian Reed in 'The Princess of Patches,' and 'A Kiss for Susie,' with Vivian Martin; also 'Shoulder Arms,' of course. 'Miss George Washington' was dandy. Miss Clark did not make another picture of that type until her latest, 'Scrambled Wives,' and that wasn't as good.

"I wonder if several years from now we will muse over 'Gypsy Blood,' and the 'Passion Flower.'"

Dear Miss Tinée: Your Browsing Backward column interests me. It brings back to me memories of pictures that will never be wholly forgotten. The first I shall name is an outstanding classic—"The Christian," with Edith Storey as Glory. Best wishes and good luck to you and your column. SANDY.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Francs Go Like Lightning for Taxicabs in Paris

By Mme. X.

"PARIS is just a horange, just a horange," says Miss Polly Gay of Staffordshire, thereby hitting the nail squarely on the head. In its ground plan the most beautiful, bewildering city in the world closely resembles an orange, or, more accurately speaking, several slices of orange. The Place de l'Etoile is the center of one slice, the Place de l'Opera is the center of another, the Place Vendome of a third, the Place Madeleine of a fourth, and so on. From each center radiates a ganglion of avenues, boulevards, and streets well calculated to lead the stranger astray.

If only those "places" would stay put! But they don't. Time and time again I tried to go afoot from the Place Vendome together the Place de l'Opera or the Place Madeleine, only to find myself in quite another spot from that at which I was aiming.

I believe it is the cab men who mix those centers up so the unwary will have to patronize the taxis. Certain it is that I spent more in taxis in Paris than in all the rest of my travels. Fortunately this item in the expense account does not have to be included in the returning American's list of expenditures which is presented to the American customs. Equally fortunate is it the Paris taxis are cheap, the only cheap thing, let it be said, in the French capital. Everything else in Paris—hotels, restaurants, theaters, gowns, bonnets, gloves, stockings, and coiffures—cost much more than they do with us.

Francs, even at the present rate of exchange, go like lightning. Probably the natives know of places and dealers where it costs less to purchase these pleasures and articles than those patronized by the financially plethoric American.

Looking Over the City.

There are many vantage points from which to survey the delightful panorama of Paris, but none surpasses the view to be had from the northwest corner of the roof of the Hotel Crillon. High above the Place de la Concorde (the most beautiful square of its kind in the world) one looks out across the Seine to the pillared, gray facade of the chamber of deputies, formerly a Bourbon palace. It is a spot so far above the street that the clamor of the great traffic rises blended into a sonorous, harmonious symphony. Beyond the chamber of deputies to the right soars the dome of the Hotel des Invalides, tomb of Napoleon I. and the greatest of his name. Still farther on, a sort of presiding skeleton, rises the Eiffel tower, unsightly but not unimpressive.

Between this and the spectator's viewpoint the dense foliage of the Champs Elysees lies in sort, bulbous clouds leading the eye up to the distant Arc de Triomphe, pale symbol of the hopes and fears of France. Beneath its central arch lies the unknown soldier to whom has been given the honor of representing the silent army of unrecognized dead of each nation. In Washington we buried him with our other military dead at Arlington. In England they placed him in St. Paul's cathedral, where lie the bones of Nelson and Wellington. In Italy they placed him at the foot of the blazing statue of Victor Emmanuel and he forms the chief feature of the imposing Triumphal monument which towers above all Rome, both ancient and modern.

Of all these carefully chosen resting places that of the French unknown soldier seems the most desirable. Daily thousands of the living pass by his tomb. There is hardly an hour of the twenty-four when there is not a little group of people standing and studying his inscription. He lies in the middle of his fellow countrymen. He is a part of their daily life. The living are not more alive than is this unknown dead.

Holding Back the Enemy.

In 1871, when the Germans planned their triumphal entry into Paris, a part of their program was to march in with banners flying and drums beating, passing, as the first stage of their entry, through the great central arch of the monument built in honor of Napoleon I. The night before, however, a simple citizen of France spent the hours between dark and dawn in digging up the pavement under this arch in such a way as to make it impassable to the conquering troops. It was not known for a long time who he was. When it finally came out a nearby street was named for him. I have forgotten the name, though the street was pointed out to me.

One of the midnight spectacles in Paris is the occasional visit of an ex-German Zeppelin, one of the spoils of war, which lives in a hangar outside of the city. Occasionally it is taken out of its home and, windows all abiase, circles over the city it probably used to visit under quite different circumstances. It is a satisfactory sight to the Parisians as it roars through the dark blue night sky and roams about, flying as low in the air as it is safe to navigate it.

A permanent haze seems to hang over Paris even on the clearest days. This enhances distances and gives a charm and mystery to the city quite different from the smoky splendor of London, not to mention another and a smokier metropolis which you and I know, where there are also lovely atmospheric effects, especially at sunset from the boulevard link bridge to the west.

Meeting Old Friends.

The first morning after my arrival in Paris I met in an hour on or near the Place Vendome more of my fellow citizens than I would have met anywhere outside of Chicago. There was a family group of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter and Miss Alice Carpenter chatting with Potter Palmer and Mrs. Stanley Field [the latter is now at home again]. A few steps farther on I ran into the Russell Tysons. Not far off were the A. A. McCormicks, monsieur, madame, et mademoiselle.

The two latter were at that time immersed in getting a strictly Parisian trousseau for Miss McCormick, who is about to marry Mr. Sturm of the west, the marriage being set for June 20 or thereabouts, in London. In this high dressmaking orgy Mr. McCormick was of no emphatic assistance, so he wandered about Paris, turning on it the same cold and critical eye with which he regarded northern Africa and southern Italy. Miss Marion Warner, who went to Europe with the McCormicks, at that time had left them for a visit to the Passion play at Oberammergau. Many other of our citizenry attended this historic, semi-religious affair, undaunted by tales of the surly treatment of foreigners, especially Americans, which have been coming out of Germany in a thickening flood since the tide of travel set that way in the spring. Miss Edith Blair, who spent the winter in Paris, joined her brother, Seymour Blair, in Munich and both went to the famous little mountain village where the inhabitants have for many generations dedicated themselves to this presentation, once a decade, of

MRS. WALLACE LOVERIN CLARK.
[Mellen Photo.]

Miss Jane Wiggins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wiggins of 4927 Lake Park avenue, was married to Wallace Loverin Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace G. Clark of 4448 Drexel boulevard, Saturday, June 3, at the residence of her parents. Mr. Clark and his bride are spending their honeymoon in Atlantic City and New York.

The marriage of Miss Mary Stuart Marshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morris Marshall of 5816 Kenmore avenue, and Dulany F. De Butts Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Dulany F. De Butts of Upperville, Va., took place Saturday evening, June 3, at the Church of the Atonement and was followed by a reception at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall. The bride's only attendant was her younger sister, Agnes. Mr. and Mrs. De Butts are spending their honeymoon motoring in Wisconsin and will be at home after July 1 at 764 West North avenue, Lima, O.

Miss Caroline de Windt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heyliger A. de Windt of Winnetka, became the bride of Albert Bellner Gardner of 39 East Elm street, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Gardner of New York, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Winnetka Congregational church. There was a reception immediately following the ceremony at the residence of the bride's parents, 595 Sheridan road. The bride, who made her debut two years ago, was attended by her sister, Alice, as honor maid, the bridegroom's sister, Miss Mary Dexter Gardner, and Mrs. Hibbard Casselberry, Mrs. Robert H. Gardner, Miss Sarah Bennet, Mrs. Hallett W. Thorne, and Miss Dorothy Butolph as bridesmaids.. Little Ruth de Windt and Mary de Windt, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Delano de Windt of Great Barrington, Mass., and nieces of the bride, were flower girls.

Chicago's Greatest

$10 and $15 Sale

Positively the Greatest Sale in Years

THERE are many sales announced—and there always will be—but the one great question is values!! The House of Komiss announces for Monday an extraordinary sale that should interest every woman in Chicago. The values are really sensational, but they must be seen to be appreciated. We cannot emphasize these values too strongly—we only urge you to come and see for yourself. We cannot guarantee that there will be sufficient garments to last throughout the day, so we suggest that you come early!!

CAPES, WRAPS, COATS, SUITS, SPORTS WEAR, Values to $45, at $10

ABOUT 700 garments from our high priced groups where assortments are incomplete. Many have been exhibited in our show windows—others are samples. Cranes Returning to America.

Other Chicagoans—for we claim our sons and daughters no matter how far they roam—who went to Oberammergau were the Richard Cranes 3d. They spent a few days in Paris on their way from Czecho-Slovakia before going to Germany. They had a most interesting sojourn in Prague, where Mr. Crane was the official representative from this country to this young Slav republic. His father, the "traveling Crane," as his wit calls him, or the "wandering Christian," as another admirer dubs him, Charles R. Crane as you and I know him—was an old and devoted friend of the great Bohemian patriot, Masaryk, who, on the birth of the Czecho-Slovakian republic, was made its first president. In fact, Mr. Crane had given substantial aid to him in his struggle for the independence of his country, so the appointment of young R. T. Crane was especially acceptable to the new president.

By the way, though the constitution of Czecho-Slovakia provides that a president shall only hold office for six years and be ineligible to reelection, Masaryk is made the one exception and is to hold this office for life.

Prague, like every other city, was overcrowded, so the Cranes could find no suitable habitation. With the magnificence which generally marks the movements of this distinguished family, they were not dismayed; they simply bought an ancient and well-known castle, Schonnborn, and fitted it up in semi-royal style. Their successors were glad to get the castle, not having their own furniture, did not want that of the Cranes.

The latter therefore have packed it up and are shipping it to their new home in this country, the famous Virginia place, Westover. This lovely estate on the James river, they acquired while they were still in Prague by sending Mr. Crane's father, Charles R. Crane, who was then American minister in Peking, who cabled back, "Buy it." Thereupon still another cable message accomplished the purchase. How much this hurrying world owes to Benjamin Franklin! The young Cranes and their child are returning to this country and will spend the summer months at the C. R. Crane place in Woods Holl, Mass., before settling down in "ole Virginny."

California Papers Please Copy.

To return to Paris for a moment: One of the best looking couples that was to be encountered on those thronging boulevards last month was the Robert C. Chatfield-Taylors. Cheerful and ornamental, they seemed to be getting a great deal out of the French capital, especially in the line of music, Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor being musical in her tastes. The Chatfield-Taylors are spending the summer in England and plan to return to their Santa Barbara home in the autumn. [California papers please copy.]

Other Chicagoites disporting themselves in Paris in May were Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Dick, John Sumner Runnells, Mrs. Henry Dangler, Mrs. N. S. Davis, Mrs. B. F. Ayer, Deering Davis, Mr. Alfred Baker, Miss Mary Baker, Mr. Stanley McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Spaulding, Mrs. H. H. Kohlsaat, Ernest Winston, Henry Hooper, Vincent Bixby, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Eddy and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard. The Spencer Eddys have bought a historic chateau near Paris which they are fitting up in the most up to date manner as a permanent residence.

Not all of our Chicagoans in Paris are bent on pleasure. For instance, Monroe Cramer, who, with his wife and two children, left home six months ago, settled down to serious business there. He went to Paris to study architecture. He has been applying himself to such good purpose that recently, in a class of 456 which presented itself for admission to the Beaux Arts [that school of ambitious embryo architects] he passed twelfth among the ninety-six who were admitted, a creditable achievement. He has probably three years more of study before he will return to practice his profession in Chicago.

Chicagoan Falls Victim.

One Chicagoan who fell a victim to the wiles of Paris and yet was able to lose his infatuation to good account was Charles H. Wacker Jr. He went to Paris as a tourist about two years ago and was so enamored of the life and aspect of the French capital that he felt he did not want to live anywhere else. He set about making this possible [for even in Paris one must live on air and sunshine], and therefore opened a tea dance and after theater supper dance place. I think that it is dubbed "So Different," or some such fantastic name. It is said to be popular among the patrons and stars of the theatrical world.

A week in Paris is an utterly inadequate time to give to this world famous capital. I felt like apologizing to the Eiffel tower when I departed early one morning to catch the steamer for New York. Alluring as was the French capital there was a strong pull to the west started on the writer. For one thing, there were these numerous June weddings beckoning. If the young will commit matrimony we must all be on hand to ring the wedding bells.

The first of this June series is the marriage next Thursday of Miss Dorothy Kosiy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kosiy, to Graham Aldis, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aldis, which is to be solemnized at St. Chrysostom's at 4 o'clock. A small reception follows at the bride's home in Ritchie place. June 24 is the date set for the wedding of Miss Eleanor Newell to William Busby Jr., while that of Miss Elizabeth Farwell to Aimée Millet will be a week later. Do you wonder that we felt it incumbent on us to return when we did?

Busy as Bees.

The nearer I came to Chicago the more perceptible was a vast sound as of bees humming in a huge hive. It was not factories or steel mills; it was not the Board of Trade; it was not the elevated roads [the noisiest of their kind in the world]; it was not politics; it was the women of Chicago still on their job of running an infinite number of enterprises, each one an undertaking for the benefit of the community.

I had not unpacked my gripsack before the promoters of the Girl Scouts, the leaders in the garden clubs, the supporters of the summer opera at Ravinia, the mainstays of Eli Bates settlement, and the committee in charge of raising money for Alice Home hospital, not to mention a lot of other excellent advocates for excellent objects, were telling me about their work and achievements. It put Europe immediately in the background.

Vesuvius faded into thin air before the importance of raising money with which to buy the forty acres on Pleasant lake, near Elkhorn, which the finance committee of the Girl Scouts is undertaking, so that these young and eager scouts may have a permanent camp. What their organization is to these young girls those who have not seen one of these camps in full service can hardly realize. It is a vision of splendor as was the Holy Grail to Sir Launfal. It brings out of them poetry, heroism, high endeavor, and real achievement. Their flag raisings, investitures, drills, and other ceremonies are heart stirring to onlookers and to participants alike. The sojourn in a camp sends every girl home healthier in body, mind, and soul and better fitted for the subtle complications of a young woman's life in our complex civilization.

Mrs. A. A. Sprague is at the head of the finance committee, which includes the Mesdames Lester Armour, Samuel Chase, George A. Ranney, Clair E. More, J. D. Strauss, Julius Rosenwald, and Miss Grace Temple. Mrs. Rosenwald is honorary commissioner of the Chicago chapter of the National Girl Scouts. Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter is active commissioner and Mrs. Lester Armour is associate commissioner.

Lovers of Flowers.

The gardens at Tivoli near Rome are now obscured in my memory by the thought that next Saturday and Sunday the North Shore Horticultural society and the Garden club of Lake Forest will hold a show of flowers and vegetables at the Gorton school in Lake Forest, in connection with which five of the famous Lake Forest gardens will be open to those who buy tickets for this show.

Besides studying the latest proofs of fine gardening and the most up to date way of arranging cut flowers for the dinner table and drawing room, you may visit Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney's glowing Spanish garden, Mrs. T. E. Donelley's charming arrangement of lawns, shrubs, and flowers [which gives an effect of suites of green salons, opening one out of the other], Mrs. Walter Brewster's poetic garden of months [now fenced off from the passing world by the handsome iron fence which once was a feature of the Charles Hutchinson house on Prairie avenue], Mrs. Joseph Cudahy's lovely French gardens and her delightful pavilion, and end up with the Louis Swifts' gay Japanese garden which is the only one of its kind in this neighborhood and is a joy to the imaginative and lover of the picturesque.

When I contemplate these and the other beautiful gardens which adorn the north shore I realize that the scepter has passed from the older countries of Europe and that here in our own land the art of gardening is being more highly developed than anywhere else in the world. In landscape gardening we have still something to learn from those old garden artists of Italy, France, and England. A visit to William C. Egan's place at Highland Park shows what can be done with a comparatively small property, given taste and insight into the possibilities of vistas and using the lay of the land.

Sale of Italian Needlework.

Tomorrow begins a sale of Italian linens and needlework, the work of Italian women connected with the Eli Bates settlement house in West Elm street. The officers of this excellent and long established house are opening a shop in the studio building on the southeast corner of North Michigan avenue and Ontario street. There will be a circulating library also run in connection with the shop. Memories of the Mercato Nuovo (new market) at Florence arise as I read the prospectus of this new enterprise. The Italian needlewomen are unsurpassed in the world, and wherever they bring their wares they always find a market for them. It is a real opportunity which is offered to connoisseurs of this kind of hand work.

Mrs. Arthur Farwell is president of the board that manages the affairs of this the first social settlement of Chicago. Eli Bates, who left money to establish this enterprise, was a fine old pioneer who, having made his money in Chicago, at his death left it to the city in various donations. He bequeathed money to put up a statue to Lincoln which gave us the finest portrait statue of modern times, St. Gaudens' statue of our great President, which now stands at the head of Dearborn avenue in Lincoln park. The bronze fountain in the flower garden in the same park is from a legacy of his.

Where Night Moths Flutter High.

I hope you have bought a book of tickets for the Ravinia opera season. If you have you are helping to support one of Chicago's choicest, most delightful institutions. The season opens Saturday, June 24, with the most talked of opera of today, "Boris Godenow." They were giving it in Naples, in Rome, and in Florence when I was in Italy. When I arrived in Paris it was also announced on the lists of coming opera at the Paris grand opera.

Nowhere will it be given better than right here on our own north shore in that great, cool pavilion swept with the scent of nearby flowers and where the night moths flutter high above the audience while the sopranos, tenors, contraltos, baritones, and bassos voice the sorrows and joys of mankind as put into melody by the greatest composers in the world. It is a musical treat such as you will find nowhere else or in any other country, under conditions not to be equaled anywhere else. It gives a distinction to our summer life which is unique. Don't fail to do what you can to make this as permanent an enterprise as our civic opera.

MRS. BENJAMIN CARPENTER.
[Koehne Photo.]

Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter of 1545 Astor street is the active commissioner of the Girl Scouts of Cook county and is on the finance committee which will start a campaign shortly to raise $20,000 with which to purchase a site of land on Lake Pleasant, Wis., for a permanent camp. Mrs. Julius Rosenwald is the honorary commissioner and Mrs. Lester Armour the associate commissioner. Others on the finance committee are Mrs. Albert A. Sprague, Mrs. Rosenwald, Mrs. Armour, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mrs. George A. Ranney, Mrs. Clair E. More, Mrs. I. S. Strauss, and Miss Grace Temple.

16,000 Pairs Women's $3 $4 and $5 Finest Silk Hose from the Atlas Hosiery Mills, 1.39

Main Floor—Center

At a saving so great that words can hardly apprise you of it, this purchase from the Atlas Hosiery Mills, Paterson, N. J., will be the magnet for thousands of women tomorrow, during the progress of one of the most extraordinary hosiery sales recorded in many a moon.

The very finest pure ingrain silk hosiery that money can buy—every pair full fashioned. The legs and tops are all-silk, and many of the feet are pure silk.

A large proportion are the very much wanted sand and light shades. Included are black or white hose with lavender or gold striped tops. Mill substandards of $3.00, $4.00 and $5.00 silk hosiery, and so we can quote this most surprisingly low price. But please note that the damage is slight, indeed in many cases you'll not be able to say why they're termed sub-standard (limit twelve pairs), at..... 1.39

Men's Underwear Third Floor

A "Juspul" Corset at $4 Is the Nemo Summer Special

Third Floor—Dearborn Street

Do you know just what the Nemo "Juspul" Corset is? We believe it will be the most popular corset for summer wear you have ever worn—it is neither a front nor a back lace corset and has all the advantages of a rubber corset with none of its drawbacks—no lacing—on or off in a jiffy.

The most comfortable and convenient summer corset, for it enables you to be perfectly comfortable at rest or to indulge in your favorite outdoor pastime and still know that your figure has the scientific hygienic support it should have—as illustrated here.

Made of pink silk striped batiste with very low top, sizes 24 to 32—let us fit you to a pair tomorrow and see for yourself how delightfully comfortable they are — no extra charge for fittings here—and you have the services of Chicago's best corsetieres—priced at $4

You'll find our fitting rooms the coolest, best ventilated in Chicago.

The Summer Circlet made of pink batiste, the front is lace trimmed, self-adjusting of course, flattens the bust and shoulder flesh and makes you look years younger; sizes 34-46, at 1.50

The Lake Is Near

Yes, only a block away is the shaded park, with its sheltered beach. The municipal beach is three blocks off. So, you see, the lake is always handy.

And the delightful surroundings are more than equaled by the comfort and "homeyness" of the Rogers Park Hotel itself, now some six months old and running with unusual excellence of service.

Enjoy summer housekeeping here—as many meals as you wish in your own pleasant dining-room, and our satisfactory restaurant service to depend on, for breakfast, luncheon and dinner.

You are invited to inspect our facilities and unusual advantages for making you comfortable—will you call Sheldrake 2000 and arrange for carefully looking over the available suites?

What Canada Costs

You read of the exclusive advantages of the Grand Trunk's Canadian resorts; you view numberless moving pictures showing their rare scenery; you hear glowing accounts from enthusiasts who spend their summers there; but perhaps you hesitate to spend your vacation in Canada. Why?

Her resorts are so unlike ours in climate, general tone and numberless characteristics that no vacationist should think of casting the die before first ascertaining what Canada costs.

Our guide books go into charming detail, create delightful expectation and are free.

On board The International Limited one travels from Chicago to Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec in the height of luxury, which may be continued in the great Canadian resort hotels or abandoned for more modest cottage, rustic camp or just tenting and canoeing with Indian guides.

Canada calls loudly, but persistently. Answer her fascination, first learning exactly its amenities and free guide books and rates of fare, which title your shore and her reductions.

TOMORROW

By Guy Lee

If you're blue as a fish,
And your trials go double,
Do not lose your ambish
On account of your trouble.
It is sometimes quite well
To be jolted by sorrow,
And you never can tell
What will happen tomorrow.

If your gal's moods are strange
And her words cold and colder,
Don't grouch; things may change
Ere you're very much older.
Her no may mean yes,
That's the way women are—O
You never can guess
What will happen tomorrow.

Rally round! You may net
The best raise e'er collected,
And again, still, and yet
Get the gate unexpected.
But however it goes
You're a simp woe to borrow,
For today never shows
What will happen tomorrow!

To Have Curly, Wavy Hair "Like Nature's Own"

In three hours you can have just the prettiest curls and waves! And they remain a long time; when Silmerine is used before doing up the hair. When the hair is combed out it will be nice and fluffy. Silmerine is perfectly harmless, of course, and is easily applied with a clean tooth brush. It can be obtained at drug stores and at toilet counters generally, directions accompanying each bottle. It serves to keep the splendid dressing, keeping the hair soft and glossy.

Silmerine is fine for the outdoor girl as it prevents the hair from straying about the face and neck, even when the day is quite warm or windy. A boon to the bobbed hair girl!

SHADOWS OF SOME COMING OPERATIC EVENTS : : : By EDWARD MOORE

Didur, Dux, and Danise to Lead Ravinia Season

RAVINIA'S opening, a fortnight hence, will be devoted to Moussorgsky's "Boris Godounoff," as has been indicated in Mr. Eckstein's bulletins on the 1922 season; and the second night's opera, also as previously intimated, will be "Madama Butterfly," which is, without much question, the most popular lyric play of the day, and the most attractive to the general public in the fifteen years or more which have elapsed since it was imported.

Adamo Didur, long one of the artistic assets in the activities of the Metropolitan Opera, will have the big, ample, sounding rôle of the title in Moussorgsky's work, with which we can now boast a measurable acquaintance, thanks to the itinerant Russians having included it in their springtime visit to the Olympic theater. Didur has had the rôle, save for two or three performances by Chaliapine last winter, ever since "Boris" was put into the Metropolitan's répertoire, in 1914. Chicago's direct acquaintance with Didur is not extensive, as yet, but he is withal a easy memory for a striking impersonation of the blind Archibaldo in "L'Amore dei Tre Re," with the Boston Opera company. Alice Gentle, Orville Harrold, and Léon Rothier also will be in "Boris."

A New Butterfly.

A new Cho-Cho-San is, like a new Tosca, or a new Carmen, or a new Brünnhilde, always a real adventure to the opera goer still capable of a glowing reaction to the things of the stage, and Claire Dux's coming in "Butterfly" will make an occasion of the second night of the season at Ravinia. We have had in recent summers some notable impersonations of Cho-Cho-San in the north shore pavilion: Muzio's, for one, in 1918; Florence Easton's, although that was an impersonation which antedated even Farrar's, inasmuch as Miss Easton sang the rôle for Col. Savage in some of the original American performances of the work; and Edith Mason's, a lovely demonstration of pure singing. As yet, our knowledge of Dux's art in opera is limited to her Mimi and Nedda; but her Cho-Cho-San is of high fame and popularity in Europe. Miss Dux will be the Suzuki; Morgan Kingston, the philandering seaman; Graham Marr, the worried consul.

Cautious, as always, in retailing details, Mr. Eckstein goes no farther in making known the definite répertoire beyond his second night; but the week to follow will be one of debuts, regardless of the arrangement into which the several operas may fall. Thus, Rosella Pareto is to be Violetta in a cast of "La Traviata," which will have Guiseppe Danise making his first appearance in opera hereabout as the elder Germont. He is true to one article of faith held by all Italian baritones of whom history makes record: he says Germont is his best rôle. Mario Chamlee, who has been coming through with interesting success since he first sang in Chicago, an unknown, three years ago, also will be in "La Traviata." Pareto's second rôle will be Lucia, doubtless.

A Double Debut.

A "La Bohème" planned for the first week will involve two other débutantes —the highly praised Queena Mario, as Mimi, and the young Czech soubrette, Anne Roselle, as Musetta—a rôle in which she has been taking a vast réclame down in the Metropolitan, from all accounts. Young Ballester, heard here last winter in a good Figaro and for one act as Rigoletto, will make his first Ravinia appearance as Marcello, a capital rôle when the right singer is in it; Didur will have his second rôle as the singer of the song of the coat; and Orville Harrold will resume a rôle in which he was often heard in his Ravinia beginnings, Rodolpho. Like Miss Roselle's Musetta, it is one of the impersonations in the last Metropolitan season about which much was said and written in warm praise.

Dux will get her second rôle in Massenet's "Manon," also in the first week, it is tentatively planned; and Louis Hasselmans with this opera will make his first appearance of the season. All the other works named will be conducted by Mr. Papi. Miss Peralta will be heard for the first time as Nedda, after Danise shall have sung Tonio's prologue; and Miss Gentle will return to one of her big rôles when "La Navarraise" is revived—with, probably, "Cavalleria" in the same bill. No date is indicated by Mr. Eckstein for any of the new operas apart from "Boris"; but he hopes to stage "Le Chemineau," "L'Amico Fritz," and "Otello," in the first half of the ten weeks' season. "However," he says, "the matter of main interest to the public just now is to become acquainted with the new members of the company; and we are making répertoire for the first fortnight with that end in view."

Verdict of an Observer.

Glenn Dillard Gunn delivered the dedicatory address at the opening of Smith Memorial hall, University of Illinois, a short time ago. The building is to be devoted to the uses of music. Mr. Gunn, pianist, conductor, teacher, critic and ardent American, has observed music from many points of view, and made good employment of the faculty of observation. He also has the ability to speak his mind with considerable force.

That there is plenty the matter with the cause of music in America' was Mr. Gunn's thesis. "This building," said he, "is a concrete and enduring monument to the fact that no scheme of education is complete without music; that no man may call himself literate who is musically illiterate; that to cultivate the mind alone is to leave half the nature untrained; that feeling and sensibility must be submitted to the discipline of beauty or they will be corrupted by the dissipations of ugliness."

Neglect of Native Born.

In his belief there are two great faults with the present plan of music. One is that especially in opera there is too much importation and not enough interest in the art of the native born. Being, as it is, an exotic from other lands, in this city of 3,000,000 it reaches an audience of 30,000, and there is an invariable deficit.

With the symphony matters are different. "Not only do they give symphony concerts that represent the best of all nations, America included, but they maintain a students' training orchestra; they give popular concerts and children's concerts; they invite the participation of resident talent in selecting soloists. As a result they reach a public of between 45,000 and 50,000, and one never hears of a deficit. The symphony began, it is true, as an immigrant art, but has become naturalized."

Facing Facts Squarely.

The worst part of it, insists Mr. Gunn, is that a great part of the trouble is sheer laziness on the part of the American composer. Having been in the thick of things here, he speaks feelingly. "Mr. Stock says to the young composers of Chicago: 'Bring me your scores. We will play them for you at the rehearsals of the Civic orchestra. Come to these rehearsals. Learn how the orchestra functions. Learn what the instruments actually can do and how the successful composers have made them sound.' Now you may tell the budding author to con his thesaurus, to learn to discriminate in the use of words, to polish and to refine his style, and he will be both grateful and heedful. But tell a young American composer that he must learn the mechanism of the orchestra, and offer him every opportunity to do so, and he prates of inspiration and hies him to the haven of the women's clubs, where the kind ladies plan his fame and his consolation with many honeyed words."

Mr. Gunn will probably not be thanked for this energetic statement of the case. His words bear every indication of being what is ordinarily understood as destructive criticism. In reality they are about as constructive as any utterance of the season. They at least show no disposition to do anything but face facts squarely.

Concerts and Recitals.

A series of Sunday concerts is now under way at Mooseheart, the philanthropic institution on the Fox river about forty miles west of Chicago. Today's program will be given by Vincenzo Gulliotta, violinist, and Grace Rocca, contralto, both of Chicago, and Harry Bartholomew, pianist, of Batavia.

Harold Henry, the Chicago pianist, now in Europe, was the first American to give a piano recital in Vienna since the war. They liked him, speaking of his superlative technical equipment and noteworthy plasticity in interpretation. In Berlin he was referred to as a splendid pianist, and Paris criticisms grew enthusiastic over "those qualities of intellect and temperament which have made his concert appearances in Paris this season events of real artistic importance." Some new compositions from his pen have been heard and applauded.

With the idea of raising the standards of glee club and male chorus singing in this part of the country, an intercollegiate society of nine colleges and universities has recently been formed. A contest will be held at either Orchestra hall or the Auditorium in February, at which time a loving cup will be presented to the winning glee club. The membership at present includes Beloit, Grinnell, Wabash, and Milliken colleges, and Northwestern, Chicago, Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin universities.

The three fellowships in musical composition established by the American academy of Rome are now filled. Leo Sowerby of this city was the first appointee, having been granted the fellowship not by competition but on the strength of his past achievements. Then followed Howard H. Hanson of California. The third fellowship, to which Walter Damrosch has appended his name, has been won by Randall Thompson of Roxbury, Mass. Winter Watts, a native of Brooklyn, received honorable mention in the final contest.

They are able to run an opera season in Europe with a much smaller répertoire than seems advisable in this country. Arturo Toscanini recently closed the season at La Scala in Milan, presenting ninety-four performances of only ten operas—that is, ten if the Puccini "Trittico" is considered as one and not three. "Boris Godounoff" led the list with fourteen performances; then came "Rigoletto" with thirteen, "Mefistofele" with twelve, "Parsifal" with eleven, and "Falstaff" with ten. The others were the above mentioned "Trittico," "The Barber of Seville," "La Wally," "Meistersinger," and "I Quattro Rusteghi."

LEADING OFF AT RAVINIA

Adamo Didur, baritone of the Metropolitan, and Claire Dux, soprano of here, there, and everywhere, have been chosen to head the casts of the first two operas presented at Ravinia a fortnight hence. Mr. Didur will open the summer season in the name part of "Boris Godounoff," sung frequently by him in New York in recent years. Miss Dux will sing Cho-Cho-San in "Madama Butterfly" on the following night, a role in which she is liked in Europe, but in which she has never appeared in this country.

From Head to Foot: A Mecca of Style that Every Woman will appreciate

THE style centers of this country and abroad have been carefully combed. The leading modistes have contributed their foremost achievements. Designers and dressmakers everywhere and our own master-craftsmen have outdone themselves.

Consequently, it will be a most unusual Style Exhibit that will bid for your favor at the opening of Chicago's Newest Fashion Salon.

Quality—and Price Our Pledge to the Women of Chicago

Quality has been, and always will be, the keynote of our every effort.

We are fortunate in being fortified with Buyers in every department who have been through the test of years of experience. They know values—they know how to buy.

So we are in a position to pledge to the women of Chicago that the Roberts Company prices are as low as it is humanly possible to sell the quality of merchandise which you will find at this Shop.

Summer Fashion exhibits that emphasize the Roberts Slenderizing Effects for Stout Women

THE woman of full-formed figure will be particularly attracted to this Shop because no effort has been spared in selecting modish garments in sizes up to 56.

Particular thought has been devoted to selecting models that emphasize the proper lines and to executing them in materials that are correct in character. And color combinations have been planned to produce the desirable slenderizing effects, and still permit the same unlimited choice which women of smaller proportions enjoy.

Opening Week Will Be a Notable Event

Glorious Summer Styles of unusual character are ready for Madame who would prepare now for Summer.

But, the Spring Season is still at its height, which lends particular brilliance to our Sale of Springtime Apparel which we shall feature during Opening Week.

Summer Sports Wear

SWEATERS BLOUSES SKIRTS

The vogue of sports apparel demands recognition. It will be extensively featured in this Shop. You may come here secure in the knowledge that you will be shown not only attractive and becoming styles, but those which are in addition absolutely correct. The Department Head can advise you authoritatively if desired.

BRITISH CENSOR DEALS BLOW AT "BEDROOM" PLAYS

signers. Ingenious novelties are numerous; for instance, Woodman Thompson's reversible and collapsible scenes for "Romeo and Juliet," enabling twenty-four changes of setting on a dark stage. There are some freakish German exhibits, theaters socalled, resembling sea shells and utterly unlike theaters. Experts are nonplussed. The American rooms have excellent designs and photographs from Lee Simonsen, Sheldon Viele, Norman Geddes, Throckmorton and Joseph Urban. Simonsen's "Back to Methuselah" settings and Throckmorton's "Emperor Jones" settings attract much attention.

The eighth series of Grand Guignol plays was successfully presented at the Little theater and the Grand Guignol style of entertainment, mostly horrors, seems established in the West End. It is wonderful what shockers the public will stand. In a typical piece, "The Hand of Death," a scientist's daughter is killed in a motor accident, and the scientist, assisted by the doctor lover, operate on the body and insert electrodes under the heart. The treatment momentarily restores the heart functions and the girl raises her arm, weirdly clutches her father's throat, and strangles him. "The vengeance of Death," cries the awestruck lover.

The Grand Guignol occasionally has provoked protests in London, especially from doctors, who denounce its effect on the public mentality, but apart from this there is no denying its consummate artistry of staging and acting.

The government tax on entertainments continues to provoke incessant protest in view of the depression among theaters and cinemas. The growth of the cinema industry here may be realized from the fact that about £40,000,000 is invested. The industry is terribly handicapped by the tax on each ticket sold when business is as bad as now.

William Fox is being lionized here as the "greatest showman in the film industry." He says his film, "Over the Hill," emphasizing the lesson of the fifth commandment, has had such regenerative influence that it has emptied American workhouses by from 25 to 50 per cent.

Author of Season's Best Play in Prison

By George Seldes.

BERLIN, June 10.—[By Special Cable.]—"Masse Mensch," the only real artistic play produced the last season, has been bought by the Theater Guild of New York. In this play, which deals with the experiences of the average man called upon to decide between love of man and love of humanity, Ernst Toller, the author, shows plainly the two loves are very different matters.

Among other scenes is one wherein the failure of the spring war offensive is reported, whereupon two capitalists appear upon the stage representing the stock exchange, bidding half a million lives as contribution for the continuation of the war. The greatest scene is the police storming the city hall, which a mob occupies singing the Marseillaise until the last man has fallen.

Numerous prominent Germans, including the president of the reichstag, Gerardt Hauptmann, and Chancellor Wirth, have petitioned the Bavarian government to grant Ernst Toller a furlough for the purpose of attending rehearsals of the new play, which is promised for the Grosses Schauspielhaus the coming season. Toller is now confined in a Bavarian fortress, serving a twenty year sentence in connection with the establishment of a Red republic in Bavaria in the spring of 1919, but Toller's friends insist he joined the Reds for the sole purpose of holding down riotous hotheads.

American Dramatist Makes Paris Debut

By Henry Wales.

PARIS, June 10.—[By Special Cable.]—George Middleton, whose dramas have frequented the boards of America the last few years, made his debut in Paris Wednesday night and it was a most successful one. His new play, one act, called "The Circle," was produced at the Nouveau theater, and Middleton was given an enormous ovation. The colony of American artists and intellectuals in Paris was in attendance.

The play is especially the kind which pleases French audiences, and it is sure that if Middleton can produce more like it he will have the French theater managers, who are now complaining of the dearth of good material, chasing him for translation. The play is a vivid picturing of a young girl who grows up in an atmosphere of hate and jealousy between her father and mother. French critics called the play worthy of the efforts of Ibsen, saying Middleton has all the Norwegian's depth and not his pessimism and gloom.

All Rome Flocks to Night Life Outdoors

By V. De Santo.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, June 10.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—Within the space of twenty-four hours at the beginning of this week the night life of Rome completely changed. A rather premature hot wave arrived and the Romans deserted opera houses, theaters, dance halls, movies, and gave themselves wholeheartedly to the joys of "sidewalk" life.

Americans arriving here for the first time get the impression that the entire Eternal City lives outside. Hundreds of thousands of people spend half the night sitting at tables stretching for blocks in front of innumerable cafés, sipping the raildest kinds of drinks and listening to little orchestras, but principally enjoying the cool air under the deep blue, starry sky. Via Venito, for example, the street best known to Americans, is one solid mass of tables, from Porta Pinciana to the Hotel Excelsior, the guests being furnished with refreshments by three cafés, the Golden Gate, the Rosati, and the Bussi, each one taking a whole block.

The opera houses and theaters are still open and repeating old numbers, but are losing money because audiences are pitifully small.

They Laugh at This in Vaudeville

RIALTO.

Norman and Lande:

"I'm looking for a few quiet, steady men."

"I know where you can find them."

"I am pleased to hear that. Where do you think I'll get them?"

"Right over there in the church yard you'll get any amount."

"The dinner you served at your cafe was terrible."

"Why, what was the trouble with it?"

"The meat was like a piece of leather and the knife was blunt."

"Then why didn't you strop the knife on your meat?"

"You're quite particular about your baby, aren't you?"

"Certainly; but why do you think so?"

"Because every time I see the nurse take the baby out for an airing there's a policeman with her."

"They charged like mad steers. I never saw anything to match it."

"Who do you mean? Are you talking about one of your old battles?"

"Of course not. I'm talking about my automobile repairer."

"Why is a watch dog bigger at night than at day?"

"Why?"

"Because he is let out at night and taken in the morning."

"My rheumatism is paining something terrible today. Every bone in my body aches."

"You ought to be glad you are not a fish."

"When are you going to pay me for that suit I made you?"

"My dear sir, I'm an actor, not a mind reader."

MAJESTIC.

Kellam and O'Dare:

"I haven't slept a wink since my wife left me?"

"Why?"

"Because I can't find her insurance policy anywhere."

"How about that money you owe me? Have you forgotten it?"

"No, but I will."

"Why don't you go and get a job?"

"I have a job."

"What are you doing?"

"I'm the blacksmith in a boiler room."

"The blacksmith in a boiler room? What do you do?"

"I shoo flies."

"Can you tell me why the Salvation Army girls make such good doughnuts?"

"No. Why?"

"Because they are so holy."

Contains the best preventative and corrective for pyorrhea known to dental science. For healthy, beautiful teeth, use Senreco Tooth Paste. Our Special Price, 27c.

Boncilla
is applied by spreading gently over the face as illustrated. This famous cosmic facial pack makes the skin clear, fresh and firm, lifts out the lines, and restores youthful contour.
Package o' Beauty, in three sizes, $1.00, $1.50 and $1.85.

NEW LISTERINE TOOTH PASTE
This is a new product. Lambert Pharmacal Co. would hesitate to offer the public one that has a right to expect as big a mouth-cleaning value as Listerine Tooth Paste.
Listerine Tooth Paste has the new, fruity taste. It would be a mistake to add to this any superficial or candy flavors which might be injurious. In the use of this paste you get results.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE DARK.

When in your darkened room you sleep
Outside your door I love to keep
A vigil so that I may hear
If you should cry in sudden fear,
And, calling to you through the gloom
Bring comfort to you in your room.

When you awake in vague affright
You sense my presence in the night,
And when from troubled sleep you start
My voice can calm your fluttering heart . . .
Although you hear my words it seems
But softly, dimly in your dreams.

And sitting, thinking in the gloom
I see us all as in a room,
A darkened room in troubled sleep,
In which we laugh and shout and weep
And call aloud in childish fear
To Some One always watching near.

The Best Joke I Ever Heard

What is the best joke you ever heard? Share it with The Tribune readers. One dollar will be paid for each joke published. Address the Jokes Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

The Last Straw.

Alfred had been a naughty boy again and his father punished him by a session in the barn. After a few lusty whacks with the slipper the father stopped and questioned the boy.

"Now, my son, tell me why I punished you," he said.

"That's just it," whimpered the boy, "you give me a good spanking and you don't even know why you did it."

N. B.

As Sharp as a Needle.

A clergyman was in the habit of going up to his little girl's bedside each evening and telling her a story before she went to sleep.

One evening he told her such a thrilling tale that the child, much impressed, looked up at her father and asked, "Daddy, is that a true story or are you preaching?" A. M.

One Taste Enough.

A woman wrote to an editor, "you sent back a story and I know you did not read it because I pasted several pages together as a test and it came back the same way."

The editor replied: "Madam, when I open an egg I don't have to eat the whole egg to discover it is bad."

C. T.

To Be Precise.

Old Allen, a prairie farmer, lost his cow on a Sunday morning and passed the preacher in his search. The minister promised him that if he would come to church with him announcement would be made of the lost cow and the congregation would turn out and help find her.

After the sermon, the minister made his first announcement about an address that evening by a woman temperance speaker.

At that point Allen, who was quite deaf, got up and said, "You can tell her easily, as one horn's cut off and she has an extra large foot.

G. M.

The Ins and Outs of It.

Small Rebecca was proud of her father's rank as a first lieutenant, and grew quite indignant when a neighbor boy called him "Captain."

"I'll have you understand that my daddy is not a captain," she said, "he is a lieutenant."

"O, it doesn't matter," replied the boy, "he's an officer."

"He is not an officer," she protested. "Yes, dear, a lieutenant is an officer," interrupted her mother.

"Well," persisted Rebecca, still determined to maintain her father's dignity at all cost, "he's not much of an officer, anyway." J. W. S.

A Foregone Conclusion.

A doctor was going through an insane asylum and passed by a clock.

Looking up to correct his watch, he asked a patient, who was standing near, if the clock was right.

The man replied, "Do you think it would be here if it was?" A. M. L.

He Got It.

A young and clever farmer's son obtained employment in a railroad shop. Every Saturday he would request a pass so he could visit his home.

At the fourth request, the foreman became much annoyed and said to the boy: "If you were working for a farmer would you expect him to hitch up and bring you to town every Saturday?"

"No," replied the farmer's son, "I would not, but if he was already hitched up and was going my way and there was plenty of room, and then he wouldn't let me ride, I would think he was mean and contemptible."

E. L.

That Settled It.

A doctor was addressing a class of Sunday school students and asked them what we must do in order to go to heaven.

One boy answered: "Well, we have to die."

"Yes, yes, of course," responded the doctor, "but what before that?"

Another spoke up: "We have to get sick and send for you." M. G.

Botany

Violets are world wide.

THE COLOR CALLED VIOLET.

HAVE you ever seen the true color violet? If not, its appearance may surprise you. There is no paint I know whose hue even approximates it. If you will take a glass prism dangler from a chandelier and through it look at a sunbeam streaming in by a crack, the most refragible color there will be violet. The paint called violet is purple mixed with white, and is hardly to be distinguished from the color lilac. True spectrum violet contains no trace of red, and is as near a brilliant gray as any color.

Eyes differ enormously in their capacity to see violet light. These waves lie at the extreme end of the spectrum where nerve perceptions fail rapidly. There are two enormous black rays in sunshine in the midst of the violet region, the H and K of calcium. Some observers find them easily; others assert, and with equally good visual evidence, that these rays are in the invisible ultra violet portion of light.

It is perfectly apparent, therefore, that these same observers could never agree on the color of the violet flower. More than a hundred species of blue violets are known, ranging from deep reddish purple to almost white. Some pale ones come close to the true color violet. Eyes which see violet light easily would say that such a pale violet has a pronounced color, while those that are blind to short rays would assert that it is white. Botanically this seems to be the explanation of white violets. Some species key their colors up so high that none of us can see them.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

his poems has been made which is—explanatorily—called "Songs Out of Doors." It is a tiny book destined for a knapsack.

Best Sellers in France.

HENRY VAN DYKE.

A literary correspondent from Paris for one of the New York papers has gone to the trouble to gather statistics about the best sellers in France which are most interesting. Here they are:

Among the Zola novels the best sellers were: "Le Debacle," 260,000; "La Terre," 247,000. They were the record breakers until Edmond Rostand came forward in the late 1890s. Two of his plays sold in these enormous quantities: "Cyranno de Bergerac," 538,000, and "L'Aiglon," 406,000. These stand as the best sellers records of France.

"Les Desenchantees," by Pierre Loti, with 332,000, and "Le Lys Rouge," by Anatole France, with 326,000, outnumber the Zola successes.

A number of French books published lately have eclipsed Zola. "Maria Chapdelaine" has sold so far 349,000; Barbusse's "Le Feu" (published here as "Under Fire") has reached a total of 336,000, and his "L'Enfer" ("The Inferno" here), 284,000.

Already over 100,000 copies of the 1921 Goncourt prize, "Batouala," by a Negro, have been sold, and single novels by Rene Bazin and Henry Bordeaux have passed the 276,000 and the 150,000 mark, respectively.

Samuel Merwin's Latest.

"Goldie Green" is Samuel Merwin's latest dashing tale, this time about a young thing that says witheringly in the first chapter, "Babe, you burn me up," to a somewhat insolent person, and in the last, "We'd better just run off for a day or two—Michigan or Wisconsin. We can't bother to wal: for a license here. And we'll be too busy next week."

She is what would be called by the slanguage connoisseurs, a fast worker

Analyzing the Arms Parley.

Arrives a book called "The Eclipse of American Sea Power," written by Capt. Dudley W. Knox, U. S. N., retired, and published by the American Army and Navy Journal, of which Capt. Knox is naval editor. Henry J. Reilly, editor in chief of the Journal, and until recently a member of THE TRIBUNE staff, wrote a letter to the literary editor which explains the book so much better than I ever could—I would probably register completely negative in any mental test on navy affairs—that I'm quoting him verbatim:

"This book is the only one written on the arms conference by any navy or military authority, and it presents for the first time the American viewpoint of the recent happenings at Washington. Capt. Knox in this book concisely and accurately analyzes the results of the arms conference and points out just what each nation gained or lost through the deliberations in Washington. He proves that the United States henceforth will have to rely on the so-called 'new state of mind' among nations instead of on her fleet for the maintenance of peace and guarding our interests in the Pacific."

How O Henry Got His Name.

There has been much discussion lately about how O. Henry got his name. Stories with much less charm and veracity than the one about how the Camel got his Hump have been told. The one which survives, it seems, is that O. Henry took his name from the French authors of several pharmaceutical works—Ossian Henry père et Ossian Henry fils, who appeared on the back of the book as O. Henry, and were listed as O. Henry in the United States Dispensatory. Sidney Porter was a drug clerk and therefore had access to the Dispensatory. The French accepted Dr. Smith's theory.

O. HENRY.

And now comes Charles Finger and upsets it. In a letter to Kenelm Digby he says that he had the real story of Sidney Porter's pen name from a girl in San Angelo, Tex., who was a close friend of his. He was a singer, a quartet fiend, and one of his favorite songs was a Texas cowboy one called "Root, Hog, or Die," the tenth verse of which is:

Along came my true love, about ten o'clock,
Saying, Henry, O Henry, what sentence have you got:
The jury found me guilty, the judge would allow no stay.
So they sent me down to Huntsville to wear my life away.

Mr. Finger adds: "Doesn't that look reasonable? Wouldn't that kind of thing interest a fellow of Porter's makeup more than the names on a lot of dusty old pharmaceutical books?"

The Brogue of the Faddist.

"Invisible Exercise," is the title of a book of almost 300 pages which Gerald Stanley Lee has written, in which he attempts to be literary about exercise. He has a sense of humor that is so strained that it seems like an affliction. He could have said everything he had to say in a pamphlet the size of Walter Camp's "The Daily Dozen." His theories are that if we sit, walk, lie down and sleep correctly, if we balance our bodies, if we correlate our minds and our members we may . . . but you know the line.

Every faddist has the same brogue.

As a sample of the way Mr. Lee dilutes his ideas with words:

A man should take a little exercise in lying down and arranging his back, in putting his stomach where it belongs, and where it is safe for him to allow it to be while he is gone off to sleep.

Quick, Watson, the needle!

Best Sellers of the Ages

words: "How that scene lives still, the sprawl, the flushed faces, the angry voice of the boy!" Even the studied nil admirari pose of H. G. Wells cannot withstand Plutarch, and on page 520 I find him lamenting, by implication, that the great Constantine had no Plutarch.

Nearly forty years ago, when the Chelsea, (Mass.) public library was opened, Mr. Lowell said that it was no insignificant fact that eminent men have always loved their Plutarch, "because," he added, "example, whether for emulation or avoidance, is never so poignant as when presented to us in a striking personality."

Eminent men! From odds and ends of notes out of books and clippings out of newspapers I can patch you a paragraph about some of those eminent Plutarchians and it can begin with Petrach, the poet of love, and end with your Uncle Joseph Cannon, the statesman of practicality. Alfieri, like Shakespeare, built plays out of Plutarch—and some pretty bad ones, too; Montaigne loved him and wrote charmingly about him; Saint-Evremond used to read him aloud to the great Conde in the prince's tent; Rabelais was another of the lovers; so were Voltaire, Rousseau, and Sainte Beuve; Montesquieu extracted from Plutarch much of the material for his monumental work on the laws; Shakespeare's friend, Ben Jonson, shared the master's admiration of him; Napoleon was a great reader of Plutarch; Mr. Solie, the bookman, tells me he has heard, or read, that Plutarch was one of Roosevelt's favorite books, but we neither of us can find the reference; Sir John Lubbock put the Boeotian in his list of "100 best books"; Joaquin Miller, in 1910, gave first place among his literary loves to the "Lives"; Thoreau relished him much and frequently quoted him; the French were so glad to get a good translation of Plutarch that Henry II. made the man who did the job, Jacques Amyot, a bishop (Auxerre), and former Speaker Cannon says that seventy years ago, when books were not plentiful on the Wabash, he found the "Lives" "very useful."

But of all the praisers of Plutarch I most fondly follow Emerson, for that he best gave the reasons for the faith that was in him. He called him "the elixir of Greece and Rome" and "the laureate of the ancient world," and said his book was "a book of tart cathartic virtue." He said that if the world's library were burning he should fly to save his Plutarch, his Bible, his Shakespeare, and his Plato. He said, too, that Plutarch cannot be spared from the smallest library (1) "because he is so readable, which is much"; (2) "then that he is medicinal and invigorating." He often declared that "a boy has no better friend or influence than Scott, Shakespeare, Plutarch, and Homer." And this:

Go with mean people and you think life is mean. Then read Plutarch, and the world is a proud place, peopled with men of positive qualities, with heroes and demigods standing around us, who will not let us sleep.

Who are those men?

There are precisely fifty of them and many of them are men who were founders of the world as we today, in many of its essential aspects, know it—men who got the world ready for us—men who launched civilization—men who fought battles that fixed some boundaries which still stand—men who built cities that still are world capitals—men who made laws that today are incorporate, more or less, with the body of law that governs us. In short, Thesius, Romulus, Lycurgus, Numa, Solon, Themistocles, Pericles, the two Catos, Lysander, Alexander, Cæsar, Demosthenes, Cicero, Antony, Marcus Brutus, and so on and on from the mists of legend which envelop Theseus and Romulus to that day in 69 A. D. when betrayed Otho fell upon his sword. With that great scene the book of Plutarch, as now arranged, closes. From the Romulus of 753 B. C. to the Galba and Otho of 69 A. D., Plutarch gives you eight generous centuries of human struggle and aspiration and blunder and success—a picture of a world a-building and of society getting itself founded and into some sort of order, and he does all that by means of portraiture and apothegm. He combed the ages for good things—illuminating anecdotes about his heroes, pithy sayings of theirs, and what things their fellow citizens said about them or they about the citizens. He had a method so distinctly his own that no man for 1,800 years has been able to equal it in two of its supreme attributes—compactness and vividness. He gives you Julius Cæsar, the greatest man that ever lived—so Anthony Trollope who had studied him called him—full length in seventy-five pages. His greatest piece of biography—Antony—is only ten pages more. His Alexander, which is packed with facts and glowing with color, is less than 100 pages. The general run of the lives is between thirty and fifty pages.

Lowell said that the mere names of his heroes were mostly so trumpet-like as both "to waken attention and to warrant it," but his method was not grandiose. Here is the essence of it in his own words:

Nor is it always in the most distinguished achievements that men's virtues or vices may be best discerned; but very often an action of small note, a short saying, or a jest shall distinguish a person's real character more than the greatest sieges or the most important battles.

The greatest biography ever written was founded on that method, and when, early in his book, James Boswell, the king of biographers, quoted those words he called Plutarch "the prince of ancient biographers." The difference, as it turned out, was that the king took five volumes to tell about one man where the prince had taken five to tell about fifty.

So who was king then?

Let us end with a bit—just a bit of Plutarch's savor; here a line or two from the "Lives"—and some from his other good book, the "Moralia":

It is not God that injures thee, but thyself.
When the candles are out all women are fair.
Simonides calls painting silent poetry, and poetry speaking painting.
He who knows how to show the way well is sure to be well followed.
Lysander said that the law spoke too softly to be heard in such a noise of war.
He who deceives by an oath acknowledges that he fears his enemy, but despises God.
A prating barber asked Archelaus how he would be trimmed. He answered, "In silence."
Those who are fond of building will soon ruin themselves without the assistance of enemies.
There is no beast more savage than man when he is possessed of power equal to his passion.
Cato said they that were serious in ridiculous matters would be ridiculous in serious matters.
King Agis said, "The Lacedaemonians are not wont to ask how many, but where, are the enemy."
Though disbelief in religion and contempt of things divine be a great evil, superstition is a greater still.
He was like the man who threw a stone at a bitch but hit his stepmother, on which he exclaimed, "Not so bad!"
Dionysius the Elder, being asked whether he was at leisure, replied, "God forbid that that should ever happen to me."
Most men are more sensitive to contemptuous language than to unjust acts, for they find it harder to bear insult than injury.
One made the observation of the people of Asia that they were all slaves to one man, merely because they could not pronounce that syllable No.
The talkative listen to no one, for they are ever speaking. And the first evil that attends those who know not how to be silent is that they hear nothing.

ART AND ARTISTS

Art Institute Showing Tribune Prize Murals

By Eleanor Jewett.

WITH the awarding of THE TRIBUNE prize of $5,000 for murals by Paul Chapman, art in commerce has taken a step forward. Last year the idea was conceived to decorate the huge wall spaces of THE TRIBUNE city room, and a competition with this end in view was announced.

A number of artists responded to the summons. The single limiting factor in the competition was the reservation that all competitors should be registered students in the art school of the institute. Of the group who entered directly upon the work for THE TRIBUNE murals, seven were represented in the exhibit that opened last week in the institute upon the announcement of the prize.

The designs (some n color and others n black and white) for the murals are shown in gallery 254 of the east wing. It was evidently a matter of fine distinction, the judges had on their hands, when it came to the point of the final decision as to which designs were really the best. The decisive factor that gave the award to Paul Chapman was the note of freshness and original thought sounded in his work. There is, as was remarked by the judges, no trace of mimicry in his designs. He, apparently, is the pupil of no school and the follower of none other than himself.

The murals by Hildreth Meiere are more complete and composed in effect; those by William P. Walsh are richer in color, more dramatic in setting; the designs by Cady Ewell are heavier and somewhat more formal in conception; those by Charles St. Pierre and Miklos Gaspar are less impressive, perhaps; Marie MacPherson has set her work to a lighter key.

Thus we have left the murals by Paul Chapman—clear in color, open in composition, dramatic a bit, but trying, as he says, to express a symbolic realism. In the trial scene it is the victory of the press for free speech that is defined. The figure of Zenger is but symbolic of this victory; the judges and those about the court are but colorful accessories to the one big spiritual issue.

In the meeting of Lincoln with THE TRIBUNE editors and other friends, about the year 1856, we find a sincere group gathered in a simple room—probably much like the old TRIBUNE conference room of that date. Mr. Chapman's father was a newspaper man, and many of the realistic touches are from his memories. The artist has given us nothing fancy here. The men are human and the setting commonplace. His fancy he has let run riot in the out of doors scene, where Zenger is being brought to the court for trial, but in this meeting of some of the most important men of the pre-war period of 1856 he has confined himself to facts and faithful representation.

Beside the first prize of $5,000 in this contest, THE TRIBUNE made the following awards: One thousand dollars each to Hildreth Meiere and William P. Walsh and $500 each to Miklos Gaspar, Cady Ewell, Charles St. Pierre, and Mrs. Marie MacPherson. These last awards were aside from the original offer and were made in recognition of the time and expense incurred in the competition by the various artists, and they were made, too, in recognition of the worth of the work offered.

The annual water color exhibition at the Palette and Chisel club opened last week and will remain open until June 17. It is in charge of Mrs. Glen Sheffer. There are pastels and etchings, as well as water colors, in the exhibit. One of the most imaginative is "Courtship," by Gordon D. Smith. A Pierrot meets a lady in a garden where sun and flowers sing of nothing but love, so he forgets Pierrette and courts the slender damsel of an hour's meeting.

The three etchings by Lee Sturges are splendid. Mr. Sturges has a sure touch which makes his work a pleasure to look at. He has delicacy, too, and a fine feeling for the possibilities of the scenes he depicts. His etchings are each year among the best shown in the Chicago Etchers' exhibit at the Art institute, and they stand out here in the Palette and Chisel club show.

Others who help make this exhibition of value are Maurice Greenberg, Edgar Payne, F. Schmidt, J. G. Chenoweth, Karl Ouren, Oscar Gross, and Julian Dove.

"The Chief," one of the many portraits of this dusky brave done by students of the Art institute art school. He lends a touch of romance to the school exhibition now on view in the east wing of the institute.

The Arts club will be closed for the summer months, beginning the first of July. The clubrooms will open Oct. 1, and the formal opening of the galleries will be the first week in November.

The Summer School of Painting at Saugatuck will open Monday, June 26, and close Saturday, Sept. 2. The classes will be in charge of Frederick F. Fursman, assisted by Edgar A. Ruppprecht and Edith Hammond. Visiting artists will criticize the work. A prize of $50 is offered for the best sketch painted during the summer, and the Charles Bidwell scholarship of $250 will be awarded at the end of the term.

Lorado Taft is giving to the University of Illinois his latest work, a group of colossal figures, "Alma Mater," "Learning," and "Labor." It will be placed on the campus in front of the auditorium.

Summer classes at the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts open July 6. Among those who will have classes are Phillip Lyford, Carl Schmeller, Everett Lowry, Ralph Moni, Claude Buck, and Carl N. Werntz.

Claude Buck is conducting outdoor sketching classes at his home in Palos Park. The classes are held on land belonging to Mrs. Taft, the mother of the sculptor, Lorado Taft. On wet days the artists meet in the barn.

William Owen Jr. will conduct a summer school of painting at Grand Detour, Ill. This spot is conected with the well loved name of Charles Francis Browne, who, with his followers, did so much of his painting there. The school will open June 19 and continue until Sept. 11.

Students of the day school of the Art institute have formed an organization to be known as "The Associated Students of the Art Institue." The first meeting was held last week in Fullerton hall. Among the officers of the new club are Humphery Cox, president; James Hulme, vice president; Gertrude Neuister, secretary; Jerome Rozen, treasurer, and Karl A. Schlecht, chairman of the publicity committee.

ROBERT IEABLE

was a missionary prvious to the war, in the darkest part of Africa. He as sent to France as Chaplain to a regiment of Afrian natives. His book, "Standing By," is one of thepost notable interpretations of the religious phases othe war in print.

He saw that a contemd, backboneless, conventional religion, which had pemitted war, offered no armor against the flood of pasion let loose by war. It is this which made his nol necessary; a story of love, poignantly beautiful, strng, sincere, and never trivial, a book worth reading, wrth pondering over.

FREUD

Volume after volume continues to be published on psychoanalysis, about psychoanalysis, referring to psychoanalysis, or influenced by psychoanalysis. Whether these books be scientific, semi-scientific, or merely novels with a strong psychoanalytic infusion, Freud is the one name that is continually invoked. Even the best selling books on health or glands or nerves find it impossible to get far without referring to Freud.

We are just issuing the 12th edition of

Prof. Sigmund Freud's A GENERAL INTRODUCTION TO PSYCHOANALYSIS

with a Preface by G. Stanley Hall

This is not only the most authoritative but also the first comprehensive work on psychoanalysis, summing up as it does in one volume the entire subject in simple, popular language.

This is your opportunity to know Freud at first-hand!

ASTRONOMY

Mercury land is a hot desert.

A TRIP TO MERCURY.

MERCURY is the innermost of the planets, the nearest to the sun. How would you like to visit him, and see him from a closer range than even astronomers do?

We leave the earth, rising rapidly past the air, and go sailing sunward through the twilight colors. Back on the ground we were in the balmy warmth of a summer evening. Five miles above the earth we are in a cold equal to that of an arctic winter; in an hour we are rushing through space as frigid as absolute zero. We fly in emptiness for days. The earth shrinks back behind us, a flashing blue-white planet, attended by a brilliant yellow moon. We pass Venus on the left. She is coming up across our path, but she is still far off.

The sun grows hourly before us. Its heat increases. The temperature of boiling water is reached, although we are still many million miles away. We watch great blasts far down upon its tossing surface. We discover scarlet, cloudlike shapes playing on its edge. A haze of meteoric dust fogs our vision, for we are in the perihelion zone of comets. Before us looms a little globe, not so large across as the length of North America. It gleams like a pink crescent as we approach. We sail down, make a quarter turn around, and alight upon its land.

You have been to the moon. You are familiar with the aspect of that lifeless world. Mercury is almost as desolate a place. Its air is thin and hot. Red sands about betoken oxygen, iron stones oxidized into ochre haematites. The same bleak peaks found on the moon are here, the same deep craters, with yawning cracks and chasmlike abysses in their floors. On the moon every sharp crag stood sharp, but here each exposed face is polished by a blast of dust. Strange shapes are scoured out of peak and crest; wind blown grit has sculptured towers everywhere.

Thin hot winds swish by us, bearing microscopic fragments of abrasive dust. This air is too light for us to breathe. We gasp at its torrid breath, for on this side of Mercury the land is as hot as a stove lid.

Climbing to the top of a high peak, we gaze upon a fire scarred panorama. This land, like the moon, has never seen life. Volcanic craters miles in extent, litter our horizon, and interspersed with them are naked black basaltic crags. A fine red haze obscures distant shapes. Every talus slope below is worn and blown, every hollow far and wide is full with powdery loess. Above our heads the sky is black, all save for this hot nebulous haze.

How large the sun is. That great flame nods in the sky, up and down like the bob of a gigantic pendulum. It never sets, but slowly wavers in the heavens.

The year on Mercury is eighty-eight days long. The little planet rushes in its orbit the fastest of any member of the solar system. His path is a wide oval and, in consequence, Mercury rocks as he flies. He holds one face forever sunward and for him the orb of day stands still, save for a slow, majestic swing.

On the sunless side of Mercury day never dawns. The stars above wheel round and round, rushing, pausing, plunging, in an unending train. Venus gleams down brilliantly, and the earth and moon beyond are bright. This night side is cold. Air from the day-light side loses its heat long before it reaches here. The numbness of space rests on the rocks. This is a land of desolation, with no sound save the shrill hiss of flying dust.

WHEN ALARIC SACKED ROME : :

By S. F. MAXWELL

...re before me the gladiator lie;
...s leans upon his hand; the manly brow
...nsents to death but conquers agony,
...nd his dropped head sinks gradually low—
...nd through his side the last drops ebbing slow
...From the red gash, fall heavy one by one
...Like the first of a thunder shower; and now
...The arena swims about him; he is gone
...Ere ceased the inhuman shout which hailed the wretch who won.

...e heard it but he heeded not, his eyes
...Were with his heart, and that was far away;
...He reck'd not of the life he lost, nor prize;
...But where his rude hut by the Danube lay;
...There were his young barbarians all at play,
...There was their Dacian mother—he, their sire,
...Butchered to make a Roman holiday—
...All this rushed with his blood—shall he expire,
...And unavenged? Arise, ye Goths, and glut your ire.

—BYRON.

A Nordic of the Gothic type.

AND the Gothe were to come, as surely as the sun was to rise.

Historians do not play sufficiently upon the scene of Augustus pacing his palace at the news of the destruction of Varus' legions in the German forests. The defeat of Varus marks the high tide of Roman energy. It should have sent a shiver through the length and breadth of Italy, for in the north there was a foe who could not be beaten. Augustus, willing impotently, could not realise the doom upon his empire, and the fickle populace neither cared nor wished to know. Their pleasures and their idle follies, their slave gangs, and their orgies totally eclipsed the sight of shag haired armies beyond the Alps.

Cæsar once massacred a quarter of a million Germans at the confluence of the Meuse and the Rhine rivers. He justifies his act as military necessity. His deed was considered awful even in those days of blood, but its echo, though it reached Rome, did not carry. The Italians could not remember, but the Germans did. That memory never died in Nordic breasts and was not satisfied until it had been paid in kind again and again.

Semites hate and despise Nordics in the bottoms of their hearts. They look on them as clumsy louts, slow, dense, and with no fineness of perception. History shows this attitude many times. But Semites never seem to realise the power of the Nordic, who, while stolid, is inexorable, and if he moves slowly, it is only to grind finely.

The Romans did not know what fate had saved for them. The will to watch events was not in them. As time went on, and their own Aryan blood grew less and less, their grip grew slacker on the lands they held. While it is true that Rome advanced in territory after the days of Augustus, it was her momentum that carried her, not her will. There came a day when there were no more Romans fit to man the legions, and with it barbarians—barbarians everywhere upon her northern flank.

She despised the northerners. Her ideals and theirs were different, but she enlisted them to fight her battles for her. She pitted Nordic against Nordic. She made a fine gain for a while and filled her shows with red haired captives, there to make them display their leonine ferocity for sport. It was not so fine for her to train these giants in her arts of war, instill in them a knowledge of her weakness, and then, with their lessons all too well learned, to send them back to their own people.

A new force had been loosened in the world. There had been Nordics before, but never sufficiently en masse to seriously affect the march of things. The Nordic homeland about the Baltic was now full and ready to erupt.

Rome, during all the days of her republic, lived constantly under the specter of Gauls. Her fears may have been ill founded, but they never left her. Cæsar conducted his Gallic conquests to remove this menace, and on the farther side, beyond the Rhine, he found a people so savage that they were accustomed to beating the Gauls in battle.

In the year A. D. 408 Alaric Reiks, king of the Visigoths, better known to us as Alaric, laid siege to Rome. He had previously been a subsidized chief in the system of Roman defense, and, from all accounts, he was an unusually mild and honorable man. The Romans professed contempt for him and his followers as vile creatures in the shape of men.

Migrations of the Goths.

He could not force the Italians to keep their word or deal fairly with him for his past services, and so he turned to war on Rome. He blockaded the city and forced it to capitulate. Of his original demands for indemnity only that of the release of all barbarians held as slaves was even approximately fulfilled. He besieged the city again, and on its second surrender he nominated a new ruler.

But the Romans corrupted his man, and after gaining some reinforcements the emperor foully insulted the Goths. Such a course against the ablest general of that day, who was twice a conqueror and who had spared Rome only through his mercy, would seem to us to be madness, at the least. However, Emperor Honorius evidently did not view it so. Alaric marched straight on Rome a third time. There was no fight. On Aug. 24, 410, his soldiers burst in by the Salarian gate, fired the houses on either side to light their march, and put the city to a six day pillage. Alaric urged them to enrich themselves, but required and enforced law and discipline during the whole sack, a thing hitherto unheard of in the world.

The Goths, by first accounts, appear as a Teutonic people, dwelling in what is now the region of Dansig. From there they crossed Russia to the Black sea, and, after various fortunes, clashed with the Roman empire. They were not native along the Vistula, but came from Scandinavia. They were, in fact, the first wave of those tall, blond men whom we know in history as Vikings and Normans. Their descendants to this day are common in northern Europe and America.

Nordics are subdivided anthropologically into two strains, one tall and the other shorter. Goths are tall. Ask yourself these questions to find if the man you are looking at is of Gothic blood: Is he tall and lithe, like a fashion picture? Has he a long head and a narrow face? Is his profile strongly convex? Is he of fair or florid complexion?

Examine his mind. Is he an idealist? Are his thoughts retrospective? Is he keen and quick? Does he overrate the promises of others? Is he too temperate and considerate for his own good?

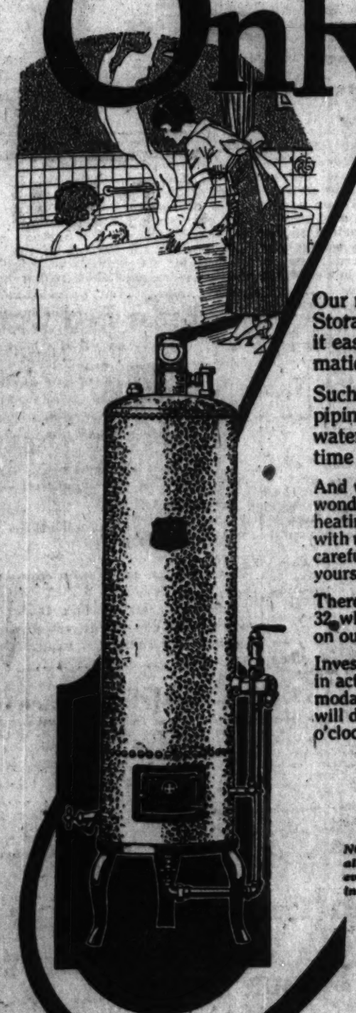
Only $15.00 down

Fifteen dollars down will put this famous hot water service in complete operation in your home.



Our new plan of selling the Royal Automatic Storage Gas Water Heater on payments makes it easy for everyone to have modernized, automatic hot-water service in his home.

Such service means an ever present supply of piping hot water without any attention—hot water that flows at the turn of a faucet any time of the day or night.

And with the Royal, such service is economical. A wonderful system of operation makes it so. In heating water and storing it the Royal operates with mechanical precision and guards your gas more carefully than you possibly can when you heat it yourself.

There is a proper size for your specific needs. Size 32, which is used in the average home, sells for $130 on our payment plan—installation included.

Investigate. You can see this remarkable heater in actual operation at our show room. To accommodate those who cannot call during the day we will demonstrate by appointment—as late as eight o'clock.

Chicago Show Room
175 North Dearborn Street

NOTE: Bastian-Morley heaters are sold and installed by all plumbers and distributed by plumbing supply jobbers everywhere. If you live outside of Chicago but have gas in your town, write direct to the factory for details.

100% RETURN ON YOUR MONEY!

We recommend single models where your space is limited. But where you have sufficient room, it is advisable to pay the small difference needed to secure a double model. By constructing a double garage you can use half of it for your own car and rent the other half, making the building pay for itself in double quick time.

If you pay $15 per month for garage rent you lose $180.00 each year. Buying a Presto-Up Garage, single or double model—you save the garage rent and own a Presto-Up within a year—really 100% return on your investment.

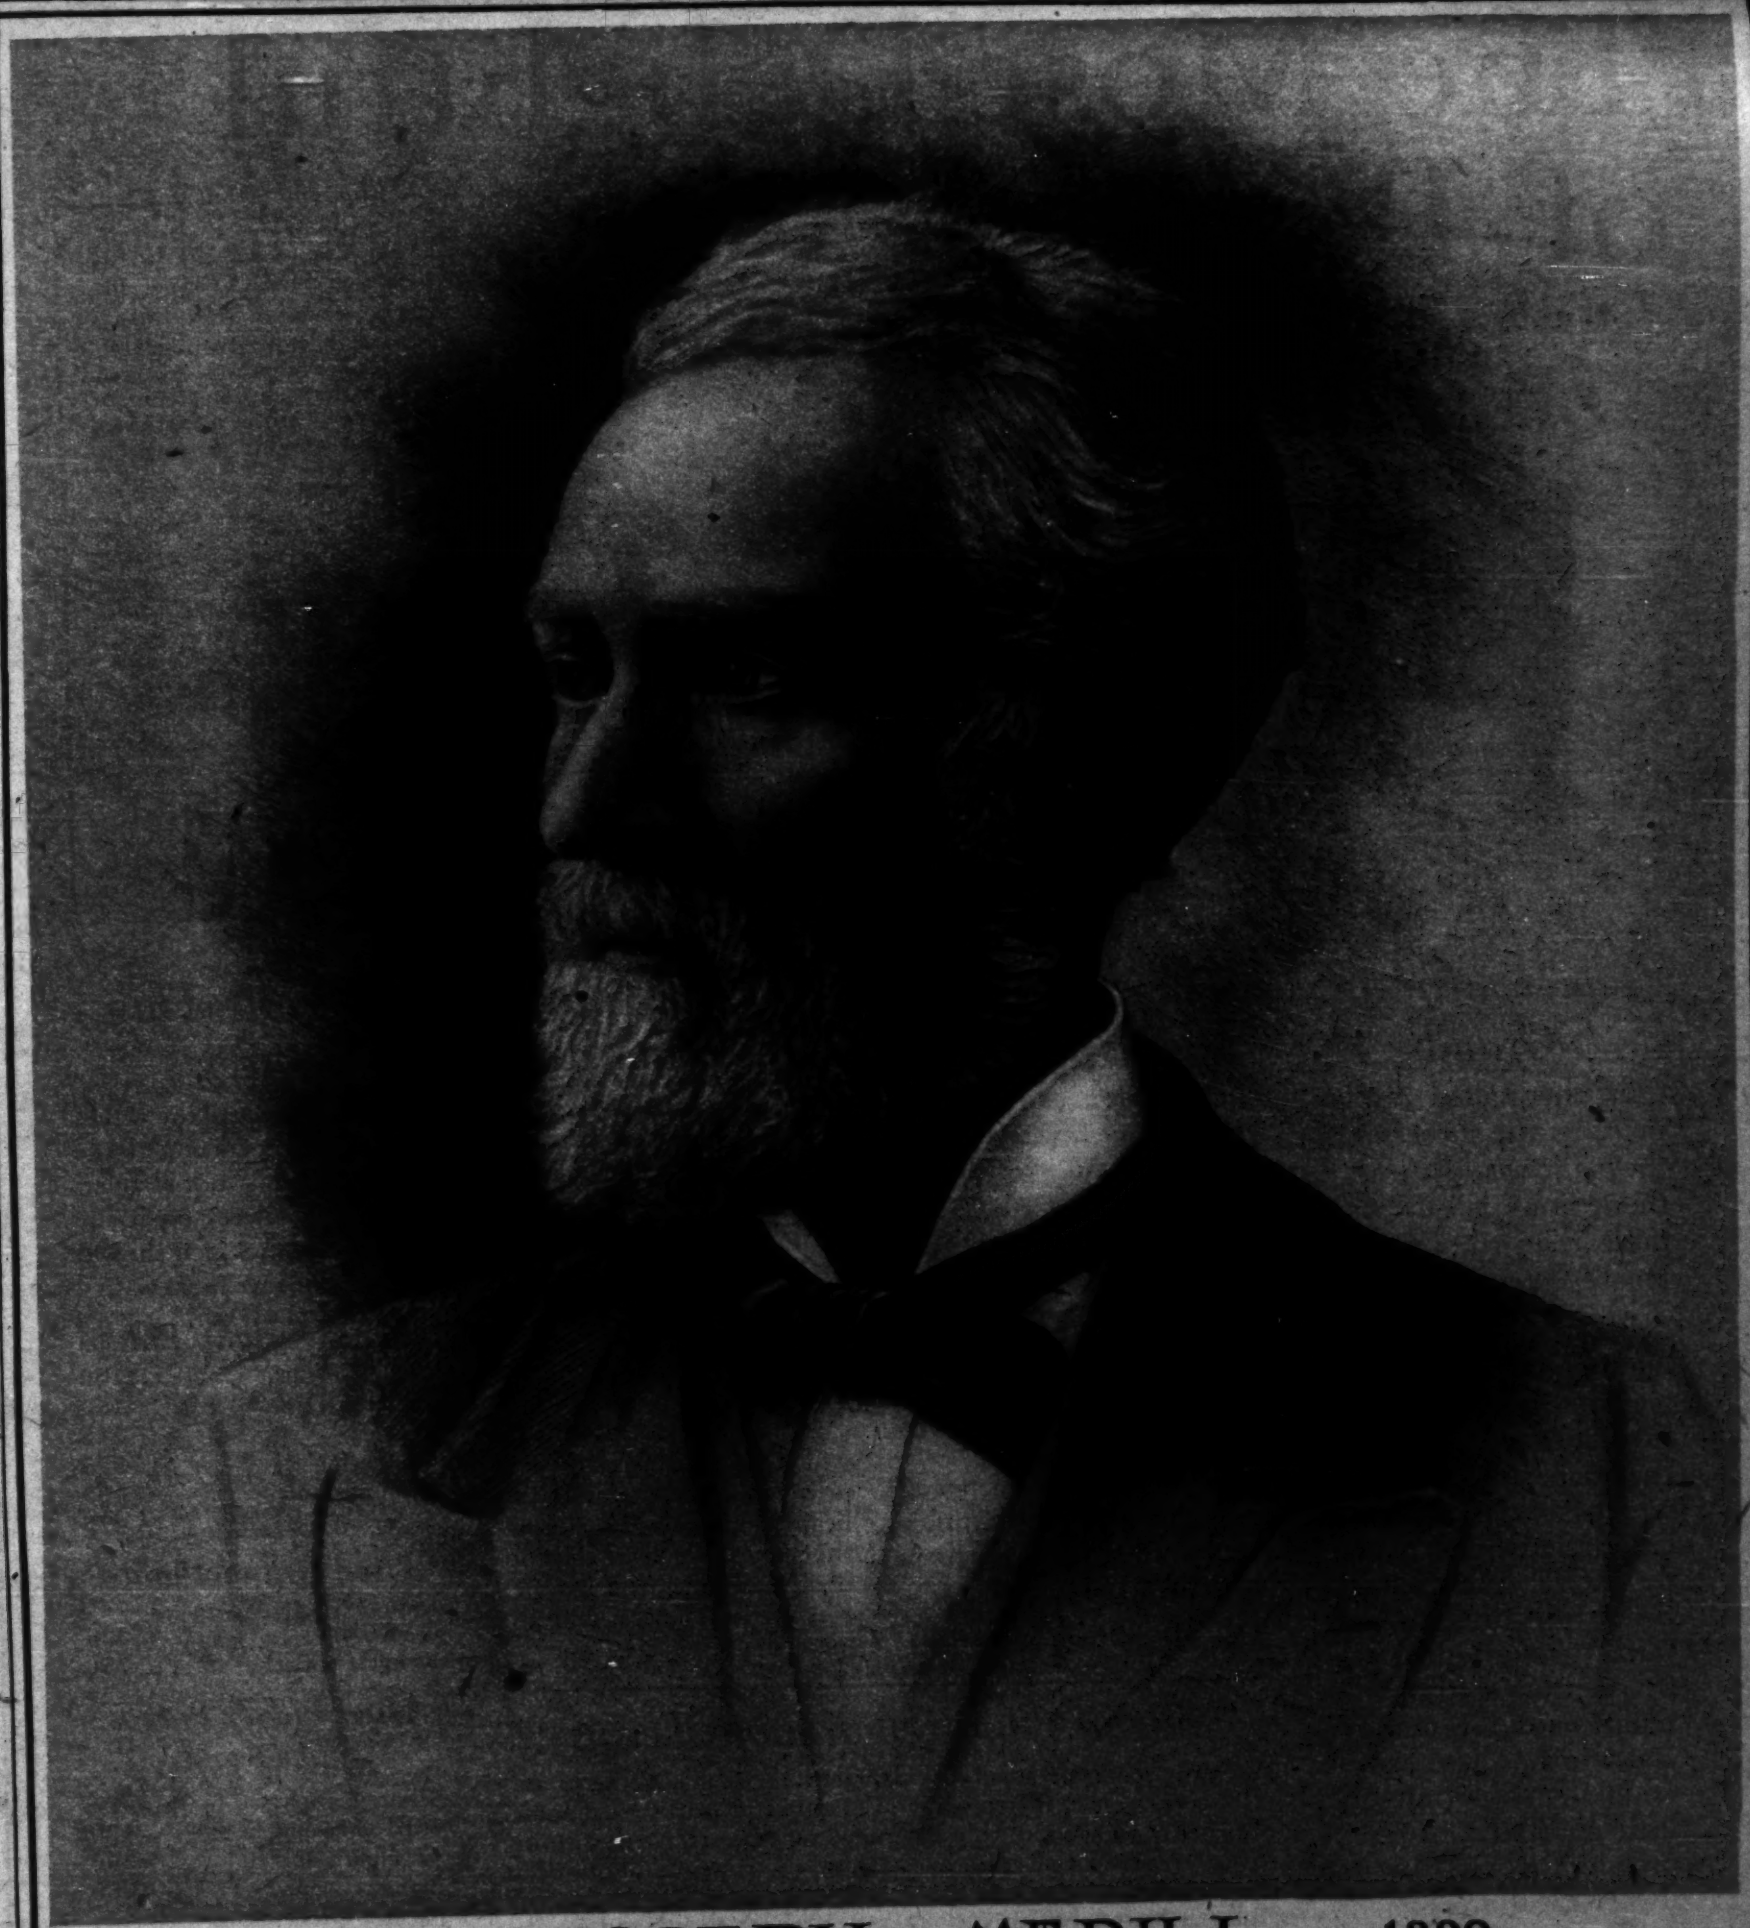
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER



1823 — JOSEPH MEDILL — 1899

For 44 years the mind of Joseph Medill was the guiding mind of The Chicago Tribune. The tradition he established is this newspaper's ideal today. There was never a time in his long and fruitful life when men did not know where he stood and what he meant. When he died, those to whom his responsibilities to city and nation had come steered by a course which he had charted in few but pregnant words. This was his ideal of a newspaper's duty to the people: "To be the organ of no man, however high, no clique or ring, however influential, no faction, however fanatical or demonstrative, and in all things to follow the line of common sense." In his will the substance of those words was repeated.

This publicist, who also was a practical printer, was born April 6, 1823, in the province of New Brunswick. He came of Scotch-Irish stock and his forebears had been shipbuilders in the Belfast yards in Ireland. He grew up in the Western Reserve of Ohio and there taught school and practiced law. But in journalism he found his life work and to journalism he gave the best of a loftily-visioned mind. Two presidents—Garfield and Harrison—offered him cabinet positions, but he would not be lured away from the great love and great service of his life. He carried The Tribune through hard days with fortitude, and through glorious days with equanimity. He was trusted by Lincoln, in whose cause he was a wise and untiring evangel, and to the people of his journal's great constituency he was an emblem of probity, of energy, and of patriotism that did not clamor but was honest and abiding. He was a Hamiltonian. He believed the United States "is," and he always so wrote it. His judgment was singularly clear, and it has been said of him that in half a century—for such, from his small beginnings as editor of the Coshocton, O., Republican to the time of his death, was precisely the period of his newspaper activity—he was not wrong on any great public question. He died March 17, 1899, and his last words were, "What is the news this morning?"

The Apartment Grand

Our unequalled display presents the successes of the piano world. Among them none is more notable than the Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand.

Its artistic beauty has made it the dominating feature in the modern home. The tone has that rich, singing quality which is so desirable. The case designs are in the latest mode, graceful, and beautifully finished. Certain fundamental improvements give the Apartment Grand special worth. The Junior Pedal which permits the little child to control expression is but one of these features.

Priced at $900 and up

The Latest Style in Uprights

Side by side you can view all the exquisite new models. In the foreground you will find an instrument that enjoys a wide reputation for musical superiority.

Many people have believed it to be beyond their means. Yet measure for measure the Lyon & Healy Upright Piano is a most economical purchase. More than a matter of dollars and cents is the pride of possession which you have in such an instrument.

Prices as low as $480

Popular Player Pianos

Here are players of the most improved mechanical action. Seven styles are shown, all of known standard makes and fully guaranteed. Such instruments bring within reach music of all kinds and make it really yours. And you may enjoy it while paying. On many pianos arrangements permit you 30 months in which to make payment. The prices are very moderate and begin as low as $395. Among the makes shown are the popular Washburn, the Lyon & Healy, the Pianola, and the Aeolian.

we tartly informed a waiting world of subscribers that "inside information" was put in this paper, not kept out of it:

In the rush and press of these busy and exciting hours we have no time to answer their telegrams, and this must serve for a general reply and apology for apparent neglect.

We can only say that all the news we have or can get is printed in THE TRIBUNE and that we have no inside information that does not appear in its columns. . . . It would have taken one man's entire time to answer one-half of the inquiries received yesterday afternoon.

The event of the mid-eighties which shook Chicago and created apprehension throughout the country was the Haymarket riot of May 4, 1886. Two days thereafter, in a three column battery of our own and other editorial opinions, there appears an epitome of the lessons which THE TRIBUNE believed must be learned from the deed. That paragraph is here reproduced because it says in a forthright way things not without their application today:

The slaughter of Tuesday evening is the logical outcome of the excessive, ill considered toleration which has been accorded them [the anarchists]. It is a serious problem, therefore, which confronts the people of Chicago who believe in law, order, and good government. They must overcome communism or it will ruin them. They must organize to meet it with all the power of the law and put it down, or they must expect an era of anarchy and the loss of their property, if not their lives. These alien communists must be made to know that American laws shall be obeyed or anarchy and arson will prevail. This is the situation which stares the citizens of Chicago in the face today.

The scandalously high protective Republican platform of 1888 (General Benjamin Harrison's campaign) was forced upon the party despite THE TRIBUNE'S vigorous declaration that the Mississippi valley was not enamored of excessive protection any longer, and it imparted its scorn of the document in rhymes that traveled far and still are quoted in the histories (see Paxson: "Recent History of the United States," p. 140):

Protection, in a nutshell, means
A right for certain classes;
A little law that intervenes
To help them rob the masses.
The rich may put their prices high;
The poor shall be compelled to buy.

Here, from the files of this period, which is the late '80s and the period at which for reasons of propinquity this survey may with propriety be brought to a close, is an intimate sidelight on TRIBUNE business affairs. It is a boast—a boast we printed on Sunday, April 7, 1889, and the gist of it is that in that Sunday issue we were carrying 177 columns of advertising. Our opinion was that such a volume of business was something pretty nearly unprecedented in newspaper annals. Well, thirty-three years—just a generation—roll by and now THE TRIBUNE is carrying a daily average of 185 columns of advertising (the daily only), and between 750 and 800 columns on Sundays. The contrast seems a legitimate bit of history. It emphasizes once more that heartening fact which we love to emphasize in our diamond jubilee musings—the fact that Chicago and THE TRIBUNE have grown up together and been happy and done well together, that muddy but aspiring Chicago of 1847 and that little old four-page TRIBUNE of the same year with its circulation of 400 copies.

May you all be here and be happy twenty-five years from now when the one hundredth anniversary shall come.

And so adieu, and may we leave with you the words of one gone these three and twenty years but still lingering in our hearts, still our guide in dark hours, still our inspirer and our admonisher—Joseph Medill, founder of THE TRIBUNE'S greatness!

"I want THE TRIBUNE to continue to be after I am gone, as it has been under my directions, an advocate of political and moral progress, and in all things to follow the line of common sense."

Hoosier Poet on Golden Jubilee

WHEN we celebrated our golden jubilee with a superb edition in colors on Thursday, June 10, 1897, James Whitcomb Riley was represented on the gorgeous front page with verses of congratulation to us. Here they are:

Hail to your fifty years of toil and stress—
Your hopeful, helpful life's half-century,—
Your midmost prime and pride of usefulness—
Your troth to MAN,—your golden jubilee!
With infinity of all like greetings,
JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

A LIVING memorial to Joseph Medill is Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern university, a foundation established by The Tribune and the university and opened to the public in February, 1921. Here we have a glimpse of one of the workrooms of the institution on the Evanston campus. It also maintains a branch for working men and women in the university's Chicago headquarters at 31 West Lake street. There evening instruction is given.

"All for One, One for All," Welfare Motto

By George Morris.

AS a pioneer in welfare work THE TRIBUNE has carried out a number of movements aimed to benefit employés and to weld closer together THE TRIBUNE organization. Starting with an annual bonus based on earnings and length of service, THE TRIBUNE has added life insurance, sickness and accident benefits, and pensions, and is now organizing a building and loan association to aid employés in building homes.

A welfare committee, composed of TRIBUNE employés, was organized to consider various welfare movements and to make its recommendations to the management. This organization is called the Medill council. When the Medill council was organized in February, 1919, its work was laid out along the following general lines:

HEALTH: The recommendation of sanitary and healthful measures wherever they might help employés.

ENVIRONMENT: Consideration of safety devices in the mechanical departments; the establishment of rest, recreation, and exercise rooms, coffee and lunch rooms.

INSURANCE: Death and accident insurance were already provided for. The Medill council took up the question of health insurance, which the company now provides.

TRIBUNE ORGANIZATIONS: Classes for study, musical and dramatic organizations, athletics.

The council recommended the granting of vacations to all TRIBUNE employés, regardless of their union affiliations, and this was put into effect, so that pressmen and printers as well as reporters and advertising men get two weeks' vacation with pay every year. In building the new plant every possible safety device was installed in the mechanical departments. Serious accidents are extremely rare. The safety devices on the new presses are a marvel of modern invention.

The movement for a refectory for girls developed in the starting of the Etaoin club in the bungalow on the roof of the Tribune building. When the club was turned over to THE TRIBUNE girls it was fully equipped, furnished, and provided with a working fund. Since then the girls have run the club on a self-supporting basis, and nearly 100 girls are served luncheon daily in the beautiful dining room.

Athletic teams have been provided with equipment, and all expenses of playing fields, bowling alleys, uniforms, umpires, etc., have been paid by the company. As a health measure a nurse and a dentist are on THE TRIBUNE staff.

Late in 1919 THE TRIBUNE put into effect its plan for health and disability insurance. Employes were grouped in four classes—those who had been with THE TRIBUNE ten years or more, those from five to ten years, those from one year to five years, and those less than one year.

In the event of disability due to injury suffered in the course of employment it is the general policy of the company that the employé shall receive full pay for the entire period of his total disability, with the maximum limit of the death benefit paid in case of death from injury.

* *

The company has insured the life of every TRIBUNE employé who has been with the company for five years. The amount is equal to the salary paid during the year previous to the granting of the policy, with a $1,000 maximum.

Pensions are provided for TRIBUNE employés, and every year several men are placed on the pension list.

All benefits apply equally to the men belonging to labor unions and to the men working at desks. There is a suggestion of the attitude of employés toward THE TRIBUNE in the fact that forty-three men have been with THE TRIBUNE for more than a quarter of a century—one of them for fifty-six years. Half of the men in the largest mechanical department have worked for THE TRIBUNE ten years or more.

When The Tribune Traveled in a Two-Wheeled Cart

By John Kelley.

HOW Editor Medill averted a threatened "strike" on THE TRIBUNE back in 1868 is told by August Kramer, a pensioned employé, who for more than half a century worked in the mailing department.

"I guess it was the first threatened newspaper strike in Chicago," said Kramer, laughing at the recollection of the event. "That was before the word 'strike' took on its present meaning. Two other men in the mailing room egged me on to ask for an increase in pay, and unless I got it they said they would quit with me.

"I was what they called an apprentice. Part of my duties was to cart the mail to the postoffice. At that time we printed a triweekly and a weekly besides the daily and Sunday.

"It was just after the close of the civil war and money was scarce. I was getting $8 a week and it was considered a fairly good wage. Furthermore, I was learning the mailer's trade, which paid a journeyman about $10 a week.

"Nights that we printed the weekly or the triweekly the mail was heavy. It would run about three sacks. We had a two wheeled hand cart, and after I got through work in the mailing room I loaded the sacks into the cart and took them to the postoffice at Dearborn and Monroe streets.

"The foreman of the mailing room was getting $12.50 a week and his assistant $10. I was pulling down $5. Although I thought I was entitled to extra pay for carting the mail, I said nothing until the other mailers told me to ask for an increase.

"So I summoned up courage, and one night I bearded Mr. Medill in his sanctum. I imagined he spoke kind of gruff to me when I entered his office, and I had a notion to back out. Of course, I had known Joe Medill for years, but this was the first time I ever had occasion to call upon him in his office. In some way I managed to tell him what was on my mind. He listened very attentively. When I got through he said:

"'Gus, you go back to work and we'll compromise the matter. I'll increase your pay two shillings a week, and when business picks up I'll see that you get $5.50.'

"I reported back to the mailing room and it was agreed that I should stay at the 25 cents increase. I remember the foreman saying that half a loaf was better than nothing, and it wasn't long before I was getting the $5.50.

"I began work for THE TRIBUNE in 1867 when the office was at 51 Clark street, opposite the Sherman house. At first I was only an extra man, but when the office was removed to Madison and Dearborn streets in 1868 I was hired regularly.

"I forgot to tell you about Joe Medill (all the employés called the editor Joe) carting the mail down to the postoffice for me one morning. I had the cart all loaded when the foreman ordered me to do something else before I took the mail. Mr. Medill, who happened to be standing nearby, said:

"'Go ahead, Gus; I'm going down to the postoffice anyway and I'll take the mail.'

"When he got back he put the cart in its place in the rear of the building."

LOOKING BACK OVER 75 YEARS OF TRIBUNE HISTORY

Yesterday, June 10, Marked Three Quarters of a Century of This Newspaper's Life

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT
(Eye Witness.)

THE TRIBUNE'S diamond jubilee is as truly a community as a newspaper anniversary.

THE TRIBUNE and Chicago grew up together—and they have kept young together.

THE TRIBUNE was founded June 10, 1847. The city is but ten years older, for it received its charter as a city on the day Martin Van Buren was inaugurated.

Seventy-five years is a long life for a newspaper. Whether THE TRIBUNE has used well those momentous years this anniversary survey will leave the reader to determine.

You—addressing you as a mature man or woman now doing the day's work of the world—and your father, and grandfather, and great-grandfather, and THE TRIBUNE have gone through four major wars together—the Mexican, the civil, the Spanish-American, and the world war; through nineteen presidential campaigns, eight of which may be said to have been big with the destiny of the people; through a fire that reduced the city to ruins—but not to ruin; through an international exposition that established a tradition of vastness and beauty which, in some of its aspects, the world in three decades has not surpassed; through strikes that disorganized the affairs of a nation, and through more violent social and racial disturbances that put panic into the public mind everywhere; through processes of upbuilding and tearing down and rebuilding that changed the face of nature over leagues of coastline and prairie and that have given to the most humbly placed man in the community comforts and opportunities, material and spiritual, that could not be enjoyed by the richest when great-grandfather and grandfather and THE TRIBUNE began working together for father and for us.

Persons who so long have worked together in matters so crucial—for the matters were naught less than the building of a world-city in a new world—ought to know one another pretty thoroughly. They do. That is why this anniversary is a community anniversary.

When the working partnership of TRIBUNE and community started, the work was being done by 16,000 persons. (That was the population of Chicago in 1847.) It is being carried forward now by nearly three millions. In a way it seems a long story, as must any story in which the actors have seen eighteen presidents of their country do their work and go their ways. In another way the tale is amazingly brief. All the newspapers which existed in Chicago when THE TRIBUNE was launched have vanished, save one. But there is said to be living in Chicago today a man—name unfortunately unknown to us—who has read every issue of this newspaper that has come from the press. And certainly there is living—and known to us and honored by us—a man who used to take to the postoffice in a two-wheeled hand cart the mail editions of THE TRIBUNE which now require twenty-two auto trucks and wagons to convey them to the postoffice and the railroad stations.

The beginning and the end of each third of THE TRIBUNE'S three-quarter century synchronize roughly, but still aptly enough, with three distinct epochs in Chicago's development. The first quarter century began when, within a period of four years (1843-1847), the population of the city had risen from 6,000 to 16,000. That growth was considered phenomenal, though the years following '47 were to make it seem slow. This first epoch ended in 1871, with the great fire. It comprised twenty-four years. It was the epoch of great-grandfather and grandfather and the time of their hardest work.

From the fire to the fair was the second epoch. It comprised twenty-two years. It was the era flamboyant of Chicago—of bewildering growth, of great riches quickly acquired, of boisterousness, of vulgarity, and of vision. It was father's epoch.

ALFRED COWLES was one of the factors of The Tribune's upbuilding. He came to Chicago with Joseph Medill from Cleveland, where Mr. Medill had established a valiant Free Soil newspaper, the Cleveland Leader, which survives to this day. Mr. Cowles died in 1889 and his colleague, "Governor" or "Deacon" Bross, as he was better known, stood too long with head uncovered at Mr. Cowles' funeral, and contracted an illness that led to his death within a month.

WILLIAM BROSS, whom our absorption of The Democratic Press brought into The Tribune family, was born in 1813 and was at first a bookseller, his Chicago establishment being the foundation of the present great house of A. C. McClurg and company. He was known as "Deacon" Bross until he became lieutenant governor of Illinois, when "Governor" Bross became the familiar mode of addressing him. The Second Presbyterian church for many a year was known as "Deacon Bross' church."

DR. CHARLES H. RAY and Mr. Medill were the first to buy into the almost bankrupt Tribune of 1855. Dr. Ray was the hail-fellow-well-met of our family, and on the night when the news of the fall of Fort Donelson was received in Chicago he read the dispatch to an immense throng and then said, "Friends, 'Deacon' Bross has authorized me to say that any man who goes to bed sober tonight is a traitor to the government." The deacon's consternation, considering his Cromwellian standards, may be imagined.

And so is this one his—his and ours. Say that the conclusion of the world war put an everlasting landmark into it, it may be described as comprising twenty-five years by 1918. We have not finished with it. We still are working over it and trying to give it direction. We have taken four years to do that. Our forebears of the other two epochs worked faster. In any case, take their periods of twenty-four and twenty-two years and our quarter century plus our four years of groping, and you have the seventy-five years of THE TRIBUNE'S diamond jubilee.

Eight years after THE TRIBUNE was founded Joseph Medill became a guiding force in it. He was then 32 years old. He remained a guiding force for forty-four years, but to the end he had young colleagues. When his grandsons took up their work as guiders of THE TRIBUNE they were not so old as he was when he came out of the Western Reserve to do his big work in the world. The point of the allusion is that this newspaper, like the city of its birth, has ever had the spirit of youth in it. It is today what it is because it has marched with the generations; because it has grown with a community whose growth is one of the phenomena of human annals. For seventy-five years it has been a going concern; for sixty-seven years its tradition has been definite and vital because the ideal that sustained the founder of its greatness has been the inspiration of those to whom the wheeling years brought his tasks.

A man of lively intelligence who has never scanned decade after decade of the yellow pages of a newspaper file would hardly conceive of that occupation as a pastime. But such it is; a stimulating experience; one that proves the reverse of many things that men are wont to take so completely for granted that they make them the basis of endless shibboleths and catch phrases. The principal of them rings the changes on "the degeneracy of the press." If the press had been degenerating during seventy-eight years of Chicago newspaper making—the Evening Journal antedated THE TRIBUNE by three years—the existing press would by now have degenerated to pretty near the point of extinction. Everybody knows that it has not. Everybody knows that never was it more prosperous, more comprehensive, more puissant. It is only those individual newspaper properties which did degenerate—like the Times—that have vanished.

* *

The community and newspaper story put together from the files of THE TRIBUNE and certain of its contemporaries for this anniversary survey is, therefore, a story for optimists—or rather for pessimists, because it makes optimists. It is a seventy-five year study in and vindication of optimism. It shows that the type of newspaper now considered reckless and sensational was, at a time still well within the memory of men now living, not only reckless and sensational but villainous and vindictive to the point of outraging decency. The type of newspaper now supposed to be identified with "the interests" and to be sustained by them was then susceptible to the blandishments of a free supper at the new hotel. The type of newspaper now described as conservative was then reactionary to the point of pitilessness. Let him who thinks that newspaper reports of such a case as the current Stillman-Beauvais scandal exceed the bounds of decorum turn to the file of 1874. He will discover in the reports of the Beecher-Tilton scandal a gusto and a particularity in the presentation of squalid details which will convince him that the treatment in our time is all for the better; wholly in the direction of that legitimate reticence which, while it does not pander to pruriency, does not, by silence, make evil easier for the evildoer.

The files show how all the material and mechanical changes of newspaper making since its early days in Chicago have been emphatically to the advantage of the newspaper reader. By means of three line digests of every important article and by means of terse, coherent, explicit, and unelaborated headlines his time is saved, and, by the use of larger type in heads and in the body of the paper, his eyes are comforted instead of tortured. The whole paper is more readily assimilated. Pictorial development has been so pronounced in late years and is still going forward at a pace so extraordinary that it makes a history so new and so special that it cannot be linked up with what lay critics of the press like to call the "golden days of Greeley." Even so recently as our world's fair period it was naught as compared with the present speed, precision, and variety of newspaper illustration. This picture making and the copious—indeed for some properties downright ruinous—use of the cable have been the most striking features of journalistic history in the last decade.

The articles you read now are shorter than those father and grandfather read, but their number and variety are far greater. The rule now, whether invariably observed or not, is "tell it as briefly as possible." The rule so lately as the early '90s seemed to be "spin it out," and—what with the lead for the whole story and the subsections of the story—"tell it at least thrice."

Nor is it solely in these material aspects of news presentation that there has been change so emphatic that it attains the importance of solid reform. In the things of the intellect and of the spirit the emphasis is firmer and more intelligent. News articles are not only less windy but vastly less vituperation and partisanship gets into them. In truth vehemence and partisanship appear once to have been encouraged; they now are vigorously discouraged.

Editorials today are at once more humane and less facetious. They cover a wider range of topics and are written in better English, but with less vigor only if violence and name calling are synonymous with vigor. Our forebears in this profession probably would consider them deficient in a quality dear to their hearts. It was "raciness." It covered, while it caused, a multitude of sins of taste and manners.

* *

The epitome of two outstanding contrasts between the newspaper of the midnineteenth century and long thereafter and the newspaper of today can be briefly given: There

A DYNAMITE BOMB THROWN INTO A CROWD OF POLICEMEN.

It Explodes and Covers the Street With Dead and Mutilated Officers—A Storm of Bullets Follows—The Police Retire

we tartly informed a waiting world of subscribers that "inside information" was put in this paper, not kept out of it:

In the rush and press of these busy and exciting hours we have no time to answer their telegrams, and this must serve for a general reply and apology for apparent neglect.

We can only say that all the news we have or can get is printed in THE TRIBUNE and that we have no inside information that does that we are qualified to issue this morning [illegible] but one line of which had been put in type at 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

THE TRIBUNE is not inclined to boast of its present achievement. It believes in doing thoroughly what it undertakes to do at all. Hence it has not undertaken to give mangled extracts from a few books of the New Testament, but to print the revision in such shape that no reader of THE TRIBUNE need ever buy a copy of it unless he feels disposed to do so for special reasons.

This journal was the first to announce the publication of the New Testament. It may have imitators. It expects them. But it can have none who will be any more than feeble copies of the original. It is accustomed to having its ideas plagiarised by journalistic sharks that follow in its wake and pick up its leavings. But it intends always to lead the way and be the first in introducing novelties to the people of this community.

Elsewhere on the same page:

The fraudulent newspaper on Wells street printed a week ago a bogus "cable dispatch" purporting to contain the principal changes in the Old and New Testaments made by the Committee on Revision. Its shallow trick was immediately exposed by the American revisors so far as the Old Testament was concerned by the simple statement that its revision was barely begun. Its forgeries in case of the New Testament are now proved by indubitable evidence. A comparison of its fraudulent version with the true version printed this morning shows that the former is false in nearly every particular.

That was our whack at Storey and his shifty Times.

Here is another of our jabs at the Times, but it dates back to days before the war and before Mr. Storey took hold. First the Times said:

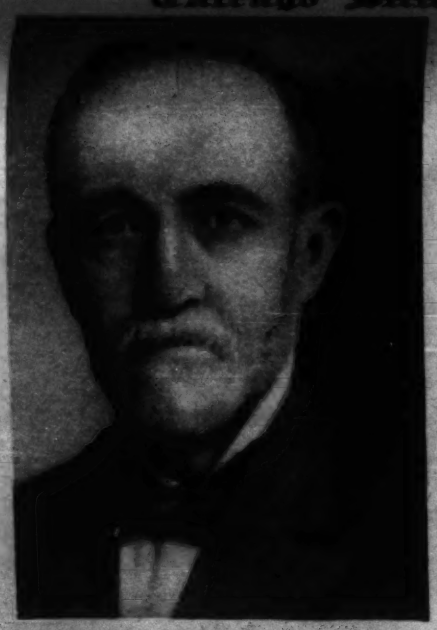
THE HARDEST OF ALL CHARGES—We have accused John Wentworth of many crimes and offenses against honesty, law, morals, and decency. But it was for the Chicago Tribune to accuse him of the meanest of all mean acts—stealing an editorial of the Tribune's and passing it off as his own. We confess we did not think that even Wentworth would descend that low.—Times.

Here is our comment:

When a man steals he takes what he knows to be valuable. No one has ever been charged with filching from the Times, because he who steals its editorials steals trash. The character of its effusions is proof against all larceny or temptation in that direction.

In the year 1881 a circulation war was on between THE TRIBUNE and The Times and we went after the concern in Wells street again.

Advertisers are not fooled. There is no shrewder set of men in the world. They would not continue to invest their money as liberally as they do in THE TRIBUNE space if they were not satisfied that they got abundant returns for it. And they do get such returns. Everybody who has tried it knows that they do. Seeing is believing, and trying is the best way to find out the truth in this matter. . . . What can possibly ail that venerable lunatic if not a consciousness of the inferiority of his own newspaper in any respect to THE TRIBUNE? . . . The facts and figures are in the local columns. They are mathematical evidence that THE TRIBUNE is as much superior to The Times in its city circulation as it is in its advertising, or its news, or its sense of decency, or its common sense.



HORACE WHITE was editor in chief of The Tribune from 1866 to 1874, during part of which period Mr. Medill gave much of his time to the proceedings of the Illinois constitutional convention of 1869 and to his duties as mayor of Chicago immediately after the great fire. This office Mr. Medill accepted against his will, but at the insistence of a deputation of citizens headed by the elder Carter H. Harrison. During his activities as editor in chief Mr. White gave The Tribune a free trade tendency, which did not make Mr. Medill happy, although he was no high protectionist. In any case, in 1874, after a tour of Europe, he took full charge of the paper. Mr. White later performed distinguished service as editor of the New York Evening Post.

And so the busy, gallant, prosperous years flew by.

THE TRIBUNE and your father—for the fathers were in their prime now—forged into the redhot politics of the '80s. The Conkling-Garfield war was on and it was desperate. THE TRIBUNE always loves a good fight, even when it does not choose to jump in, and as to that royal factional battle of 1881, it relished the fact that the sublime turkey cock, "Lord Roscoe," had at last encountered in the lately inaugurated Garfield a foeman unafraid. On May 6 it rubbed its hands thus:

The news from Washington yesterday brought the intelligence that the President has withdrawn all the New York nominations which had been made at Senator Conkling's desire, and not yet acted upon. This means that the President, having been smitten on both cheeks by Lord Roscoe, will now strike back. . . . His decision is indicative of both grit and judgment. . . . Hayes' resistance to Conklingism was half-hearted and ineffectual. He permitted Conkling to snub him almost scandalously. Garfield proposes to take a hand in the melee himself. He is right, and the American people will admire the pluck which has dictated this course, and will stand by him in any tumult it may precipitate.

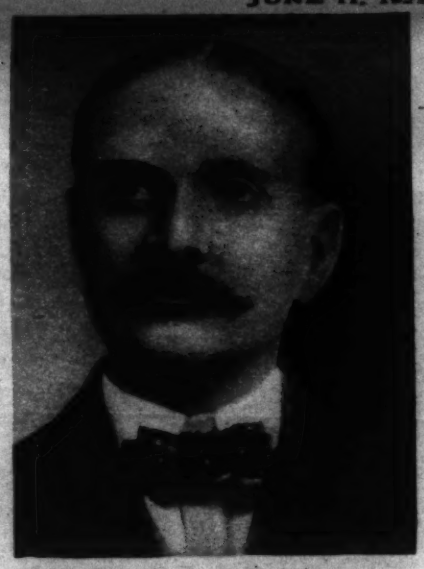
A few months later (Sept. 20, 1881) THE TRIBUNE had to chronicle Garfield's death, and in connection with its tribute to the soldier and statesman, it brought out a striking coincidence worth pinning back in the memory of Americans:

Yesterday [Sept. 19, 1881] was the anniversary of the battle of Chickamauga, in which Gen. Garfield bore so conspicuous and gallant a part, and where he won his spurs as Major-General.

Look in, now, on the lads long gone, on the feverish nights of early November, 1884, when the Cleveland-Blaine result still was hanging fire and the whole country's nerves were snapping. Here it is the morning of Nov. 6 and still no decision on the election of two days before! Evidently our nerves were getting a wire edge, too, and



R. W. PATTERSON became editor in chief of The Tribune when Mr. Medill died in 1899. He filled that position until his death in 1910. His funeral was one of the most impressive events of the time because, dying within a few hours of his mother, the service for them both was held in the same church on the same day. That was the Second Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Patterson's father had long been minister. R. W. Patterson's characteristics were justly appraised by the Illinois State Journal in its notice of his death. "He realized," said that paper, "that changes come slowly, that reforms cannot be effected in a day, that patience is a requisite to the accomplishment of any important fact. Better still, he appreciated the saving grace of good nature in the crusader. He seldom lost his temper, and defeat never ruffled him." He was born in Chicago in 1850.

A Record of Progress from 1865 to 1922

ENTERING the investment business at the close of the Civil War, the founders of Peabody, Houghteling & Co. adopted the principle which ever since has guided our service to our clients: the selection of securities which would stand the test of time.

OUR securities and our business, as a result of this policy, have stood the test of fifty-seven years. We are today better equipped than ever before to serve our clients and our community, because those fifty-seven years have brought to us an experience obtainable in no other way.

AGE alone is not sufficient recommendation for a business; but age coupled with steady growth is a sure indication of increasing public confidence, the asset most sought for and most valued by every establishment which takes pride in a long and honorable record.

THE ATTACK ON SUMTER

was more individuality—of a quaint and rustic kind—and less taste. And the news element today is, to use the largest word, an infinitely greater factor.

That vehement individuality was the expression of enormous vitality. Some of the manifestations of it were more interesting than to be imitated. If a rival publicist did not agree with you he was "an ancient liar" or "an old lunatic." Neither age nor ailments protected a man. Mature men, men of parts and men of reading, who were guiding the destinies of a community and of the imperial realm of the middle west, said, and said in print, things that today would not be forgiven a cub reporter.

But, after all, the lesson learned from the days of file scanning was the big lesson, as vital today as ever it was, of the survival of the men and the properties that had the clearest ideals of personal and civic probity. Nothing can blur that part of the record, and the tragic end of Joseph Medill's gifted but appallingly reckless rival in the Chicago newspaper field pointed the moral as nothing else could have done.

THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE first appeared in an issue of 400 copies on the morning of June 10, 1847, from an upstairs room in a building on the southwest corner of La Salle and Lake streets. Thomas A. Stewart, a man of a good deal of independence and character, was the principal proprietor.

The population of Chicago was then 16,000. Our country comprised twenty-nine states, with a population of less than 20,000,000. The Mexican war, fraught, as fourteen years were to prove, with the peril of another war, was drawing to a close. James K. Polk was President of the United States—our last Democrat President of southern birth for sixty-four years, a fact large with significance. Queen Victoria had been ten years on the throne. Abraham Lincoln was 38 years old and Joseph Medill, still practicing in Coshocton, O., what law there was to practice and picking up in a flirtatious sort of way the rudiments of the printer's trade and the editor's craft, was 24. The opening of his Chicago career was eight years distant.

The opening of the first theater in Chicago—real theater as distinguished from a tavern room or a hall with a platform at one end of it—was almost simultaneous with the founding of THE DAILY TRIBUNE. That theater lifted its curtain eighteen days after we made our start in life. J. B. Rice, later mayor, was the proprietor. The location was Dearborn street, near Randolph—still the Rialto. The year that saw us getting under way brought also the first county hospital and the first law-school. The first opera performance was still three years distant, and so was the first illuminating gas. The organization of the police department was not to be effected for five years. Meanwhile constables kept the peace. The first through train from the east was not to arrive until 1852. Our first telegraphic connection with the outside world was a year distant. The first school building was only two years old in '47.

Before THE TRIBUNE there had been seven daily and weekly newspapers in Chicago, and almost as many newspaper disasters. The first paper was founded in 1833 by John Calhoun. It was called the Chicago Democrat, and it became a daily in 1840. "Long John" Wentworth kept it going until the time that tried men's souls in 1861. Then he sold out in a mood of war panic and the property was merged with THE TRIBUNE. It was a good newspaper of stately appearance.

Such were some of the local aspects of our birth year.

As to Illinois, Galena was the big city of the state, and to it the government of the commonwealth gave its business. St. Louis was the commercial and cultural capital of the west, and its attitude toward Chicago was so lofty that it amounted almost to unconsciousness that we were on earth. As the years passed that state of mind was to be enlivened with scorn. Then came the stage of rancor. The last was one of resignation.

World events of '47—merely to give you the trend and color of the times when THE TRIBUNE was a child: City after city was falling before Gens. Scott and Taylor in Mexico; Salt Lake City was being founded by the Mormons; King William IV. of Prussia, that kindly, ineffectual cry baby, convoked a parliament at Berlin; Switzerland expelled the Jesuits, but the Roman Catholic hierarchy was established in England; that magnificent vocality, Daniel O'Connell, came to a rather pusillanimous end in Genoa; Sir John Franklin perished in the region of eternal ice, and "Jane Eyre," the authorship of which was the current mystery of the English speaking world, was published. And the rumblings of '48 were worrying Europe.

JOHN LOCKE SCRIPPS was another of The Tribune pioneers of our antebellum period. He bought into the paper in 1848, leaving us to establish, with "Deacon" Bross, the Democratic Press in 1852. But he came back to The Tribune in 1858, when the Press was consolidated with The Tribune. In 1861 he became postmaster of Chicago under the Lincoln administration. Mr. Scripps was born near Cape Girardeau, Mo., in 1818. When he died in 1866 The Tribune said, "He feared God, but feared no man. A mean act, a cowardly thought, had no room in his soul."

It is not claiming overmuch to say that were these events taking place today THE TRIBUNE of today would have a "reporter on the spot" for nearly every one of them, Franklin's end the only possible exception. The remark, of course, is merely illustrative of the amazing comprehensiveness and enterprise expected of a great modern daily, for neither would a daily in a town of 16,000 today have its reporters on the spot for such far flung events, although, through the development of press associations, it would be able to print prompt and adequate accounts of those events.

As for THE TRIBUNE'S personal appearance in 1847, the liveliest paper in town liked it. That was the Journal. Our sole surviving contemporary of those days looked us over on the morning of June 10, and in the afternoon printed its opinion, which was detailed, admonitory, and instinct with neighborliness. We seem always to have valued this opinion, for it appears in full in every anniversary edition we ever got out. In this one a few of the kindly phrases from it must suffice:

CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE—A large and well-printed sheet with the above title was laid on our table this morning.

Our neighbors have launched their bark upon the stormy sea of editorial life, proposing to observe a strict impartiality. We wish them every success in their enterprise and firmly trust they will shun the rocks upon which so many gallant vessels have been wrecked.

The mechanical execution of THE TRIBUNE is beautiful and reflects great credit upon the art.

The Journal hoped we would not become anti-Whig. God knows we did not—at least not as to the greater cause which Whigism tried to express but could not. That fact is forever a part of the annals of our country and of human liberty on the western continent.

To go into the numerous changes of partnership, the defections and the vicissitudes that marked the next seven or eight years of THE TRIBUNE'S existence would be tedious. Nor would it illuminate a survey which is meant to be more the story of the partnership of this community and THE TRIBUNE than the story of the troubles of our first founders. Those men, excepting

There Were Two Men With a Big Idea

GEORGE R. THORNE

MONTGOMERY WARD AND GEORGE R. THORNE started business under the name of Montgomery Ward & Co. in 1872. Mr. Ward had been a clerk in a small town store and there he got the idea of selling goods direct by mail, at one small profit—of bringing to the people in the country and towns, by mail, the advantages and conveniences offered by the large stores to people who lived in the cities. With a capital of less than $2,000 they issued their first little one-page leaflets, and so began this vast business of Montgomery Ward & Co.

In 1874 the first catalogue of Montgomery Ward & Co. was issued. It contained eight pages, about three by five inches in size. Today, the 650-page Fiftieth Anniversary Catalogue is 9 inches wide by 13 inches long, and contains everything for the home, farm, and family.

Our First Catalogue.

Their idea was a new method of merchandising—selling goods direct to the consumer by mail at one small profit.

That was back in 1872. They started in one small room, 12x14 feet. Perhaps these two men realized then that the principles on which they determined to work—to sell reliable goods, to deal fairly with all and to sell direct to the consumer by mail, at one small profit—were principles on which a great business could be built.

But their fondest hopes and aspirations, their most exalted imagination certainly could not have foreseen today's tremendous organization of Montgomery Ward & Co.

Our Priceless Heritage

The good-will of millions of customers throughout America who send their orders to Montgomery Ward & Co. each year for the things they need for the home, farm, and family, is our priceless heritage.

For fifty years people have trusted Montgomery Ward & Co., have believed in us, and because of this belief have enabled us to grow big in service to them.

The Principles Will Not Be Changed

The principles on which Montgomery Ward & Co. was founded fifty years ago will not be changed. We shall still strive to sell dependable quality merchandise by mail, at low prices, and we shall put forth our best efforts to serve our customers better each day. This policy will be carried forward with a spirit constantly renewed by the new possibilities each day brings.

Every letter, every order, every transaction, is always handled in the full spirit of the Golden Rule here at Montgomery Ward & Co.

Montgomery Ward & Co. Is a Part of Chicago

During the past fifty years, opportunity has many times enabled us to help in the development of Chicago, as we know our Chicago of today.

It was through the untiring efforts of Mr. Ward that it is possible to look forward to the development of the Chicago "Plan Beautiful" on the lake front. Year after year he fought through the courts to save the lake front for the people of Chicago. His efforts were finally rewarded through a decision handed down by the Illinois Supreme Court that the lake front belonged to the people of Chicago, and therefore, buildings could not be erected thereon. In only one instance did Mr. Ward ever concede a point in his fight to save the lake front, and that was in favor of the Art Institute.

Montgomery Ward & Co.'s Retail Store

We invite the people of Chicago to do their shopping in our Retail Store, where dependable quality merchandise is sold over the counter at Mail Order prices. All merchandise is conveniently displayed and plainly priced.

Every article is sold under our Golden Rule Guarantee. "Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back."

preferred by Prof. Patton. THE TRIBUNE examined them carefully, and seemed, with the Rev. Robert Laird Collier, rather to lament Prof. Swing's threatened sacrifice to what it called "the Moloch of Calvinism." The general tone of the column-long editorial of April 15 is respectful enough so long as it deals with matters worthy of the respect of an intelligent adult. But when THE TRIBUNE came to the fifth point in the indictment a smile was unconcealed and, so smiling, it said:

The fifth point is almost too absurd to dwell upon. Because Prof. Swing thinks that Penelope and Socrates may have received heartier welcome in Heaven [we printed heaven with a capital H then] than the infamous Catherine II., therefore Prof. Swing is a heretic! The only inference which a person outside Prof. Patton's bailiwick can gather from this is, that Prof. Swing should have consigned both Penelope and Socrates to eternal damnation in order to show that he was theologically sound.

THE TRIBUNE thought a considerable part of the indictment was based on grounds so shallow as to be "frivolous, inquisitorial, impertinent, and ungentlemenly." If that part was allowed to stand, it said, "the prosecution becomes a persecution." Otherwise—and this is delicious—"there is no reason why Prof. Patton should not go ahead, and may the best man win." In other words it was a good sporting proposition if rightly refereed.

* *

While we are on these matters of salvation it is a becoming time, as the President says, to make record of a historic feat which ranks in the annals of world journalism with THE TRIBUNE'S scooping of all rivals, in town or out, on the United States Supreme court's decision knocking out the income tax law in 1895, on Dewey's victory at Manila bay in 1898, on the fall of Port Arthur in 1905, on the failure of John R. Walsh's bank in the same year, on the Roosevelt-Storer correspondence in 1906, and on the capture of Stensland in the same year, a capture which THE TRIBUNE effected, and the Lorimer exposure. For the rank it was given in journalistic history our biblical scoop surpasses all those which have here been mentioned in connection with it. It came on a Sunday—Sunday, May 22, 1881, and it was a whopper for the printers as well as for Samuel Medill. Joseph's brother, who, as managing editor, engineered it.

Let THE TRIBUNE tell you about it:

THE TRIBUNE presents to 63,000 purchasers and 200,000 readers this morning, in addition to a regular issue of twenty pages, the revised edition of the New Testament entire. The whole work, without the omission of a single chapter or verse, is contained in sixteen pages of the size usually issued from this office.

There are journals which would find a publication of this kind a considerable undertaking. But THE TRIBUNE'S typographical and mechanical resources are such that it can issue any volume of ordinary size at a day's notice. The public may be interested to know that the first type of the New Testament as it appears in our columns today was set at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and the last page made up in stereotype at 10 o'clock last night. The job was completed, therefore, in precisely twelve hours. Ninety-two compositors were employed in setting type and five in correcting errors noticed by the proof-readers.

Meanwhile twenty additional pages of advertising and reading matter were set up, corrected, put in form, and stereotyped; so

JULY 2, 1881.
For The Chicago Tribune.

Garfield is stricken down
By the assasin's hand!
To-day along the land
The tiding flashes
From town to town.
As in a mighty pool a ponderous pebble plashes,
Startling its tenants, filling them with fear,
So all men shudder here,
Tremble, and whisper low,
Regretful, sad, and slow,
"What can the motive be of deeds like this?"
On all
Such hideous crime
The curse of Heaven must fall
For endless time.
The hiss
Of every honest man the world contains,
Shame, infamy, remorse, and clanking chains
Must follow him who murders, greet his gaze
With none to pity, pamper, love or praise—
An ignominious doom,
An unregretted tomb.

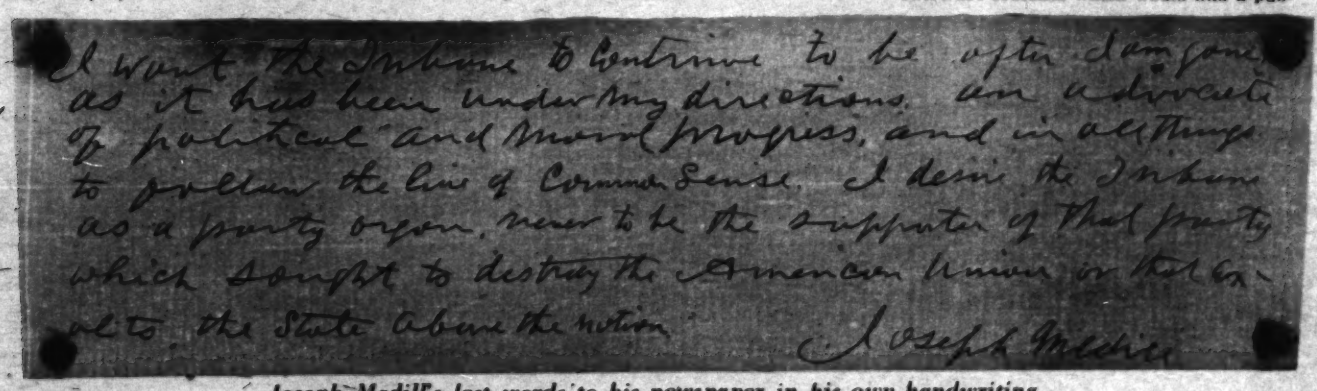
Special Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 2—10 a. m.—Gen.

From The Chicago Tribune, July 3, 1881.

Note "Assassination." Head-builder plainly panicky.



Joseph Medill's last words to his newspaper in his own handwriting.

bellious conduct of the insurgents as a father mourns over the conduct of an erring child. His heart bled for them. He sought to allure them back to the path of loyalty by excessive kindness and parental forgiveness. He never touched the hair on one of their guilty heads but with sorrow and reluctance. He was preparing for them the feast of the prodigal son.

He possessed a marvelous power over the minds of the people; they reposed unlimited faith in his sagacity, integrity, honesty, and soundness of judgment. He could do almost whatever he pleased, because he never abused the confidence of the people, never betrayed their trust. . . . Right was his polar star; conscience was his monitor. . . . He never felt the sensation of revenge in his life; he never hated a human being; he thought no evil; he wished no human being harm; he was the embodiment of Christian precepts and virtues . . . an age produces but one Washington. Abraham Lincoln was the Washington of this generation—the second Father of His Country.

Solemn, tender, sufficient, true.

And with that utterance an era closed in the history of our country, and, in a sense, in the history of this newspaper. A colossal piece of work had been done and THE TRIBUNE valiantly had helped.

"Aren't you an optimist, Joe?" Mr. Lincoln, in his cautious, feeling-out way, had once said to Mr. Medill when they were arguing over a line of action back in the earnest days of Lincoln's senatorial campaign.

"A man ought to be an optimist and you must be," said Joseph to Abraham. With that optimism, which was more serene than ebullient, Mr. Medill combined a certain dryness. It saved him from buncomb—a peril of this journalizing profession. His Centennial editorial is a prime specimen of the austere common sense which made him and his newspaper dependable. In the matter of acclaiming the great fair in Philadelphia he declined to wax ecstatic, but he saw the vision. He deprecated rhapsody, for he thought it ran more often than not into "bosh." He knew that what the Centennial represented, both as a fair and as the crown of a century of nation-building, was momentous and fine, but he felt that the future held far greater things if only we would abstain from "bosh." Here are some phrases:

It represents the active labor of five years, the result of a century's progress in this country, and the current condition of the world in all its material industries and artistic growth. In the case of our own country there is an additional element of a patriotic character, from the fact that it is the centennial of American freedom. In the celebration of that centennial there must of necessity be more or less bosh and buncomb, for it is a national peculiarity of ours to slop over in all matters pertaining to the Star Spangled Banner and the American Eagle. Making all allowances, however, for our national exuberance, there is abundant reason for congratulation and rejoicing that the republic has survived its first hundred years, and there is abundant reason to hope also, in the language of Whittier, that the new cycle cast in some diviner mould will shame the old.

Wouldst thou have a sidelight on Chicago life of the Centennial period? It is to be suspected that those were our swift days when the city was the center for a national Reno traffic. For this small ad appeared in our columns, and, it may be added, is of a character which would bar it from our advertising space today:

DIVORCES LEGALLY AND QUIETLY OBtained in every state of the Union for incompatibility, etc.; residence unnecessary; fee after decree; twelve years' experience. Address Postoffice Box 1037, Chicago, Ill.

To go back a bit—to the file copy of Wednesday, April 15, 1874—because something was printed on that date which still is savory and is also especially illustrative of the tone of THE TRIBUNE and of a man who would not print "bosh" about either a national fair or a Presbyterian heresy trial—Presbyterian though he was. The charges of heresy against David Swing, long the pulpit idol of this town, had been doughty Stewart of the duel that did not come off, were indeed more our projectors than our founders. They did not stick to the ship or the shop. They had other irons in the fire.

In truth, from 1847 to 1855 this newspaper was awaiting the constructive mind and policies and the Scotch-Irish tenacity of Joseph Medill. That man was a curious combination of austerity and aplomb. He was not showy, but he was sternly pervasive. He seems never to have cared for, nor to have won, popularity of a flamboyant kind. But he was universally trusted, for his sense of duty permitted him no evasions. He had a certain sangfroid and he was capable of making and executing large decisions. To them he adhered. His idol, if he had one, was humane common sense. That is why he loved Franklin and why he was loved by Lincoln. Beneath his formal exterior was a sense of humor. Reverting once to the years of the late forties when he was teaching school in Ohio, he told how he had had to whip one of the boys who had been a leader in driving from the district Medill's predecessor in the master's chair. "After that fight," he said, "all the boys were my friends"—a pause—"and," he added, with his sparse smile, "as for the girls, I married one of them."

He came to Chicago in 1855 from Cleveland, where he had successfully established the Leader, which still exists. His purpose was the purpose of thousands of energetic young Americans of those days—to "look over the new field." Here he met Dr. Charles H. Ray of Galena, who brought to him a letter of introduction from Horace Greeley, who urged Medill to join Ray in starting a newspaper in Chicago. They acted upon the plea by buying into doughty Stewart's TRIBUNE, Stewart himself withdrawing as editor and publisher. Medill had sold his interest in the Cleveland Leader to Edwin Cowles, but Edwin's brother, Alfred, came to Chicago, with Medill. For a year he served the new firm of Ray & Medill as bookkeeper and then he, too, bought into the property. In 1858 THE TRIBUNE absorbed the Democratic Press, and that brought into the firm Deacon William Bross, a grand old Cromwellian of the early days of Chicago Presbyterianism, and John Locke Scripps, who stayed with us between two and three years, becoming in 1861 the Lincoln-appointed postmaster of Chicago. Dr. Ray sold out in 1863, and Mr. Medill became editor in chief.

Thus with Medill, Cowles, and Bross was founded the original "TRIBUNE family," which, growing later to include Horace White, survives through direct descendants as a TRIBUNE family to this day.

* *

Among all these colleagues of his, Medill seems to have been the driver—the man who, though he was all journalist, was also practical printer. In a word, he was no empiric, though he was not afraid of experiments. To the last detail of newspaper making he knew what he wanted to do and how to do it. Through his initiative a steam press was installed and the first copper faced type ever used by an Illinois newspaper was bought. He had an abiding distaste for the "other irons in the fire," and that was, and is, good for this newspaper. "Alas," the great Hippolyte Taine once said, "there are writers who were born to write newspaper articles and who write only books." Joseph Medill was not that kind of a journalist. His product was not indifferent books but great journalism. He believed that to prepare, to inspire, and daily to assemble excellent newspaper articles was a grand work which demanded all of skill and fortitude that good minds and honest hearts possessed.

Thus THE TRIBUNE got its real start with a growing town and an honest man who was also a man of vision. Because he was visioned he believed in the town. He believed with the acute English publicist, Frederic Harrison, that "the manifest destiny of Chicago is to be the heart of the American continent," but he said that forty-six years before the memorable night at the Union League club, where Frederic Harrison said it.

Medill bought into the nearly bankrupt TRIBUNE on June 18, 1855. He took active hold on Saturday, July 21. The property made money in its first month under the new régime.

Chicago had leaped from a population of 16,000 in '47 to 80,000 in '55. It was a big year in the world. The Exposition Universelle was on in Paris; so was the Crimean war, and the Russians were getting out of Sebastopol; the Bessemer process was being patented; Thackeray's "The Newcomes" and Tennyson's "Maud" were published; Charlotte Bronté, the mystery woman, as you will remember, of our birth year, died. So did venerable Samuel Rogers, poet and banker, who linked the age of Samuel Johnson with the age of Tennyson. Franklin Pierce was President of the United States, and THE TRIBUNE neither liked nor trusted him—thought him too slick and devious and used to call him "Frank Pierce."

* *

Now what were the home folks—great grandfather and grandfather and THE TRIBUNE—thinking and talking and writing about in those days of the mid-fifties—the days of ours and the town's good start? On what scores did they rail at one another and on what scores praise? "What was all the shootin' for?" as the comic servant in the play said. Be assured there was plenty of it! They were emphatic persons, our grandsires, and had much on their minds. Slavery, Senator Douglas and his tergiversations, Abraham Lincoln and his forthrightness, the police and their derelictions, the burglars and their enterprise, the Cyprians—favorite word with journalistic grandsire—and their combativeness, the gas company and its product, the financial panic of '57, with its staggering record of 5,123 bankruptcies in the United States and Canada with liabilities of $299,800,000.

We (THE TRIBUNE) then, as now, were ever admonitory, but not portentously so.

for there was humor in us, and that saving infusion of common sense which Joseph Medill thought so important an attribute of a newspaper that he put some words about it in his last will and testament. We struck out at every abuse, whether it was cruelty to a black man or cruelty to a horse, and when we could we nailed it to the wall with names and dates attached. There was the case of "a Mrs. Wheeler." She tried to commit suicide on Monday night, June 29, 1857, by drowning herself in the lake at the foot of Ohio street. On the Thursday following we printed this:

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE—We learn that on last Monday night a Mrs. Wheeler attempted to commit suicide by drowning herself in the lake at the foot of Ohio street. She was rescued by Robert Donnelly. The woman stated that she had been married about a month, and that her husband abused her so much she was induced to commit suicide. The husband told Donnelly he was "d——d sorry he did not let her drown."

There was a sequel. It came eighteen days after the attempt, and we said:

A BRUTE—James Wheeler was yesterday fined $5 for abusing his wife. Mrs. Wheeler is the woman who has twice attempted to commit suicide, once by throwing herself into the lake and again by taking laudanum. Both those attempts resulted from injuries inflicted upon her by her husband. A few months' experience in breaking stones in the bridewell would do this Wheeler a "power of good," and he ought to have been sent there.

So lately as a few weeks ago in a lecture at Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern university Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," said that was the way it should be. "Put your editorial protest against a wicked deed," said he, "in with your record of it—not in a detached editorial six pages distant."

But you see, doctor, your good idea was in operation sixty-five years ago. It will come back in a judicious measure.

The same day that we told James Wheeler what would do him "a power of good" we also had a word on the case of John Connor:

SERVED HIM RIGHT—A brutal fellow named John Connor was fined $5 in the police court yesterday for abusing his horse. There is scarcely despical [sic] or cowardly crime than the abuse of domestic animals, nor one which should meet with a more prompt punishment.

Thus we tried cases and imposed sentence in our news columns. 'Tis considered highly indecorous now to do so.

* *

The outstanding community problems of six decades ago were identical with ours today. They were Crime Wave and High Cost.

On Jan. 28, 1857, the crime situation seemed rather a cause for optimism than consternation, considering that we were a city of nearly 100,000 extremely lively and adventurous souls, for on that date we printed this:

IN JAIL.—There are but twenty-two prisoners confined in the County Jail.

But two days later hope was dashed to pieces. The sacred hen-roosts had been invaded. We were bitter about it and recommended legislation:

ROBBING HEN-ROOSTS.—During the present week a number of hen-roosts on West Madison street have been depopulated by thieves. We would suggest the propriety of adding a chapter to the new city Charter for the especial protection of everybody's hen-roosts.

* *

Matters soon assumed the aspect of a crisis and we laconically "razzed" the police:

WHERE DO THE POLICE BURROW?—We learn from a reliable source that during the past week some one hundred robes have been stolen from sleighs left standing in the streets. Are the police asleep?

In less than six months the crisis burst right in the town's face, and THE TRIBUNE set up a lusty shout for Pinkerton—firm still flourishing. Things were coming to "a terrible pass" and this drove us to italics. The "burglarious depredations"—excitement did not constrict our vocabulary—included the use of chloroform, as now:

WHAT SHALL BE DONE?—Things are coming to a terrible pass in this city. Chicago seems to be delivered over into the keeping of thieves and house breakers. The police force, which our citizens are sustaining, at a cost of two thousand dollars per week, have proven to be utterly useless, to protect the dwellings of the people from burglarious depredations. They are good for nothing outside of the open view, rough work, of picking up drunkards, suppressing doggery brawls, and carrying away articles found on the sidewalk at night, while the thieves are operating upon the domiciles of our citizens.

Now, what shall be done? No man's house is safe. Every night a large number of dwellings are entered by burglars and robbed. Sometimes the inmates are shot, other times drugged or chloroformed in their beds, and others again are forced into silence by revolvers pointed at their heads, while their clothing and drawers are rifled of their contents before their eyes. . . . We verily believe that, if Bradley and Pinkerton were employed as "detectives," that within a week afterwards burglaries would cease and pocket-picking become infrequent.

In a few days, whether through the activities of Bradley and Pinkerton is not told, the situation was quieter though still popping:

MORE FROM THE BURGLARS.—We have heard of some additional operations of the

It is the present intention of Dumas to leave Paris for New York soon after the 1st of January, and he purposes visiting every one of the Northern States on the eastern side of the Rocky mountains. A friend of his asked him a few days since whether he intended going into the dominions of Jeff Davis, to which the great romancer replied that he thought he should not run the risk of being sold to pay the expenses of his capture and keep. Dumas makes no secret of his African blood, but is rather proud of it.

But the author of "The Three Musketeers" did not come. Upon reflection he decided that his color would make him an unwelcome visitor, even in the north. There is one of those ironies of history for you that Victor Hugo loved. A quadroon fearful to come among us during a war for the liberation of a race to which his grandmother belonged!

* *

In war time, when the fate of the nation was hanging in the balance, we had no use for patriots who made Lincoln's heavy burden harder to carry, and we briskly dressed them down.

Fifty-eight years ago we thought Wendell Phillips a pestiferous demagogue, mainly intent upon publicity, and we said so, as follows:

The erratic Wendell Phillips has made a raid upon Abraham Lincoln. It is easy to see his motive. Mr. Phillips is a glib, not very profound, but exceedingly conceited, word monger. He prides himself on agreeing with nobody and being satisfied with nothing. He has every kind of ability except practicability, and has therefore gone into business with Horatio Seymour as a common scold of the acts and plans of wiser men. It has been his hobby for life to become the emancipator of America. He has been toiling for that fame. He wholly failed until the opening of the rebellion to bring more than six or seven thousand persons, all told, to his views, and he remained the head of an insignificant sect rather than the founder of a party, or even a faction. At best he was but the forerunner of a movement.

When the long agony was over, when on the day of Lee's surrender, grandfather and grandmother and father and mother received the glad tidings, they fairly cut loose. It was their "Armistice Day"—and more—and they went to it with an abandon which shows that our jubilee fracas of 1918 had a worthy precedent in the annals of a people gone mad with joy. Surrender April 9, 1865; Chicago's celebration April 10, and in next day's paper we said it was immense. It will do your heart good to read every word:

WHEN Fanny Kemble came to town sixty-five years ago to read "Midsummer Night's Dream" to your grandparents, The Tribune said there were no words beautiful enough to describe the reading, but that it was an outrage that Metropolitan hall could not be better heated, and it published a red hot protest which you may read elsewhere in this anniversary issue.

Grave men of business paraded the streets blowing tin horns. The Board of Trade sang Old Hundred in mighty chorus and followed it with John Brown and all the doxologies in the hymn book. Light men carried heavy men on their shoulders. Bulls embraced Bears, and Bears felicitated Bulls in the most absurd fashions. The great procession came together as by magic. From all parts of the city they came, on foot, on horseback, and almost on their heads, with single carriages, double teams, four horse teams, and six horse teams, in a mighty army with banners. Everybody had a free ride. Pedestrians clambered into other people's wagons and were joyfully welcomed, and all went forward shouting, to swell the lengthened throng. At night the city was illuminated by miles of bonfires. From the Courthouse Square to the city limits in every direction the blazing piles lighted up the crowds which thronged the sidewalks, while fireworks flew aloft from hundreds of housetops and street corners, and thousands of windows shone with illumination. Such a carnival was never before witnessed in our goodly city. . . . If the fall of Richmond and Petersburg produced a spontaneous, offhand outburst of rejoicing, the surrender of Lee culminated that rejoicing yesterday with such a universal uprising, outpouring, procession forming, speechmaking, banner displaying, bonfire burning, rocket blazing day of glory as Chicago and its people have never before seen. They seemed determined to vindicate the eternal possibility of American progress by showing that, whatever had been our previous rejoicing, they could be outdone and literally thrown into the shade by the demonstrations of yesterday. As Chicago has been first and heartiest in war, so is she most gloriously, enthusiastically in earnest in welcoming the victorious achievements of the last two weeks. The procession of working teams, carriages, Fire Department, and citizens occupied some four hours in passing the Tribune office. It was got up in a style which no city in the world but Chicago can equal. It was not so much the length of the procession, though it reached for miles, nor the numbers of the people, though while we are writing at least twenty thousand people are gathered in front of the Tribune office, but the true Western heartiness and gloriously irrepressible jollity which have characterized the whole ebullition are worth a lifetime of ordinary existence to witness. But one sentiment seems to animate the entire people—joy—JOY—JOY—that the war is substantially ended, the Union preserved, republican institutions vindicated, as well against internal rebellion as against foreign force.

But joy was brief. A week later the nation wept. Those "grave men of business" who on the Monday before had been "blowing tin horns in the streets" and hugging each other, now wept like children. Long years afterwards my mother would tell me, with a hush in her voice, how father broke down utterly and would not be comforted. THE TRIBUNE'S mourning editorial appeared on the Monday following the Emancipator's death. (He died on the morning of Saturday, April 15.) It was dignified, but it came from the depths of a sorely stricken heart, for Abraham Lincoln and this newspaper had been very close to one another for ten hard years, had understood one another, had trusted one another. Here are sentences from our farewell to the greatest co-worker journalists ever had, for to the men of THE TRIBUNE Lincoln had been that:

WILLIAM E. BURTON, the Nat Goodwin of the American stage in the fifties, was one of The Tribune's favorite actors, and when he came to town we acclaimed him as not only good on the stage, but as "a gentleman and a scholar." His company, however, did not please our critic, and he recommended manslaughter, as you will see from an extract printed elsewhere in this section. The quaint picture here reproduced goes back to Burton's day, and was discovered in an old inn in Vermont by Mrs. Otis Skinner.

burglars which show that the rascals have not all left the city.

That paragraph leads a right well written account of how the Clifton house was burglariously entered at 2 o'clock in the morning while the clerk and the cook were seated in the office, how they heard steps in the basement kitchen, how they routed the "rascals," and how "for a short time the greatest confusion prevailed, but the frightened inmates at last were quieted and a watch kept the balance of the night."

* *

But "the Cyprians" would not be quieted and THE TRIBUNE, nailing its editorial to the prow of the item, packed it into the word—

DISGRACEFUL—A couple of Cyprians got into a fight yesterday while riding in a hack in Clark street. The combatants tore each other's clothes, pulled hair, and scratched each other's faces at a desperate rate, screaming like mad creatures during the battle. The disgraceful scene attracted a large crowd and it was terminated by the hack driver, who separated the combatants.

In short, Managing Editor Medill, coming from sedate Cleveland, found that he had cast his lot with a lively town, and he was ever for keeping the peace in it—even at the cost of a fight. "Thou art like," says Mercutio to Benvolio in the Veronese square—"thou art like one of those fellows that when he enters the confines of a tavern claps me his sword upon the table and says, 'God send me no need of thee!'" THE TRIBUNE was similarly pacifistic:

Intimidations.

We hope to chronicle a quiet, peaceful election today. We hope there will be no rioting or quarrels; but we hear reports and rumors from the enemies' camp of a threatening character. It is said that the Irish party are resolved to elect Gleeson, even though it costs hogsheads of blood. Let not such threats intimidate any man from voting. This is a free country, and let every Republican assert and maintain his rights—peacefully, if he can, but forcibly if he must.

* *

High cost, it seems, not only followed but preceded the civil war. Trusty old Pro Bono Publico, whose grandchild is Voice of the People, came forward emphatically during Buchanan's administration with his protests, and THE TRIBUNE sustained them.

Pro Bono said:

THE COST OF MARKETS AND HOW TO SECURE CHEAPER PRICES—It costs more to live in Chicago than in any other western city. Rents are frightful, and growing more terrible each year. Marketing keeps pace with the rents and is outstripping them. It is not the wholesale prices nor the sum paid to the producer that is increasing, but rather the retail—the huckster's price. We have seen barrels and boxes of poultry held for bigger prices until decomposition destroyed them.

There is only one effectual remedy for the present state of things and that is to establish protection unions, or people's grocery stores, one in each division of the city, where good fresh marketing of all kinds shall be sold at cost. A million dollars a year could be saved to Chicago people if this plan was fully carried out. PRO BONO PUBLICO.

And we said there was something to do besides "sitting down and trading corner lots with each other." The Medill recipe of "following the line of common sense in all things" was being vigorously applied to the mind of a somewhat flighty community.

AUGUST KRAMER, who is living in hale, happy age at 2645 West Harrison street, does not feel old, but he can remember the time, in 1868, when a two-wheeled handcart served to carry the mail edition of The Tribune to the postoffice, for he pushed the cart.

This was in a semi-news, semi-editorial article:

CHEAP LIVING AND INDUSTRIAL PROSPERITY—If Chicago ever attains the greatness for which we all look so confidently, it will be because her manufacturing, as well as commercial advantages, are properly developed. Some men talk as if we had only to sit down and trade corner lots with each other to grow immensely rich, like the two boys who swapped jackets all day, each making money at every trade. Others are sanguine enough to believe that commerce alone will expand the limits of our goodly city till she fills the ample dimensions staked out for her by the land dealers.

[But manufactories were not developing rapidly enough. Therefore]:

These retarding causes are mainly high rents, and famine prices in provisions; and if these continue there is little prospect that two dollars a day will tempt skillful artizans to Chicago, where one dollar a day has to go for rent of a decent shelter for himself and family, and only the strictest economy enables him to procure the other necessaries of life with what remains. . . . The cost of living must come down, or Chicago can never become the great manufacturing place for which it is, in every other respect, so admirably adapted. Rents will come down when capital enough is invested in building to supply the demand. . . . When we speculate less and produce more; when the industrial arts vie with the commerce. . . . Then may we indeed talk largely of the future of Chicago.

Amid our anxieties we dearly loved an excursion by "steam cars" along the thickly wooded area of the north shore, where now stand close-built suburbs. Such jaunts were a relief from the clamor of what, even two generations ago, was considered "the noisiest city on the face of the earth." A celebrated Fourth of July "Excursion to Lake Forest" in the late '50s received a wide close-packed column and a half on the editorial page of July 7. That fiesta was undertaken to honor a "Mr. Lind," who was reported to have given $100,000 toward the founding of a theological seminary amid the groves of Lake Forest. Later he got involved in alleged defalcations and the gift never materialized. But no cloud of the trouble or scandal to come shadowed the happy day of the excursionists.

The depth and beauty of the verdure which clothed the earth as with a gown afforded great relief to the excursionists by its delightful quiet, from the war and tumult of Chicago's business, and even residence streets, on the 4th. No one will deny that ours is the noisiest city on the face of the earth, while a half hour's ride took us among the grand old oak, the pride of the forest. The railroad to Evanston, Winnetka, Highland Park, and Lake Forest is becoming lined with cottages, embowered in elaborate comfort. Most of the buildings, indeed, are neat, unpretending, lodgelike cottages, in the center of ornate lawns of but few acres; but there are also a few large, almost castellated looking buildings, recently erected; one we observed, the new residence of Mr. Gage, of the milling firm of Gage & Haines; it is a large brick mansion, tastefully ornamented, in the midst of a large natural park of forest trees—an expensive residence, because its owner can afford such.

[Having left town at 10, the explorers arrived at Lake Forest "about noon," and] a rough ox-cart, employed to haul the tables and benches, relieved the excursionists of their heaviest picnic baggage. The road wound among wild, romantic woods and vales, without a house of any kind yet erected. . . .

It was busy, it was extremely loud, it probably was vulgar and limited—that antebellum Chicago of ours—but it was heartily for the things of the spirit and THE TRIBUNE wanted the neighbors to pay attention to "art for art's sake." In the pathetic old yellow file of the four-page paper I came on that now ribaldized phrase. It was new and unspoiled then.

THE MARRIAGE OF POCAHONTAS—Those who love art for art's sake, and desire to encourage it, should not fail to visit Brueckner's superb painting of the Marriage of Pocahontas, now on exhibition at Messrs. Carnes & Wilson's book store, No. 134 Lake street.

Nor did we entertain angels unawares, nor permit their visits to go unrecorded. When Ralph Waldo Emerson came to town to lecture—he was 53 years old then and kept the Concord home fires burning by means of winter lecture tours, during which the frail scholar nearly perished of the cold—he put up at the Tremont house. THE TRIBUNE gave him and his lecture a column and a half of space. Three Emersons could not get that much space in a single issue of THE TRIBUNE today. But it does not matter. There is not even one Emerson to come to lecture to us today. Our account was very well written; so well that there is not a member of the present staff who would not be glad to put his name to one as good. The sentences about "the natural number and the logarithm" and "the meteoric showers" are as suggestive bits as you will find in any book-criticism of Emerson. Here are phrases from the report:

Mr. Emerson's manner has nothing engaging. With none of the elements of oratory in his delivery; without gesture even to a motion of the head, or modulation of the voice, or any marked emphasis in style, he simply talks right on, like a speaking statue, as if only thinking aloud for the accidental benefit of casual listeners. . . . company, and THE TRIBUNE asked pointed questions:

"WHY IS IT?—We learn that the gas manufactured by the Chicago Gas company last year is valued at $168,200; that an average of one hundred men are daily in its employ at the aggregate yearly wages of $120,000; and we are constantly to walk home through dark streets at midnight, and even now as we write half the time, but we thought McNally and Burke were wonders, and we used to fire their souls with ambition by putting their records into the paper. For example, this appeared on a Thursday:

McNALLY had the New York papers of Tuesday at 6 o'clock last evening. He also has the Ladies' Journal for July.

And this on a Wednesday:

or the local case of drunk and disorderly. In these years we see passing of THE TRIBUNE as town gossip and local mentor. It is becoming the public intelligencer and a voice of the nation. Medill had equipped himself to act a great part in the supreme crisis. In Cleveland, in 1853 and '54, he had done history making pioneer work in organizing the forces which were to constitute the Republican party and to that party he had given its name. In the columns of THE TRIBUNE the fight which he and Dr. Ray and William Bross waged against slavery was early, constant, and pitiless. They defined the issue to the North in long editorials and they fired the soul of the North with brief burning paragraphs, of which this is a specimen:

MORE OF THE BEAUTIES—About two weeks ago a Negro belonging to Logan Harper in Carthage, Miss., arose in the night and killed his wife, by chopping off her head, after which he hung himself to a tree near the house. The reason for this horrible deed was that his wife, a beautiful quadroon, was obliged to submit to the sensual caprices of her master.

This is another of the beauties of the Southern Democratic Amalgamation party.

In this fight no quarter was given or asked. The language was bitter, the blows terrible. President Buchanan got a taste of both:

THE CURTAIN LIFTED—The President's message was delivered yesterday. . . . Mr. Buchanan boldly espouses the cause of fire eaters of Carolina and the highwaymen of Kansas. He flings the gauntlet in the face of the North, spits upon the land that bore him and upon seventy years of his own life, takes his party in the Free States by the throat and leaps with it into the ditch. Poor old man! that you should bring your gray hairs so low! Lies so portentous that they darken civilization, smite the humanity and blaspheme the Christianity of all ages! At least you might have spared the place of Washington this last humiliation. . . . Millions of freemen inspired by the common truth and stung by the general degredation shall rise to stay this giant and overmastering wrong.

But simultaneously with the tearing away of the props of slavery, which many cautious men still considered props of union, went constructive work, and Abraham Lincoln was THE TRIBUNE'S choice as the man to carry the work into the nation's councils. Steadily, on a big scale, and shrewdly THE TRIBUNE built up a body of opinion which in three years was to effect the nomination of Lincoln for the presidency. Here is a specimen of that valiant and candid propaganda, and it should be added that we were the first to print Lincoln's speeches in full:

MR. LINCOLN'S SPEECH—Elsewhere in today's paper, we publish entire the speech made by Hon. A. Lincoln at Springfield, in answer to the late effort of Senator Douglas. Our readers will give it the attentive perusal demanded by the importance of the subjects of which it treats, and the great reputation of the speaker. They will find it a calm, lucid, and convincing refutation of the assumed facts and the false logic contained in the senator's harangue. In it Mr. Lincoln has evidently spent more labor to be plain and clear than to be ornate and oratorical. That he has succeeded, we are sure our readers will admit.

We cannot neglect the opportunity to thank him for his vindication of the language and intent of the Declaration of Independence, now so frequently assailed by the politicians of the Pro-Slavery party. The part of the speech devoted to that vindication is in Mr. Lincoln's happiest vein; and if we knew him only by that we could not fail to declare that he is a clear headed, sound hearted, and eminently just man.

* * *

On Feb. 16, 1860, we came out with the celebrated two-thirds of a column editorial leader placing Lincoln before the people for the nomination. It bears the caption—

THE PRESIDENCY—ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

—and a third of it is given to a general survey of conditions which a successful candidate would have to meet. Then, in four numbered paragraphs, Mr. Lincoln's availabilities are presented. "We briefly sum up some of the elements of his popularity and strength" is the introduction to the paragraphs:

1st. A gentleman of unimpeachable purity of private life. His good name is not soiled by a single act, political, social, moral, or religious, that we or his friends need blush to own as his. In all his relations to his fellows he has not yet been guilty of that thing upon which an enemy can place his finger and say, "This is dishonest," or "This is mean." Herein he is the peer of the most unspotted man in the Republic—the living likeness, full-length size, of the best of the eminent characters who laid the foundation of the government.

2nd. A man of, at once, great breadth and great acuteness of intellect. Not learned, in a bookish sense, but master of great fundamental principles, and of that kind of ability which applies them to crises and events. The masterly canvass which he made with Douglas, and his later speeches in Ohio, mark him as one of the ablest political thinkers of his day.

3rd. Right on the record. An Old Line Whig of the Henry Clay school originally, he came early into the Republican movement, in which he has since been so conspicuous. He has that radicalism which a keen insight into the meaning of the anti-slavery conflict is sure to give; but, coupled with it, that constitutional conservatism to correct. Right on the question of Slavery, on the Homestead question, on all the issues which divide the parties: needing no tinkering to make him acceptable to Pennsylvania and New Jersey—candidate of the party which in itself is an embodiment of the principles and measures necessary for the perpetuity of the Union and the preservation of our free institutions—he would enter the field acceptable to the Opposition of all shades of opinion, harmonizing all interests, conciliating all jarring elements—the master of the position, a guarantor of success.

4th. A man of executive capacity. Never garrulous, never promising what he cannot perform, never doing anything for show or effect, laboriously attentive to details, industrious and conscientious, he would see to it that no want of promptness, attention, or industry on his part should defeat the reforms of the administration of national affairs which Republicanism is pledged to inaugurate.

In the great cause of the nomination Mr. Medill was active inside the office and out. Ten days after the nominating editorial found him behind the scenes in Washington and to THE TRIBUNE he sent back this report, which we printed, with the advice to "our friends" to "put it in their pipes and smoke it" (It is to be noted that we still carried in our title the word "Press"—record of one of our numerous absorptions of other papers. It was dropped in '61, having been added during the panic aftermath of '58):

Read, Republicans, Read!

Our Mr. Medill, who is in Washington, as the correspondent of THE PRESS AND TRIBUNE, writes in a private note as follows:

"Washington, Feb. 26, 1860.

"From the reports sent here by the Douglas men, some of our folks begin to fear that through disaffection among the Republicans the bogus Democrats will carry Chicago. The idea gives them cold chills. Senator Wilson says that the loss of Chicago at this crisis will endanger Connecticut, and do much to insure the nomination of Douglas at Charleston. At least thirty members of congress from other states have spoken to me about it. They say that for the cause and the great campaign the city must be saved.

"Wade, senator from Ohio, told me that the loss of Chicago would be the worst blow that the Republican party could now receive. He says he is ready to go there and stump every ward to save it. This is the general feeling. A national convention is soon coming off, and great things are expected of Chicago. She is the pet Republican city of the Union—the point from which radiate opinions which more or less influence six states. The city must be saved."

We ask our friends who are hanging back to put that letter in their pipes and smoke it. In the face of such direct and explicit testimony as to the vital importance of the contest, no man need hesitate what to do. Boys, up and at 'em.

"The boys" did "up and at 'em," for in three months came Lincoln's triumphant nomination, and with it a TRIBUNE "close-up" of the candidate which for justness and vividness is not excelled by many a Lincoln study of far later and calmer times and far greater pretensions. Phrases from it are reprinted here:

Stands six feet and four inches in his stockings.

In walking his gait, though firm, is never brisk. He steps slowly and deliberately, almost always with his head inclined forward and his hands clasped behind his back.

In dress by no means precise. Always clean, he is never fashionable; he is careless, but not slovenly.

In manner remarkably cordial, and, at the same time, simple. His politeness always sincere but never elaborate and oppressive. A warm shake of the hand and a warmer smile of recognition are his methods of greeting his friends.

Head sits well on his shoulders, but beyond that it defies description. It nearer resembles that of Clay than that of Webster, but is unlike either.

In his personal habits simple as a child. Loves a good dinner and eats with the appetite which goes with a great brain, but his food is plain and nutritious. Never drinks intoxicating liquors of any sort, not even a glass of wine. Not addicted to tobacco in any of its shapes. Never was accused of a licentious act in all his life. Never uses profane language.

A friend says that once, when in a towering rage in consequence of the efforts of certain parties to perpetrate a fraud on the state, he was heard to say, "They shan't do it, d—n 'em," but beyond an expression of this kind his bitterest feelings never carried.

Never gambles. Particularly cautious about incurring pecuniary obligations. We presume he owes no man a dollar. Never speculates. A regular attendant upon religious worship, and, though not a communicant, is a pew holder and liberal supporter of the Presbyterian church in Springfield to which Mrs. Lincoln belongs.

A scrupulous teller of the truth—too exact in his notions to suit the atmosphere of Washington as it now is.

If Mr. Lincoln is elected president . . . he will not be able to make as polite a bow as Frank Pierce.

The war burst. Sumter fell. On April 15, 1861, THE TRIBUNE printed its call to battle. It was a hundred per cent appeal—nay, command, and to this day it makes the pulse beat high:

Every Man's Duty—Read!

Lenity and forbearance have only nursed the Viper into life—the war has begun. It may not be the present duty of each one of us to enlist and march to the sound of a bugle and drum, but there is a duty, not less important, which is in the power of every man and woman in Chicago, and in the North, to perform—it is to be loyal in heart and word to the cause of the United States. From this hour let no Northern man or woman tolerate in his or her presence the utterance of one word of treason. Let expressed rebuke and contempt rest on every man weak enough to be anywhere else in this crisis than on the side of the country against treason—of Lincoln and Scott against Davis and Twiggs—of God against Baal. We say to the Tories and lick-spittles in this community, a patient and reluctant, but at last an outraged and maddened, people will no longer endure your hissing. You must keep your venom sealed or go down! There is a republic! The gates of Janus are open; the storm is on us. Let the cry be, THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON!

THE TRIBUNE'S course throughout the civil war may be said to have made it a great force, both in a material and a moral sense. It was energetic in the covering of events and it was passionately loyal. But even in the heat of conflict it could be decent. In the course of an appeal for comforts for the sick rebel prisoners herded in Camp Douglas, THE TRIBUNE said:

These men will be our countrymen again. The memory of this conflict will be effaced.

In plodding through the civil war volumes of THE TRIBUNE I came upon this curious item, the date Dec. 26, 1864:

The Opinion Nationale has made an ar-

CHEER UP.

In the midst of a calamity without parallel in the world's history, looking upon the ashes of thirty years' accumulation, the people of this once beautiful city have resolved that CHICAGO SHALL RISE AGAIN.

With woe on every hand, with death in many strange places, with two or three hundred millions of our hard-earned property swept away in a few hours, the hearts of our men and women are still brave, and they look into the future with undaunted hearts. As there has never been such a calamity, so has there never been such cheerful fortitude in the face of desolation and ruin.

Thanks to the blessed charity of the good people of the United States, we shall not suffer from hunger or nakedness in this trying time. Hundreds of train-loads of provisions are coming forward to us with all speed from every quarter, from Maine to Omaha. Some have already arrived—more will reach us before these words are printed. Three-fourths of our inhabited area is still saved. The water supply will be speedily renewed. Steam fire engines from a dozen neighboring cities have already arrived, and more are on their way. It seems impossible that any further progress should be made by the flames, or that any new fire should break out that would not be instantly extinguished.

Already contracts have been made for rebuilding some of the burned blocks, and the clearing away of the débris will begin today, if the heat is so far subdued that the charred material can be handled. Field, Leiter & Co. and John V. Farwell & Co. will recommence business today. The money and securities in all the banks are safe. The railroads are working with all their energies to bring us out of our affliction. The three hundred millions of capital invested in these roads is bound to see us through. They have been built with special reference to a great commercial mart of this place, and they cannot fail to sustain us. CHICAGO MUST RISE AGAIN.

We do not belittle the calamity that has befallen us. The world has probably never seen the like of it—certainly not since Moscow burned. But the forces of nature, no less than the forces of reason, require that the exchanges of a great region should be conducted here. Ten, twenty years may be required to reconstruct our fair city, but the capital to rebuild it fireproof will be forthcoming. The losses we have suffered must be borne; but the place, the time, and the men are here, to commence at the bottom and work up again; not at the bottom, neither, for we have credit in every land, and the experience of one upbuilding of Chicago to help us. Let us all cheer up, save what is yet left, and we shall come out right. The Christian world is coming to our relief. The worst is already over. In a few days more all the dangers will be past, and we can resume the battle of life with Christian faith and Western grit. Let us all cheer up!

FRAUGHT WITH A NATION'S GRIEF

find in any book-criticism of Emerson. Here are phrases from the report:

Mr. Emerson's manner has nothing engaging. With none of the elements of oratory in his delivery; without gesture even to a motion of the head, or modulation of the voice, or any marked emphasis in style, he simply talks right on, like a speaking statue, as if only thinking aloud for the accidental benefit of casual listeners. . . . The theme announced, "The Conduct of Life," is too philosophical a definition of the subject to convey to most minds the idea intended. It should have been, rather, the conducting or directing of the course of life. . . . Whoever listens to Mr. Emerson must think. . . . He presents the conclusion, and you may search for the premises. He gives you the natural number and you must find the logarithm. His addresses are like meteoric showers of thought.

Interesting, also, is it to know what Mr. Emerson thought of us. He had long talks with Grandsire W. B. Ogden of Chicago and with Dr. Boynton of Waukegan, and their story of our growth (including the detail of how Mr. Ogden had made a million dollars in a year out of city lots) left the philosopher dumfounded. He put it all down in his journal that night. But he saw something here that impressed him more than Ogden's million dollars did. Let what he saw make us humble:

When I see the waves of Lake Michigan toss in the bleak snowstorm, I see how small and inadequate the common poet is. But Tennyson, with his eagle over the sea, has shown his sufficiency.

When incomparable Fanny Kemble, niece of Sarah Siddons, idol of the eighteenth century London stage, read Shakespeare to grandsire and grandmamma the hall was desperately cold, and THE TRIBUNE was resentful. Praising the artist, it bawled out the janitor:

MRS. KEMBLE'S READINGS—It is rare to see a more entertaining conflict of Nature with Art, Imagination with Reality, Genius with its Surroundings, than that afforded by Mrs. Kemble's reading of the Midsummer Night's Dream, on a midwinter night. It seemed to us that we had never deliberately taken our seats, and kept them for two hours, in a colder place than Metropolitan hall that night; and yet so great was the spell of Mrs. Kemble's reading, that in spite of the weather, we seemed most of the time to be in the green woods, with the moonlight sleeping on the banks, sweet lovers with their quarrels and delicious forgivings and forgettings near us, and the warm air filled with songs of fairies, and spirits that haunt the summer night.

Mrs. Kemble is to read again tonight, and as we cannot trust to her genius to fill the room with midsummer heat, we would suggest that the person whose duty it is, see to it that Metropolitan hall be warmed by some other means. It showed a high appreciation of Mrs. Kemble's talent, to trust to her life-like presentation of a warm summer night, to take off the chill from the hall and prevent the audience freezing; but as the play is not a Midsummer Night's Dream next time, we suggest that the room be made comfortable by common fires.

Our antebellum dramatic criticism had at least the merit of candor—and is that not the vitals of any dramatic criticism? When beloved Burton came to act in "Toodles" THE TRIBUNE commended him to the town not only as an excellent actor but as "a gentleman and a scholar." But the supporting company! Ah, there was no pity sitting in the skies. Killing was advised. Attend:

OLD TOODLES—The inimitable Burton played Toodles last night in the presence of about an acre of Chicagoans. He as good as played it alone—his supporters being of more injury than assistance. In consequence of their utter failure to carry their respective parts, he was obliged to cut short much of this rich comedy.

Mrs. Toodles may have played her part well, but if she did no one knew it. She was exceedingly parsimonious of her sweet voice. The returned sailor split the years of the groundlings with his hoarse, gutteral noise. He should have been killed and carried off the stage in the first act. We would recommend him to drink a quart of oil to smooth his voice, and advise him not to take on so horribly. Upon the whole, would it not be better to give Burton a clear stage and let him play it alone? His present supporters simply tend to embarrass him and to lacerate his feelings.

Culture, however, did not come fast enough to satisfy this newspaper. Indeed, in some essentials life was scandalously inadequate for many a year. So late as 1871 THE TRIBUNE had to utter this editorial admonition:

Consider one thing: We are a city of nearly 350,000 people, and are absolutely without a public library worthy of the name.

Adding that there was not a place in town where a scholar could work with any degree of facility, the paper whacked away at the subject for a month, when the great fire gave it other matters to worry about. And about them it did not worry. It was manful and its motto was "RISE AGAIN." To be a brick in that bitter time was, perhaps, the greatest service THE TRIBUNE ever performed for this community. It never whimpered.

The two decades from our birth year to the period of the six years after the civil war and before the fire were neighborly days in the town and in our office. There was intense solicitude for the city and deep pride in the achievements and honors of its citizens. One morning in kindly old times we lead our news columns with this:

DOCTOR OF DIVINITY.—Hamilton college, New York, has conferred the degree of doctor of divinity upon Rev. R. W. Patterson, Pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church in this city.

That clergyman was the father of the R. W. Patterson who years afterwards was to become the paper's editor in chief. In the same year the vestry of Trinity church voted the rector a salary of $4,000 a year. He was the Rev. Mr. Schenck of Kenyon college, Ohio. THE TRIBUNE said the vestry had "acted with great liberality." Many a clergyman of today will agree with that opinion.

Often and often THE TRIBUNE was severe with Chicago, but nobody else could so much as look askance at it and go unreproved. Sixty-five years ago a newspaper correspondent from Boston made fun of grandmamma, her complexion, her front-stoop habit, and her parasol. THE TRIBUNE scolded, but reprinted:

CHICAGO LADIES—An impudent correspondent of the Boston Bee thus crayonizes the Chicago ladies. We advise him to keep his incog. a secret, or never show his face here again, the story telling scamp:

"Owing to the peculiarities of the water, the ladies generally wear a tallow candle complexion, which does not admit of rouge. They have their expensive dry goods and jewelry stores, and wear out costly silks and muslins by trailing them in the streets, as do the gentle creatures of New York. Crinoline is worn at all times, though difficult to manage on the heavy grade of the sidewalks. Like mules, they are sure footed, and get through the doughy mud of the streets with an agility at once surprising and amusing. They do not wear veils; the parasol handle sucking is carried on as at other places, with the exception that they bite the ivory off in minute

THIS unusual portrait of Abraham Lincoln shows him as he was in 1856 when, on his visits to our city, he used to come into The Chicago Tribune office at 53 Clark street, where the Olympic theater now stands, hoist his feet on Managing Editor Medill's desk, and discuss the questions of the hour, which were slavery and how to destroy it, and the Union and how to preserve it. The picture was taken at Princeton, Ill., July 4, 1856. Lincoln was orator of the day. After dinner at Dr. S. A. Paddock's home Mrs. Paddock asked Lincoln to have his picture taken, and they all went over to W. H. Masters' gallery. It was a hot day. "Is my hair all right?" Mr. Lincoln asked, then ran his fingers through it, and sat.

THE BLONDE MANIA—The light haired Empress of France has made blonde women as fashionable as hoop petticoats. The fairer a woman is, the nearer her proximity to the angels. Since the famous "tulip mania," there has been nothing like this rage for "white skins."

The opening of the Adams house, at which function "the enterprising and liberal proprietor, Hugh Maher, Esq., was toasted," opened up a new field for Chicago working women in the late fifties, for THE TRIBUNE said:

. . . and what is a new feature in Chicago hotels, the tables were waited on by a score or more of fine looking girls, instead of the masculine sex. . . . This house cannot fail of success, located as it is, immediately opposite a depot [pronounced "deppo" in those days] from which more travellers are daily landed from the cars than upon any other spot on the globe.

We were equally cordial when it was a new church that was to be opened, and we hoped to see "a perfect jam" when the Methodists announced the dedication of their new edifice on Des Plaines street between Van Buren and Harrison streets. The Rev. W. Tasker was pastor and we gave him the right hand of fellowship thus:

DESPLAINES STREET CHURCH — We call special attention to the notice below and hope to see a perfect jam in the new church edifice. This building is located in a portion of the city demanding Christian labor. The society is small and newly gathered. If our brethren design to carry forward church extension let them show it by being on hand. It is a neat and commodious edifice. Come, all hands, and look in!

But, then as now, nobody loved the gas company, and THE TRIBUNE asked pointed questions:

WHY IS IT?—We learn that the gas manufactured by the Chicago Gas company last year is valued at $168,800; that an average of one hundred men are daily in its employ at the aggregate yearly wages of $30,000; and we are doomed to walk home through dark streets at midnight, and even now as we write in the office at 8 in the evening, by an improved gas burner, a good old fashioned candle or oil lamp could entirely eclipse every gas light in the room. Our monthly gas bill is paid also, and our tax settled. Why have we no light?

When, as he put it, "items were dull," young Editor Medill, fresh from the less hectic Cleveland, did not worry. He simply said:

CORRESPONDENTS—We surrender pretty much all our local space to correspondents. Items were "dull" yesterday, with a downward tendency, and we fill up with communications as a substitute.

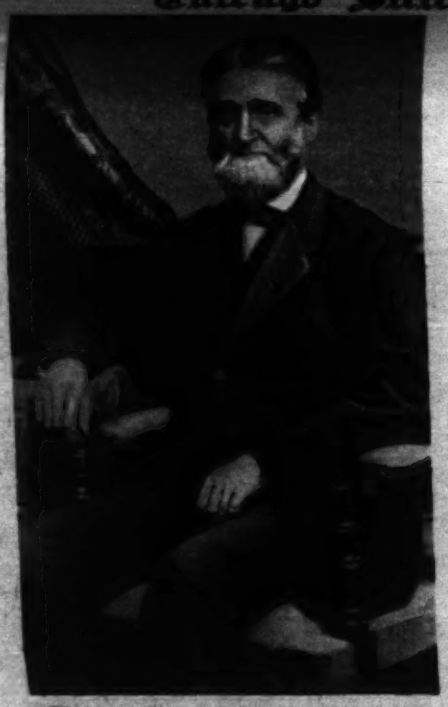
And when matter from the correspondents was not under his hand he printed a tasty little snake story from the afternoon papers, for even when he became the chief of a great metropolitan daily he liked a quaint "item":

A SNAKE WITHIN A POTATO—The Journal of yesterday says "that Mr. Charles E. Day of the North Side showed us a boiled potato which, on being opened, was found to contain a small snake over two inches long. It is an ugly looking thing. The 'development' took place at the dinner table."

Or something like this which dates back nearly seventy years:

INDIA-RUBBER balloons, inflated with burning gas and beautifully colored with a variety of tints, are the latest invention in the toy line. They are beautiful playthings from which the youngsters may learn not a little needful philosophy. Ideson & Co., of the great India-Rubber warehouse, 80 South Water street, sent us a specimen out of their large and curious stock.

In fact, in those days, before the civil war put a premium on promptitude in news presentation, THE TRIBUNE, like all its local contemporaries, serenely scissored and pasted from the New York papers, and was very grateful when McNally, the newsdealer, or his rival, Burke, got the latest New York papers to it early in the evening so that there was plenty of time to chop them up for next morning's issue. It was wonderful time when McNally or Burke,



FOR twenty-three years Wilbur F. Storey, proprietor of the Chicago Times, was Joseph Medill's great rival in the field of Chicago journalism. Storey was born in Salisbury, Vt., Dec. 19, 1818. Early in life he fared west and, having cleaned up $50,000 with the Detroit Free Press, he came to Chicago in 1861 and bought the Times from Cyrus H. McCormick. Storey was brilliant, tireless, and pitiless, and he did things that make the yellow journalism of today seem conservative. During the civil war his paper was for a few days suppressed by Gen. Burnside because it was "a copperhead sheet." That act helped to make its fortune, for it brought notoriety.

here, delivered the papers at THE TRIBUNE office forty hours after they had left the presses in New York. Today it is done in half the time, but we thought McNally and Burke were wonders, and we used to fire their souls with ambition by putting their records into the paper. For example, this appeared on a Thursday:

McNALLY had the New York papers of Tuesday at 6 o'clock last evening. He also has the Ladies' Journal for July.

And this on a Wednesday:

QUICK TIME—McNally and Burke tread close upon each other's heels. Mc brought us Monday's New York papers last evening about 5 o'clock and Burke followed in, three minutes thereafter, with his arms full of the same. Go it, 63 Clark street!

And this on the next day:

BURKE AHEAD—At 5 o'clock precisely Burke left on our table the New York papers of Tuesday, and in a few minutes thereafter we had the same favor from McNally. Go it, Mc!

But we could not endure the thought of this fevered pace for long, and we sighed "Fast enough" when we recorded the fact that merchandise which had left New York on the 25th of the month had reached Chicago on the 30th. Here is the record:

"FAST ENOUGH"—The Merchants Despatch Fast Freight Line delivered yesterday (30th) to Chicago consignees merchandise which was in packers' hands in New York City on the 25th inst.

The office is No. 24 Dearborn street. Freight from New York and Boston, $1.60 per 100 lbs., delivered at American Express Co.'s Depot, foot of South Water street.

The style of THE TRIBUNE in its first two decades was notably rich in commas and capitals. Such close punctuation is now never encountered, nor does the absence of it make for confusion; rather for clearness. The writing was savory. The editors loved phrases like "putting the saddle on the right horse," "bored with a bigger auger" (used in contrasting a man of exceptional mind with one of average mind), "the milk in the cocoanut," and suchlike homely metaphors that long since have become stale. The city lockup was called "the Watch House" (with capitals), and for "sunstroke" the reporter said "coup de soleil." In wartime THE TRIBUNE called the South "Secessia"—when it did not call it something much less melodious—and a newly coined war word of 1862 was "skedaddle." In an editorial leader of March 4, '62, we find it described as new, and it was applied to the precipitate flight

IN the issue of The Tribune of April 11, 1865, was printed the story of Chicago's jubilation over the civil war's end on the 9th. Column 9 of that historic first page carried this laconic advertisement:

"Dry goods at peace prices at John V. Farwell & Co.'s, wholesale dealers, 42, 44, and 46 Wabash avenue."

It did not take them so long to get back to normalcy in those days. Either that, or Mr. Farwell was not a profiteer.

of the Tennessee legislature from Nashville when that body heard of the fall of Fort Donelson.

As the war drew nearer the tone of the paper changes. The quaintness that was almost rusticity begins to disappear. Questions that were to tear the republic asunder were becoming very pressing and the editors and your grandfathers had more important things to think about than current facetiae

CHARLES TOBEY

• 1856 - 1922 •

The Tobey brothers, each with a thousand dollars borrowed from a relative who believed in them, founded America's most favorably known furniture house.

Their Puritan industry and honesty justified the faith of their relative and the thousands who have purchased from them.

The Tobey store has grown, furniture fashions have changed, the second and third generations direct the business, but Tobey principles remain the same as in 1856.

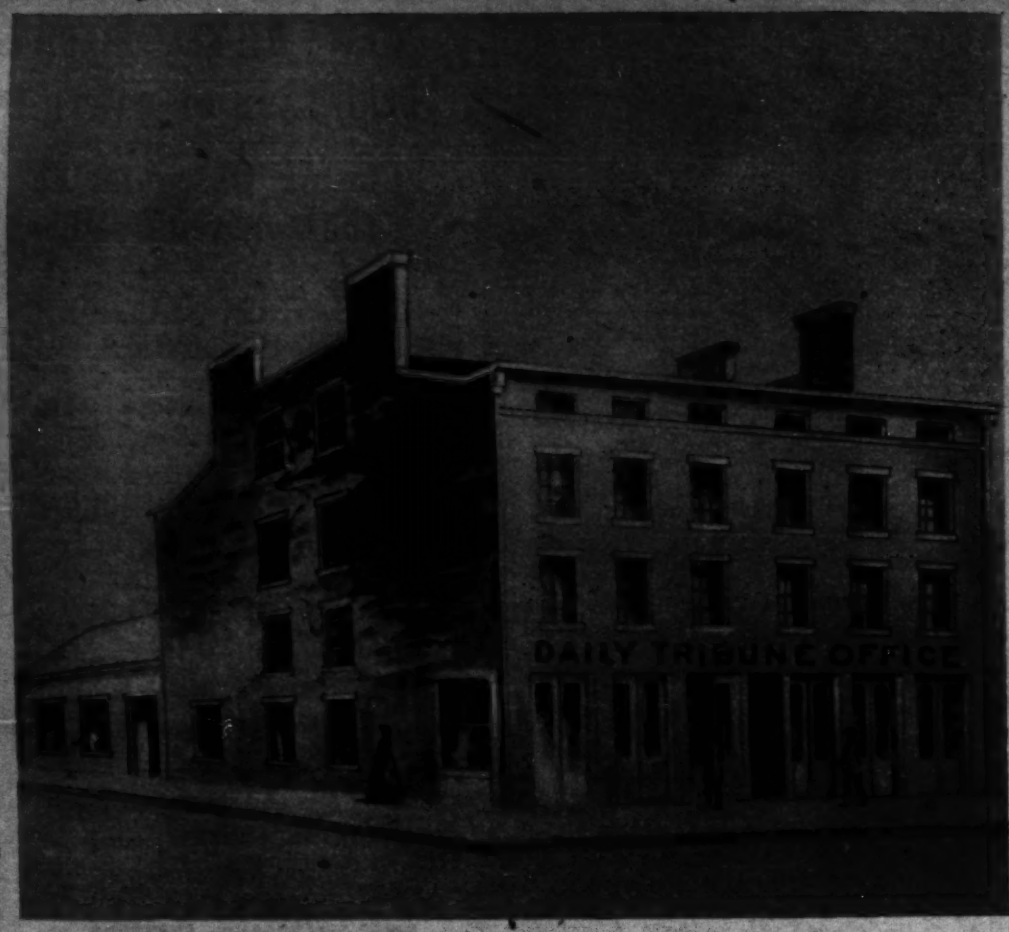
1847: A DIAMOND JUBILEE RETROSPECT: 1



(1.)—Here we started—seventy-five years ago yesterday—in a single room on the third floor. The population of Chicago was then 16,000, and we were in what was the center of affairs, for Lake street was the important business thoroughfare. The presiding genius of the new venture, and the only one of the several founders who long stuck to it, was Thomas A. Stewart. A doughty man he, with convictions out of which he would not be bluffed. Once when he printed in The Tribune the sensible suggestion that Capt. Bigelow, head of the government marine bureau here, ought to use his craft to help commercial shipping into harbor, the captain replied by challenging the editor to a duel. Mr. Stewart promptly put the challenge in the paper as a prime piece of news. The duel never came off. It was laughed to death.

Our first building was on the southwest corner of Lake and La Salle streets, two blocks from the present Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern university. Thence we were driven by fire on May 22, 1849.

(2.)—So in 1849 we moved, but without bettering ourselves. The new office was one room over Gray's grocery store at the northwest corner of Lake and Clark streets, and "Deacon" Bross, one of our bosses in our early days, has left a record that the building was only "an old wooden shanty" and our existence "precarious." In short, we were struggling, and "Long John" Wentworth's Democrat was the newspaper colossus of the community. We stayed at Lake and Clark about a year, moving then to the Masonic building at 173 Lake street.

(5.)—But luck and peace of mind were not long with us. For in '71 came the great fire and it ate up our marble model and forced us to miss Monday's and Tuesday's editions, Oct. 9 and 10. But that cannot happen again, we think, because now we maintain presses in two different parts of Chicago. The great fire left us looking as above. Very early on the Monday morning of the fire's progress Horace White, then our editor in chief, discovered that "the conflagration was one of unusual magnitude," as he put it, and so he got out of bed. His purpose, as Prof. Elias Colbert, then a Tribune reporter, once dryly said, was "to go to The Tribune office and write an editorial advising everybody to build absolutely fire-proof edifices like The Tribune building." Mr. White did just that, but the editorial was never printed. In a few hours our beautiful new building, with its roof warranted to withstand a temperature of 300 degrees, was in ruins. Meanwhile, Joseph Medill was out hustling to find new quarters. He found them in an old printery at 15 Canal street, and there was written the immortal "Cheer Up" editorial which appeared in the issue of Wednesday, Oct. 11, with its heartening refrain, "Chicago shall rise again" and "Chicago must rise again," and its thanks to "the blessed charity of the good people of the United States."

(4.)—By 1869 our changes of location as well as our "precariousness" were about over, for it was then that we installed ourselves in our own building, a four story structure of Joliet limestone—looked like marble—at Dearborn and Madison streets, where our present skyscraper stands. It was considered a model newspaper plant and was supposed to be fireproof. It cost $225,000.

(10.)—Joseph Medill, founder of the greatness of this newspaper, made two mem ical ideals. One was Benjamin Franklin; the other, Abraham Lincoln, with whom he memorated in the statue which he presented to the city two years before his death.
Joseph Medill started his career as a lawyer, but when he came under the spell of the the law, as he once put it, "lingered a little while to reclaim the recusant, but he had t never returned."

spell of the old country printing office in Coshocton, O., out he had tasted the delight of Franklin's nectar and he

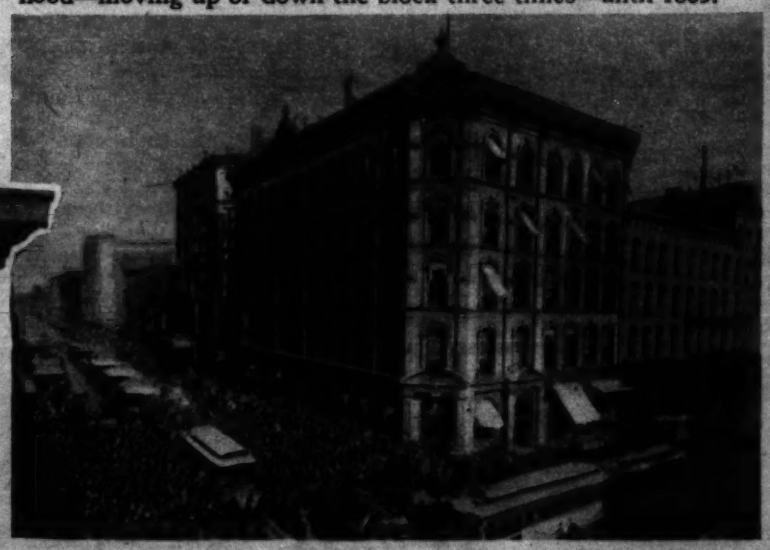
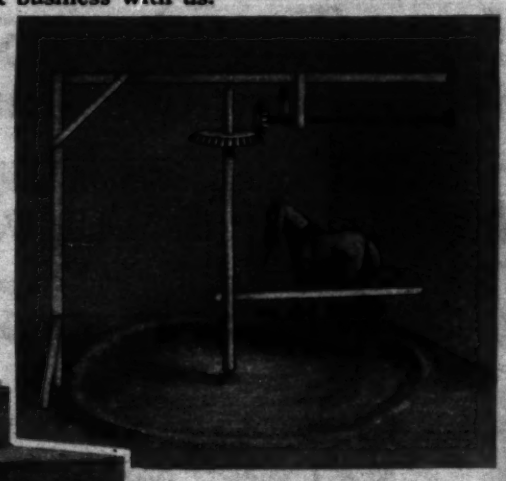
(3.)—In 1852 we moved into the Evans block at 53 Clark street. It was on the east side of the street, and just south of the alley, between Lake and Randolph streets, where the Ashland block now stands. Our neighbors in the Evans block were the post-office—by heck!—and Mellen, the news agent. We were upstairs—business office and all. Our circulation in the early '50s was more than 1,200, and we printed it in plain figures at the head of the editorial columns. We stayed in this Clark street neighborhood—moving up or down the block three times—until 1869.



(6.)—But within a year—to be exact, on the first anniversary of the fire—the ruins of the four story model had been replaced with a better building of five stories, and of Lake Superior brownstone. It cost $250,000, and we had to be content with it until 1901, when it was scrapped to make room for the skyscraper where you now transact business with us.



(9.)—Step back a minute now into 1850 and meet our old friend, the blind, black Canadian pony, which, when we were at 173 Lake street, provided the power that ran the old Adams press that printed our 1,100 circulation. "Deacon" Bross said it was a good, faithful pony. Seems as if it ought some day to be commemorated in Tribune architecture.

(7.)—In 1902, when we were 55 years old, came the completion of the present seventeen story Tribune skyscraper at Dearborn and Madison streets, an Italianate structure of Bedford stone, gray brick and terra cotta. Holabird & Roche designed it. All believed it would serve The Tribune's purposes for many a decade, but hardly a decade and a half had passed before it became apparent that the tremendous mechanical equipment required by our recent growth demanded more elbow room than could be provided in the heart of the world's fifth city—or is it fourth since Berlin got that setback?

(8.)—So we started building again, this time a great mechanical plant for the manufacturing of a newspaper. The first section of that structure on the new boulevard link is finished, and it contains a city room as big as a drill hall. Here you have a glimpse of it, with the soldiers just in from the firing lines of news and preparing their copy. Meanwhile the counting room and a large part of the business staff of The Tribune remain true to our old site at Dearborn and Madison streets.

DES PLAINES HEIGHTS.
COMPARE

this location with any other suburb around Chicago; also other suburb offers as many advantages as does Des Plaines Heights.

It is located northwest of Chicago, in the direct path of the city's greatest growth; 38 minutes' ride on the Northwestern railroad to the loop; 32 trains a day. Two fine boulevards to the loop.

The largest of the Forest Preserves and the beautiful Des Plaines River is directly across from Des Plaines Heights. Two fine grade schools and a large high school offer you all the advantages of the city plus a beautiful environment, where you may have fresh air and a quiet home after a day of strife in the city.

One of the largest and most reliable Chicago firms will offer a few desirable building lots 50 and 60 ft. wide, with sewer, water, electricity and gas in, as low as $425 and will sell these at exceptionally easy terms.

If you are planning on a future homesite or an investment you owe it to yourself to see Des Plaines Heights.

A very courteous representative is at your service. All we ask is to show you. You will not be asked to buy unless you want to.

We will also arrange to build for a few responsible parties.

If you answer this ad you may be assured you will not be obligated in any way. Address Y O 54. Tribune.

7 Bargains
AT THE Peerless Motor Car Co.
OF ILLINOIS.

PEERLESS SEDAN LIMOUSINE, 1920. A beautiful 7 passenger inclosed car that can be used either as a Limousine or a Sedan. Would make an ideal car for either private or livery work. It is coming into our hands in exceptionally fine condition. The paint, which is a Dark Maroon, is in very good condition. Mechanically it will go out and give many miles of very satisfactory service. It is equipped with an excellent set of Cord tires, 1 extra, motometer, windshield cleaner, in fact everything that goes to make a complete and well equipped car. If you are looking for a high grade car that is above the average in condition, this car will surely meet with your requirements. We are offering it at a price that is way below the market value and would suggest that you see this car immediately if you are interested in the purchase of an unsurpassed value in a Peerless car. Special for this sale, $1,250.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, VICTORIA COUPE. This is a very late 1919 model Coupe of the double Fisher series. It has been turned in to us on one of our new Peerless enclosed cars. The paint, which is a standard Cadillac Blue is exceptionally fine. The velour upholstery also is exceptionally fine. We treat The Equipment consists of an excellent set of Goodyear Cord tires, Westinghouse Shock Absorbers, motometer, clock and other extras. Mechanically this car will bear most critical examination and demonstration. The few thousand miles it has run on it since having tended only to make this automobile run very smoothly and quietly. If you are interested in securing a late model Cadillac that has not had the average use, this car will surely please you. It is an automobile that must be seen to be appreciated. Special for this sale, $1,600.

PEERLESS CHUMMY ROADSTER, 1920. This is our standard 4 passenger 4 door Chummy Roadster. It is equipped with an excellent set of Cord tires, one extra, bumper, motometer, clock and other extras. This car will appeal to the lover of a fast, snappy Sport Car that will go out and perform and give thousands of miles of satisfactory service. We offer this car at a price that is in keeping with our special Used Car Sale, and we know a car of this type in the condition that this one is in is a bargain seldom offered. If you are interested in a Peerless 4 passenger Chummy car that will carry our standard warranty and one that we believe to be in almost new car condition, this car will meet with your approval. We are offering it way below the market and would suggest your immediate action. Special for this sale, $1,250.

FRANKLIN DEMI-COUPE, 1921. This is a light Franklin and is suitable for city or country use, in most excellent condition throughout. It is a car that has been owned and driven by a lady and has only 5,000 miles. It has a set of Goodyear Cord tires which show practically no wear; and one spare; new Cord tires on order. This very well equipped, with a bumper front and rear, stop signal, rear fender, vision mirror, motometer, horn, motometer, windshield cleaner and other extras. This particular car would be ideal for salesman or doctor. It is light and economical and one that is ready to go in service for many thousands of miles without constantly needing attention. Rarely do we find offered on the market a car of the Franklin car as fine as this one. It cannot be classed as the ordinary used automobile. Act quickly if you would avail yourself of what we believe one of the best bargains that we have ever offered. Special for this sale, $1,000.

PEERLESS TOURING, 1920. This is our standard 7 passenger Touring car and for this opening sale of Used Cars, we are offering it at very attractive price. It is a car that you can hardly distinguish from new. It is painted a beautiful Peerless Blue with Venetian nickel trimmings and all bright parts have been revisted. The car is equipped with an excellent set of Cord tires, one extra, clock, bumper, etc. The motor runs as smoothly and quietly as a car of this high grade type should and it will carry our standard warranty. Here is a car that will meet with the requirements of the most exacting both in appearance and performance. In point of service, it is worth many times what we are asking for it and we believe that it will be sold to the first person who looks at it. If you are interested in a Peerless touring car of a late model, your immediate action will be necessary. Special for this sale, $1,500.

CAB, 1920. This is the standard cab that is manufactured by the Yellow Cab Mfg. Company and has given thousands and thousands of miles of private use and careful driving. It has never been in taxicab service and for that reason it is a car that is above the average in condition. It is painted a Dark Green with black running gear and there is not a mark or a blemish on it anywhere. It has much extra equipment, such as headlights, spotlight, motometer, generator and other things which, if you were to duplicate, would cost a nice deal of money. There are 4 practically new Royal cord tires, with 1 extra. We do not believe that there is another car of this description available in this city and at the price we are offering it, it represents an exceptional saving as compared with the price of a new one today. To duplicate this car would cost very close to $3,200. A car of this type will appeal to any one who is figuring on owning and driving their own car, and in that kind of service it will pay for itself very quickly. It is ready for many thousands of miles of continuous service, and if interested suggest immediate inspection. Special for this sale, $1,750.

OAKLAND SEDAN, 1921. This light economical 5 passenger Sedan is practically a new automobile. Speedometer reading, which we believe to be accurate, is but less than 3,000 miles. It is painted a beautiful shade of Dustproof Gray and there is not even a blemish on it anywhere. It is equipped with an excellent set of Goodyear cord tires, one extra, 5 wire wheels, heater, etc. Mechanically it is exceptionally fine. We are very fortunate in being able to offer this very late model Sedan and know that any one looking at this car can readily tell that it has had unusual care and very little driving. We are offering it at a price that represents an exceptional saving as compared with the price of a new one today and is considerably under the market value for a car of this type. For this sale only, $750.

"REBUILT"

They do not mean merely "shined up" "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission, and rear axle, measuring or testing parts to determine wear, replacing worn parts with new, rebuilding, adjusting, tuning in, repairing body, refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt car satisfies the eyes as a new car, and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every "Rebuilt" Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in A1 mechanical condition. If anything turns up unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes Co. will make good without cost to purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage.

We do not ask our customers to pay exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy from us on a Paige Rebuilt car on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.

2 DETROIT
ELECTRIC
BARGAINS
Latest model double drive Detroit Electric. This is a roomy five passenger car which will seat seven. Has the same appearance but a few thousand miles by the original owner and being kept in the best of condition by him, it can hardly be termed a used car. Since it has been in our hands we have put it through our factory and have installed a new Special 42 cell battery, new cord tires, refinished it a standard Detroit Blue, and will guarantee and service this handsome car the same as a new one. We consider this today's best value at only $1,950.
This very speedy single drive Detroit Electric is an unusual car. Handsome to look at, easy to drive, giving long mileage and exceptional speed, is a real bargain for some one. Completely inspected and adjusted, equipped with 42 cell battery, cord tires, wire wheels, bumper, etc. If you are looking for a real serviceable car, this one should appeal to you at only $985.
